FRANCE in the year 1794, when a reign of terror swept its borders, has been used for this Walter Wanger production as the background of a rousing cloak-and-dagger film. The picture may not be the final word for historical accuracy, but as entertainment it is compounded of action and intrigue and flavored with romance. The cast is headed by Robert Cummings, Arlene Dahl, Richard Hart and Richard Basehart.

The story centers on the efforts of Charles D'Aubigny, played by Cummings, to frustrate a scheme of Robespierre (Basehart) to become dictator of France. The plot hinges on a small black book of Robespierre's, containing a list of the names of people to be executed when he ascends to power. By obtaining this book, and releasing its contents, Robespierre can be smashed politically, and that is just what Cummings sets out to do. In the course of his efforts he is thrown into danger dozens of times. There are many wild chases, shootings and fights. Aiding Cummings in his mission is pretty Miss Dahl who also happens to be the head of an anti-Robespierre underground movement.

Anthony Mann's direction keeps the action moving fluidly from beginning to the very end in which the guillotine comes down on Robespierre's tyrannical head. The film was produced by William Cameron Menzies, from a screenplay and story by Philip Yordan and Aeneas MacKenzie. Edward Lasker was associate producer.

Running time, 89 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, not set.

"Frontier Investigator"

(Republic)

ANOTHER in the Western series featuring Allan (Rocky) Lane, "Frontier Investigator" is set in the usual pattern with a generous amount of gunplay and galloping.

The hero, out to find the murderer of his brother, runs into a battle between two stage lines for a mail contract. After a few killings on both sides, Lane suspects that there is a third party creating animosity between the two lines, this third party being the murderer of his brother. Lane goes after the suspect and after gathering enough evidence, and being himself suspected of murder, he winds up the whole affair by shooting the villain and clearing himself. Lane, Eddy Waller, Roy Barcroft and Gail Davis play their parts in the accustomed manner. Gordon Kay was associate producer and Fred C. Brannon directed.

Running time, 60 minutes. General audience classification. For May release.

use of television trailers, not merely the regular theatre trailer reduced to 16mm, but a trailer prepared especially for television use," Sulivan said, pointing out that the board of directors of TOA has concurred unanimously in the television committee's conclusions.

"We realize that it is not probable that anyone in the motion picture industry will perfect now the kind of trailers which will eventually be used on television to attract patrons. However, we urge that experimentation begin.

Theatre Men Ready

"Producers should do this at the national level, and theatres should advertise at local levels.

"We believe that theatre men of the country are ready to use television trailers when they are available.

"There should be several trailers made for every picture, some of 30 seconds duration, some of 1½ minutes duration, and perhaps on outstanding features—of 2½ minutes duration. Whether this is the final answer can only be determined by use. This much we know, one trailer cannot be used too long, as it becomes boresome. Also spot television trailers, like the 'saturation' plan which local movies (theatres) use in radio can be very effective.

"We especially urge that a start be made to provide our industry with the needed emphasis in this advertising medium to increase box-office receipts for our entire industry," Sullivan concluded.

membership meeting of May 3 to take a strike vote." Meanwhile, Federal Mediator L. A. Stone has requested another session next Monday with the companies and SPG to further discuss the controversy.

At a press interview at SPG headquarters here yesterday, Len Goldsmith, business agent, estimated that picketing at some 11 of Loew's theatres here during the past two weeks has cost the company $80,000 in lost admissions.

A Loew's official, reached for comment, denied the accuracy of the figure but had no printable comment to make.

Picket Palace Today

Goldsmith said there would be mass picketing at RKO's Palace today at noon when the house inaugurates its new vaudeville policy. Goldsmith also disclosed that SPG has received offers of help from several outside unions. He further announced that the union would file unfair labor charges with the NLRB against the companies "for firings and attempts to intimidate" SPG members.

In the telegram to company presidents, SPG declared that a general membership meeting has unanimously adopted a resolution stating "we reject unconditionally industry proposals that we accept a lowering of working standards, eliminate job security, forego wage increases and eliminate arbitration of grievances, thereby bringing chaos to our industry by forcing us to take strike action on every unsettled grievance." The resolution stated further that "we will not and can not tolerate any more stallings on the part of the producers. Meanwhile, we will expand and extend our picketing of Loew's theatres. . . ."

Reviews

"Roll, Thunder, Roll"

(Eagle-Lion)

THE Red Ryder series continues with this one—done in Cinecolor—to measure up to average. The action is here in good measure with gun fights and fisticuffs aplenty.

The story concerns various ranches being raided, cattle stolen and houses burned. Evidence points to El Conejo, a Robin Hood-like character, played by I. Stanford Jolley, who actually is being framed by the gang responsible for the raids. Red Ryder, played by Jim Bannon, is supported by Buckskin and Little Beaver, portrayed by Emmett Lynn and Don Kay (Little Brown Jug) Reynolds, respectively. Finally, the leader of the gang and his henchmen go to jail and Red Ryder is ready for new adventures.

Jerry Thomas produced and Lewis D. Collins directed. Paul Franklin wrote the original screenplay which was based on the "Red Ryder" comic strip characters. Others in the cast are Marin Sais, Nancy Gates, Glenn Strange, Lee Morgan and Lane Bradford.

Running time, 58 minutes. General classification. Release date, April 27.

"Dedee"

(Vog Film Co.)

WITH considerable adroitness, French film makers here tell the story of a war-tossed cabaret hostess of the Antwerp waterfront. The picture is bold in content and has the kind of visual realism that is the hallmark of many French films.

"Dedee" is the girl of the title, and her life is one that is crowded with sordidness and exploited by unscrupulous men. Hope finally lights up for her when she meets an Italian sailor and they fall in love. Since she proposes to leave her lover, with whom she lives in a little room above the waterfront place where she works, he shoots the girl's new admirer. In turn, the killer dies under the wheels of a car. There are many scenes in this highly dramatic and often squalid picture which should never have been permitted to reach the screen. Some of them—as might the whole theme—will undoubtedly arouse considerable protest and condemnation in their frankness and are wholly unnecessary to a proper telling of the story.

Magnificently acted by Bernard Blier and Simone Signoret as well as Marcel Pagliero, this Sacha Gordine production is a work of art, but hardly one designed to capture the understanding or appreciation of an American audience which will be unable to grasp the moral degeneration of post-war Europe on the waterfront of one of its great ports.

Running time, 90 minutes. Adult audience classification. For May release.

Details of the new agreement were not disclosed pending final action by the NATKE this weekend. Should the union recommend acceptance thereafter, the CEA general council in turn will consider the new scales but ratification by it under such circumstances is a foregone conclusion.

The new agreement again averts a threatened tie-up of the entire British industry as studio unions had been asked to take sympathetic action in the event theatre employes struck.

Ascap, Telecasters

able in principle to an arrangement which would allow continued television use of the Society's music for a limited time to determine its workability.

This new turn of events seemed extremely remote 10 days ago when, after months of negotiations, Ascap and a special committee of the National Association of Broadcasters finally called a halt to meetings which appeared fruitless.

New meetings began here on Monday with Fred Ahlert, president, and other Ascap representatives, and a group of five radio-video executives, comprising: Mark Woods, president of American Broadcasting; Mortimer Loewi, director of the DuMont network; Theodore Striebert, Mutual Broadcasting board chairman; Charles R. Denny, National Broadcasting executive vice-president, and Joseph Ream, Columbia Broadcasting executive vice-president.

Participating at another session this week were video account executives of various advertising agencies.

Following the meeting with the telecasters yesterday a special meeting of the Ascap board was held and reportedly approved the new terms.

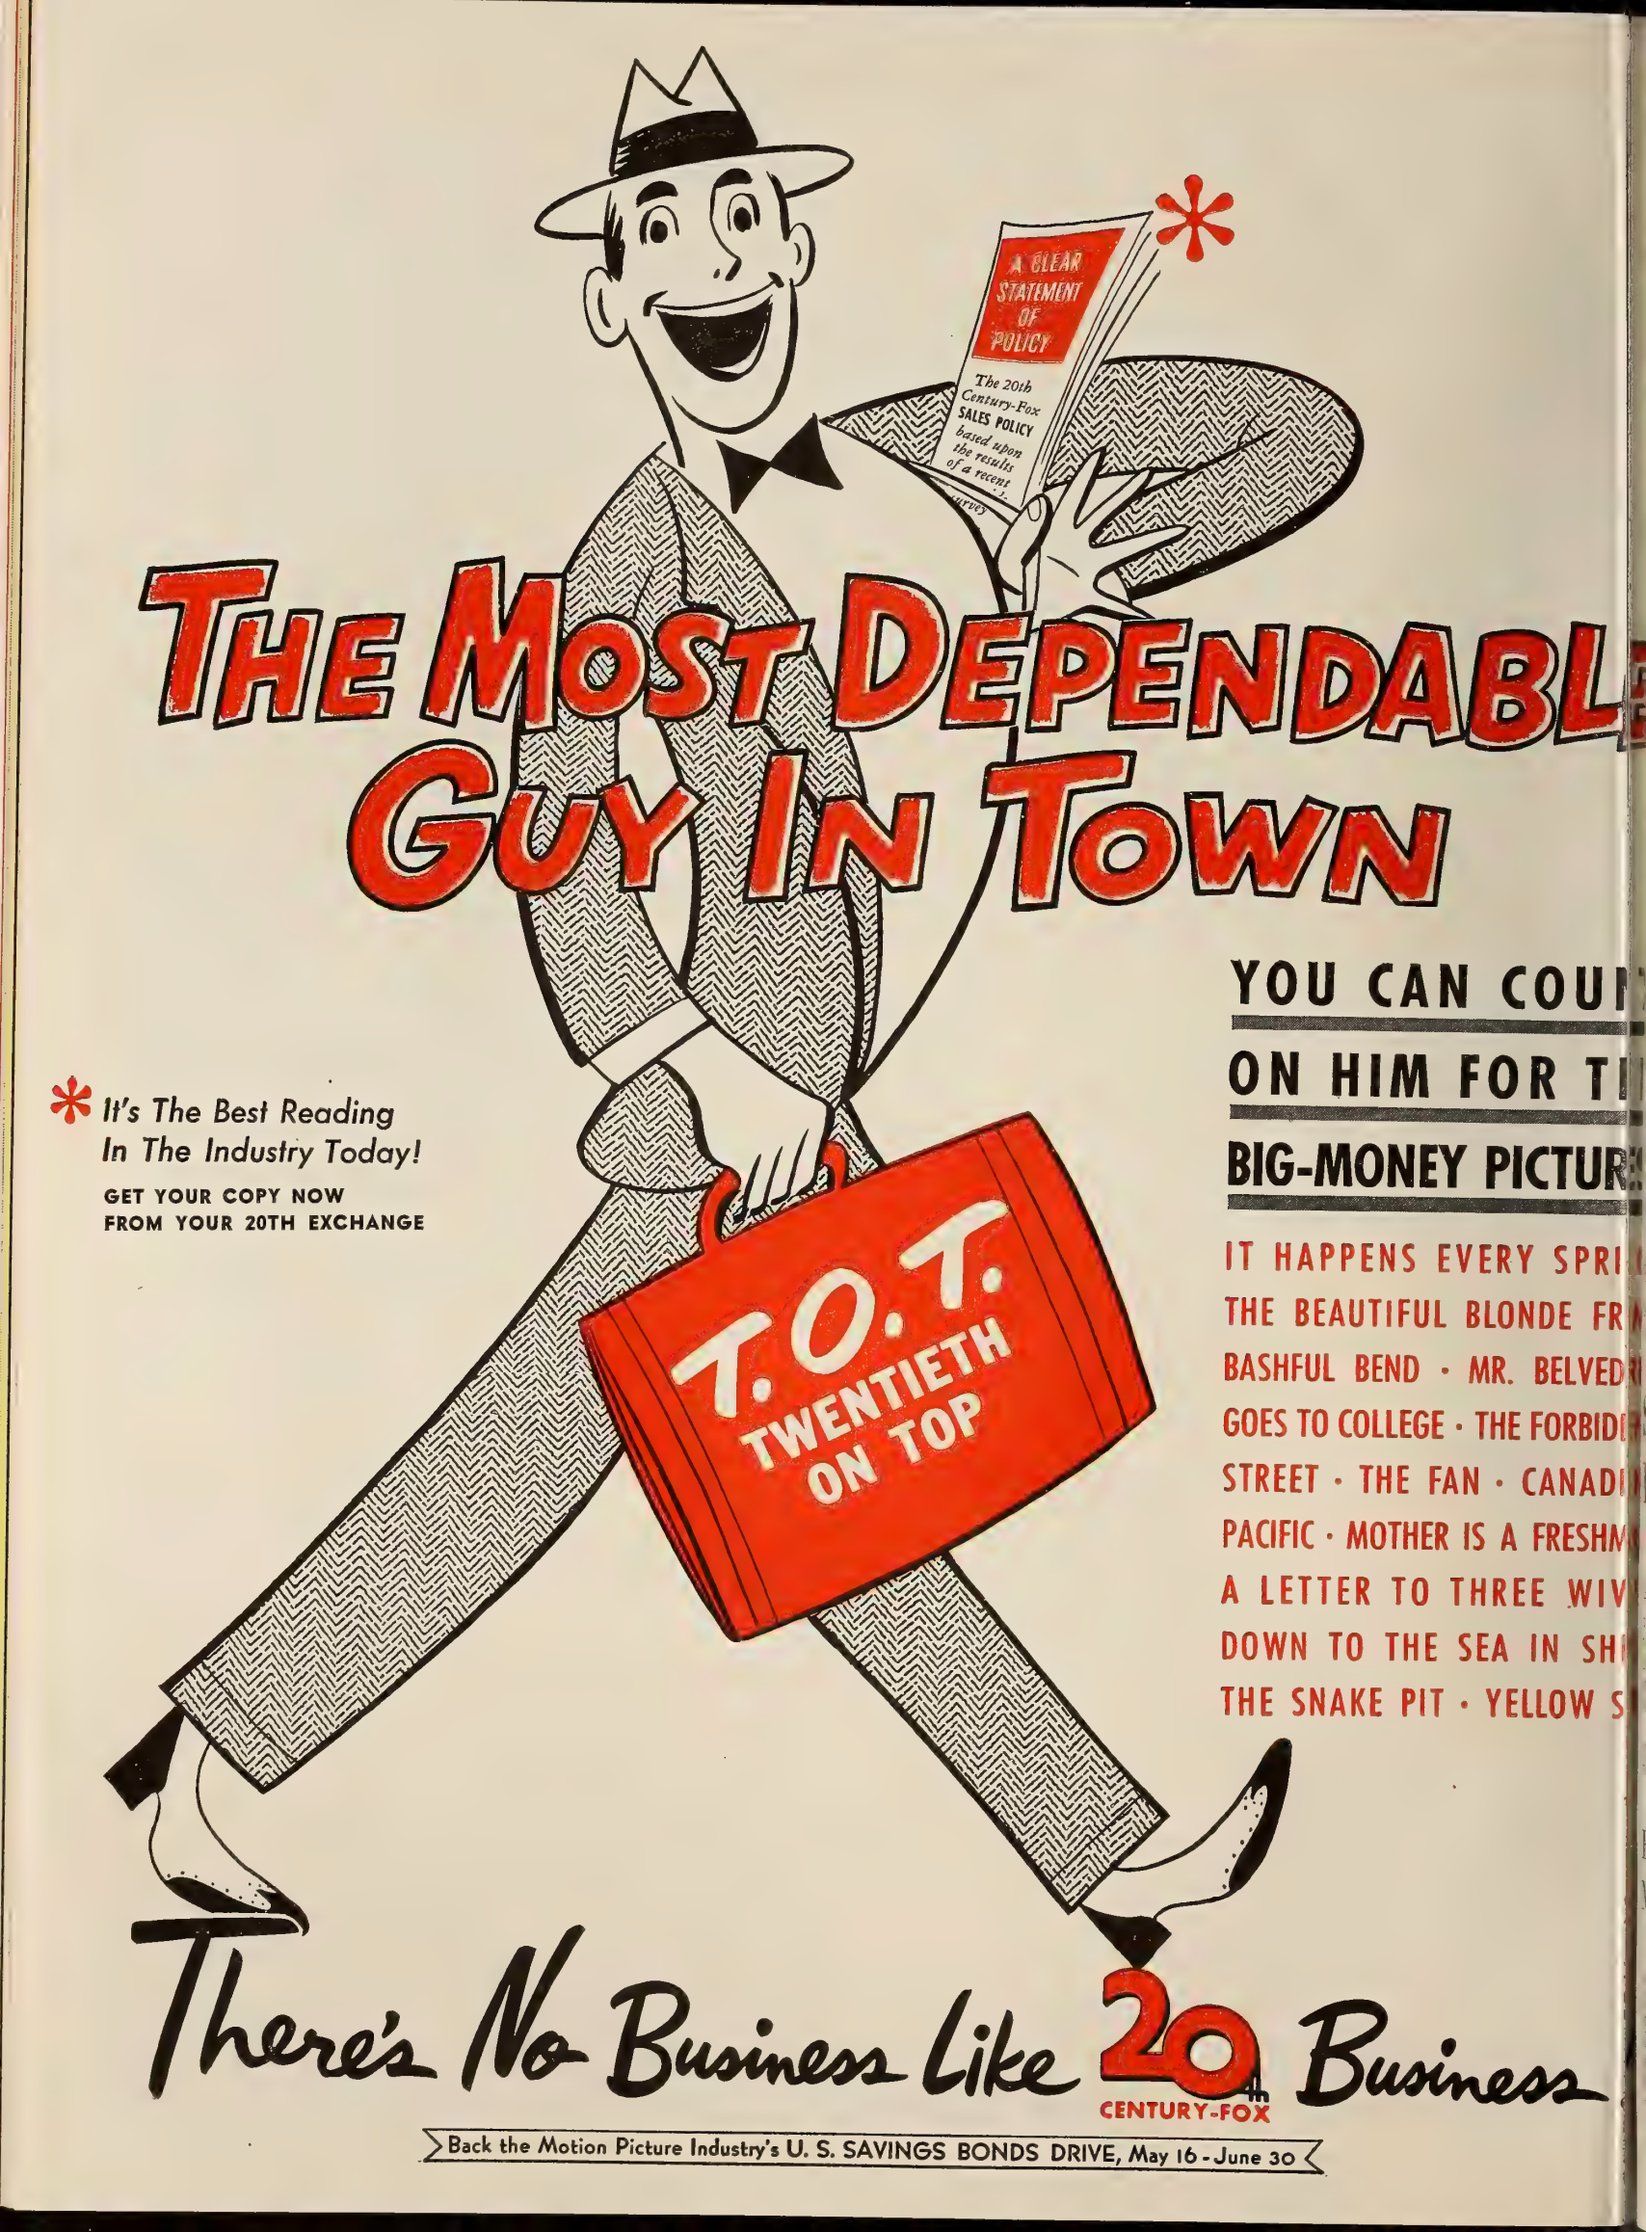
releases a week. Consequently, Tobin said, there has been a considerable increase of the reel's circulation in theatres throughout the country. Virtually every newsreel house in the U. S. now uses Telenews, Tobin reported.



Telenews, which now gets out eight editions a week, "turns out more news per week than any other newsreel in the world," Tobin asserted. Besides the two weekly 800-foot theatrical reels, it gets out for television five daily reels, plus one weekly roundup. The newsreels are used by the entire CBS network, plus two-thirds of the cities having independent stations. On occasion, Telenews also gets out short subjects on special events.

In its coverage, Telenews attempts to get special stories so that generally there is no duplication with the other newsreels, Tobin declared.

Canada Film Exports Show Drop in Value

OTTAWA, May 18.—The Canadian Government's External Trade Branch reports a sharp drop in value of exports of films, declining to $166,000 in March, compared with $301,000 in March a year ago. Exports in the first three months ended in March dropped to $587,000, against $929,000 last year in the same period.

The report points out that exports in the last complete pre-war year of 1938 was $960,000.

Continue Study of Small Bid for E-L

Conferences continued here yesterday among principals who will make the decision as to whether control of Eagle-Lion will be sold to independent producer Edward Small, and under what terms and conditions. Conferees included Robert R. Young, principal stockholder of Pathe Industries, E-L parent company; Serge Semenenko, Boston banker financing Pathe-E-L, and William C. MacMillan, E-L operations vice-president. It is understood that C. W. Sharpe, Pathe Industries treasurer, also participated in yesterday's talks.

Several plans under discussion, any one of which transfer of E-L control to Small might be accomplished, were drafted at last weekend's conferences on the Coast between small and Semenenko, MacMillan and others representing Pathe.

Berger Wants Conciliation

MINNEAPOLIS, May 19.—North Central Allied president Ben Berger may "approve in principle" the so-called Al Lichtman-Andy Smith 20th-Fox sales plan if the two company executives accept Berger's plans to extend the Smith-Berger conciliation idea on a national scale, and give "proper" consideration to suggested selling changes and other trade practices, it is understood here.

Berger would not discuss the matter but in his annual report he will tie in film rentals with conciliation, making the two inseparable. He will take the position in his report that if conciliation is not set up on a national scale, the industry will continue a "dog-eat-dog" policy. This is taken here to mean that if Berger is not supported in his conciliation idea, any change in sales policy will be rejected.

It is reported Berger will suggest to Lichtman and Smith that "any new American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and the television networks took another step toward settlement of their differences on a music licensing contract at a meeting here yesterday. While considerable progress was reported since the new video negotiators took over last Monday, there seemed to be some doubt of a full agreement by June 1, when present gratis pacts expire and consequently the deadline has been extended to June 15.

Current meetings will be continued, with both sides optimistic that an accord will be reached.

By RED KANN

TWENTIETH-FOX's three-month financial statement is viewed generally as a strong one. Net earnings rose from $2,926,842 in the same period last year to $3,017,736, or an increase of $90,894. On its own, that's encouraging news.

Perhaps more arresting is that which the figures on income reveal. Film rentals and theatre receipts, always combined in the company's statement, rose from $40,316,174 in the first quarter of '48 to $43,490,969. A hefty gain of $3,174,795.

To some who attended the ITOA forum at which peace between the New York exhibitor association and 20th-Fox broke out, one of the interesting developments was the care with which Al Lichtman explained he held a one-year contract only with the company.

That isn't how the deal was described when it was recorded with the SEC. The terms on record call for a five-year ticket at $60,000 the first year and $35,000 each year thereafter. His active duties are to improve methods of distribution. Once done, he will serve in an advisory capacity on distribution.

It is understood Lichtman calculates the active phase will consume about a year. Thereafter, he will be available on the advisory, or quieter side.

American revenue may be frozen in important overseas markets, but it is not frozen to a point where it has to remain idle. An obvious procedure is production in those countries, using blocked money to make pictures which finally will show up in domestic distribution and pay off in hard American dollars. It's a form of economic relief which throws a brighter light on the problem facing all companies under existing international film restrictions.

The most expansive of steps in this direction belongs to 20th-Fox, which has coming up Tyrone Power in "The Prince of Foxes," made with Italian lira in Rome; Cary Grant and Ann Sheridan in "I Was a Male War Bride," produced with English pounds, French francs and German marks on the Continent; and "The Black Rose," now under way in England and North Africa with the aid of British currency.

The K.R.S., which represents British distribution, and the C.E.A., which represents British exhibition, are aroused officially over appearance in Britain of two early films starring Betty Grable and Cornel Wilde. The Grable is a compilation of RKO shorts about ten years old; the Wilde, a feature which he never completed. The position is the stars will not benefit nor will the public which might be misled into believing the attractions were freshly-made; that, consequently, bookings should be discouraged.

There is merit in this and the probability is Grable and Wilde, and their current producers, are being well served.

Why don't the British go further in the interest of their own films here? The old James Masons that have been dusted off and turned loose on unsuspecting audiences don't help the star, British pictures, American box-offices or the public's temper.

Debate on the very tentative agreement designed to relieve the Anglo-American situation continues and probably will run on without abatement. It's a fruity topic for discussion, analysis and theory.

The two salient points are the proposal that 100 American-made "A" attractions be guaranteed playing time by the three principal British circuits and the quid pro quo clause under which the American companies would guarantee to underwrite British production based on her earnings here, plus.

The first, to be excessively brief about it, is knotty because no one knows how the 100 pictures would be split up among the American distributors and what, exactly, constitutes an "A." The second, viewed widely as nothing less than a subsidy, in many quarters is regarded as reaching beyond Britain and suggesting a pattern for international application wherever foreign pressure may be turned on.

Those familiar with the Eric Johnston-James Mulvey negotiations which resulted in elimination of the Britain's 75 per cent ad valorem tax are wondering what happened to the determination made then and never changed during those meetings, not to guarantee Britain a return on her films in this market.

Reports of Decline Over-Rated: Richey

CHICAGO, May 19.—Henderson M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, set out today to dispel some misconceptions of the film industry in the public mind, in an address before the Federation of Women's Clubs at a meeting here.

For one thing, he said, "all the hue and cry" about the motion picture business being on the downgrade, are "greatly exaggerated." Good pictures still are breaking even war-time records, the industry is gradually ridding itself of war inflated inventories, theatre owners are still making very good profits, and attendance levels are off only about seven per cent from the peak year, he added.

Richey answered any public expectation of seeing new pictures on television by pointing out that "it would be a very short-sighted producer who, after spending up to $3,000,000 on a production and depending on established theatres to return that revenue and a profit, would sell it for the limited amount which the average advertiser could afford to pay for the rights to his production on television, at least until its theatrical possibilities have been exhausted."

Wilcox Sails Today; Film Deals In Work

British producer Herbert Wilcox and actress Anna Neagle (Mrs. Wilcox) will leave New York today for England aboard the S.S. Queen Mary after nearly a month's visit in the U. S., including two weeks in Hollywood.

Wilcox said here yesterday that negotiations with distributors are still in progress looking to distribution in this country of the producer's "Courtney's of Curzon Street," "Spring in Park Lane" and "Maytime in Mayfair." New York attorney William Feitelson will represent Wilcox in continuing negotiations following the latter's departure, the producer said.

Crosby, Bergman Top Magazine Star Poll

Bing Crosby and Ingrid Bergman head the list of stars chosen in the annual readers' poll conducted by the Woman's Home Companion, the magazine reported here yesterday. Gregory Peck, who placed second on the male list, is the only one of eight top favorites who has been on the screen less than 10 years.

Miss Bergman took top place among actresses for the third straight year, Irene Dunne was second, followed by Bette Davis and Greer Garson. Cary Grant and Clark Gable took third and fourth places among the men.

Feature Production Slated by RKO Pathe

For the first time in many years, RKO Pathe, producers of short subjects, will soon make a feature here. It was said that the as yet untitled picture will be a crime story, and that Phil Reisman, Jr., will write the script, and Jay Bonafield will produce. RKO Radio, which releases monthly the "This Is America" shorts produced at Pathe here, will release the forthcoming feature, it is understood.

A series of features may ensue at RKO Pathe here, it was said.

(Columbia)

PROSPECT of sudden riches transforms men into crazed killers in this robust outdoor adventure yarn which presents Ida Lupino and Glenn Ford as a pair of very unscrupulous, unsympathetic residents of the Old West, both with a thirst for hidden gold.

The picture is a good Western, erring somewhat in a rather heavy-handed attempt to give its characters some depth, but on the basis of engaging story developments and attractive names, its market groove seems to extend well beyond the usual Western outlets.

"Lust for Gold" is reminiscent of "Sierra Madre" in theme but lacking in the masterful touches which made the latter production memorable entertainment. Here again is the fabulous gold mine which brings the savage instincts of its seekers to the fore.

Story is present-day at the beginning and end but for the most part takes place back in the 1870's in Arizona where Ford takes possession of the bonanza, after killing three men, and thereafter fights off others bent on sharing his wealth. Among the latter is Miss Lupino who wins his affections in a heartless scheme and subsequently kills her husband, Gig Young, in a desperate attempt to hold Ford after he discovers her motives. Ironically, both are killed in an earthquake in the mine in the heart of a huge mountain.

The picture opens as William Prince, Ford's grandson, takes on the search for the gold mine which is located near Phoenix. The story of Ford and Miss Lupino thereupon is told with the grandson offering off-screen narration in parts. Following this it reverts to the present where mysterious murders still are occurring. The film's highpoint is the climax, one likely to give even the blase onlooker the horrors. This has the grandson and a lunatic killer in a battle atop the mountain, staged with maximum effect.

S. Sylvan Simon produced and directed from a screenplay by Ted Sherdeman and Richard English. Earl McEvoy was associate producer. Barry Storm's book, "Thunder Gods Gold," was the original source. The cast also includes Edgar Buchanan, Will Geer, Paul Ford, Jay Silverheels, Eddy Waller and Will Wright.

Running time, 90 minutes. General audience classification. For June release.

Stall 'Champion' Suit Pending Settlement

HOLLYWOOD, May 19.—RKO's suit against Screen Plays asking $500,000 damages and an injunction against the exhibition of "Champion" on the contention that certain sequences in the film duplicates sequences in "Set Up" was put over until June 7 today by Federal Judge Pierson Hall, after RKO attorney Guy Knupp stipulated to withdraw the plea for an injunction.

Knupp and SP counsel Harold Fendler told the jurist, who yesterday viewed the sequences in dispute and gave the contenders until this noon to reach an amicable settlement, that they believe an agreement on the differences can be reached out of court.

$348,000 Bonds Sold At Rivoli Premiere

First of more than 100 "Bond Premieres" to be held during the Treasury's current "Opportunity Savings Bond Drive," accounted for the sale of more than $348,000 in E-Bonds by the Rivoli Theatre, New York, at the premiere this week of Universal-International's "One Woman's Story," according to Maurice A. Bergman, chairman of the motion picture industry drive committee. Bergman declared that the job done by Montague Salmon, managing director of the Rivoli and his associates, is evidence of what can be done with bond premieres in theatres throughout the country.

The five-week dispute between the New York and Brooklyn Paramount Theatres and IATSE projectionists local No. 306 over the discharge of Brooklyn Paramount boothmen has been settled to the satisfaction of both parties, Herman Gelber, president of 306, reported yesterday. The controversy was marked by continuous picketing of the New York Paramount Theatre as well as the Brooklyn house. The New York picketing ended Wednesday, and that in Brooklyn is expected to terminate officially today.

Settlement terms were promulgated by "IA" international president Richard F. Walsh, who was asked by the local to mediate the dispute. It is understood that they involve transfer to another theatre of at least one of the discharged employes around whom the dispute revolved.

Palace Vaudeville

unbilled surprise by bringing on Milton Berle who introduced celebrities, including Pat Rooney, and then sounded a roll call of famous old vaudevillians present who were Palace headliners in the halcyon days.

When the doors opened at 10 A.M. there were already more people waiting in line than the theatre could accommodate. As befits the enterprising Borough of Brooklyn, it had one of its younger sons first in line. He was Steve Parker, 17, who took up his wait at two A.M.

The theatre was completely renovated for the occasion at a reported cost of $60,000. Under the new policy it will have four stage shows daily plus a film feature. On the screen yesterday was 20th Century-Fox's outdoor action thriller, "Canadian Pacific."

Needs $17,000 Weekly

The Palace needs a gross of $17,000 for the week to break even. The shows cost approximately $4,000 plus another $3,000 for back stage hands and orchestra. Rental on the house is close to $6,000 per week with film rental and promotion adding up to the break point of $17,000. Box-office is scaled at 55 cents to $1.20.

When the curtain went up and the electrically-operated signs at the side of the stage announced the first act, the audience broke into thunderous hand-clapping. The eight acts were received with applause, applause and more applause.

Mage and Karr, a ballroom tap dancing team was the opening act. They were followed by The Chords, two men giving their impressions of various band leaders. Next in order of appearance were Norman Evans, an English comedy star; The Marvellos, two men and a girl in a musical act interspersed with magic; Cook and Brown, two men in a knockabout comedy and dance routine; Jerry Wayne, the crooner; Lorraine Rognan, a comedienne; Dolinoff and the Raya Sisters, three girls and a man in an unusual doll-dance routine.

Berle Cites Schwartz

When Berle came on, he let loose a volley of gags, introduced his 72-year-old mother, and invoked the spirit of such greats as Sarah Bernhardt and W. C. Fields. Berle also cited Sol Schwartz, vice-president and general manager of RKO Theatres, for his "vision" in bringing back vaudeville.

Outside the theatre, Screen Publicists Guild representatives picketed with some difficulty because of the denseness of the milling crowds. SPG is protesting the breakdown of contract negotiations with the distributors.

Asked if RKO would extend the vaudeville policy to other houses, Schwartz replied that "the public, by its reception, will determine that." It is understood that various craft unions granted concessions to permit RKO to restore vaudeville to the theatre. Schwartz praised their cooperation.

The promotional campaign that surrounded the inauguration was tremendous. On radio, television and in the newspapers, the event was widely hailed and publicized. Harry Mandel, national director of advertising, exploitation and publicity of RKO Theatres; and John Cassidy, general press representative for metropolitan houses, geared the promotion.

It was a gala occasion. The audience was wowed. Everybody was happy over the prodigal's return.

issued by 20th-Fox president Spyros P. Skouras, and also praised Andy W. Smith, Jr., the company's sales vice-president, recounting Smith's championing of better public relations in the industry. He particularly cited Smith's efforts in behalf of conciliation.

Connett's statement followed an address by Sam Shain, director of exhibitor and public relations for 20th-Fox, who told the assemblage that his company always intends to transact business with the exhibitor in the manner in which the exhibitor prefers and in the tradition of 20th Century-Fox, which has always stood for fair and square dealing. Shain read the Skouras statement of policy. Gael Sullivan, TOA executive director, also addressed the meeting, on a four-point problem program of the industry, namely: television, 16mm. film trailers and a declining box-office. He urged exhibitors to devote themselves to public service and take greater personal and active interest in their community affairs.

Other officers elected in addition to Kirby were O. G. Abernathy, Morilton, vice-president, and Jack Bomar, Little Rock, secretary-treasurer. The board, headed by Savage, consists of Sidney Wharton, Henry Haven, Terry Axley, W. C. Sumpter, W. D. Mitchell, L. G. Renfro, Jr., and Herod Jimerson.

Leon J. Bamberger, RKO Radio, urged exhibitors to intensify their exploitation of lesser pictures as well as bigger ones.

Another feature of the convention was the presentation by Paramount of sample films televised at the Paramount Theatre, New York, to indicate how its process is used.

tion of the Empire Theatre, Newark, a last-run house, the complaint states. Plaintiffs charge that Empire was forced to dissolve because the theatre could not get product from the defendant companies which, it is further alleged, discriminated against the house and operated a fixed system of run and clearances.

Empire states in its complaint that it leased the theatre for a five-year period with an option to re-lease for another five years. Damages asked are based, it is stated, on estimations of what the theatre would have earned had not dissolution taken place. Filing counsel was the New York legal firm of Rogge, Fabricant, Gordon and Goldman.

Vaudeville for St. James

Vaudeville has returned to another one-time citadel, Walter Reade's St. James at Asbury Park, N. J., which has inaugurated a six-act, four-a-day variety show in conjunction with its film program. Reade theatres in Long Branch and Perth Amboy in New Jersey and in Kingston and Saratoga Springs in New York have been using vaudeville successfully, it was reported.

Balaban said that the regularity of "live" shows at the Chicago will depend on the nature of important sports and other events appearing in Chicago and elsewhere. He revealed that B. and K. is negotiating for televising the Wolcott-Charles heavyweight bout in June. He predicted that television would eventually find its way into the circuit's key outlying houses, the Uptown, Tivoli and Marbro, but not employing equipment of such elaborate installation as tele-transcription.

He has withheld comment on the sales policy announced last week by 20th-Fox president Spyros P. day. The deal had been worked out by attorneys during the past fortnight which would provide for Fabian and Bernhard taking over complete ownership and operation of Film Classics subject to its indebtedness to Cinecolor, said to be approximately $2,000,000, representing sums advanced by the latter to FC for operational purposes and as guarantor for bank loans.

Bernhard recently resigned the presidency of Cinecolor but still has a large stock interest. Fabian is believed to be representing the group which at one time gave evidence of a desire to acquire United Artists. Completion of the present deal would require the approval of Cinecolor stockholders, whose next meeting has not been scheduled.

RKO's Net Profit

1947, after taxes and all other charges (including profit of $4,528,655 on the sale of capital assets, and losses on investments in productions and in foreign subsidiaries aggregating $4,692,435), equivalent to approximately $1.30 per share on 3,899,914 shares of common outstanding.

In its anual report, with respect to the $3,357,370 write-off for losses on investments in productions, stories and continuities, the company's statement to stockholders said that "the RKO Radio board authorized the write-off by a direct charge to profit and loss as of December 31, 1948, of the costs of certain stories and continuities aggregating $1,045,693 not contemplated for use in production," the statement continued. "Ordinarily, items of this nature are charged to studio overhead (and thus allocated to the cost of pictures produced during the year) but, subsequent to a change in studio management" (purchase of the company by Howard Hughes), "and as incident thereto, the write-off was effected by a direct charge to profit and loss. Nearly all of the above amount would have been included in inventories of productions at December 31, 1948, had the usual accounting procedure of the company been followed," it was said.

The company in 1948 had a gross income of $109,995,921, of which $105,768,019 came from theatre admissions and film rentals and sales, and $4,227,901 was received from rents and other income. From this, some $29,128,066 was charged to amortization of film costs and expenses, $28,228,687 to royalties and participations, and $47,015,528 to operating and general expenses. Earned surplus as of last December 31 totaled $21,682,181.

The company's statement disclosed current assets of $63,946,377, against current liabilities of $10,803,921, a ratio of more than six-to-one. On December 31, RKO had $17,458,658 in cash, $12,144,754 in U. S. Government securities, and production inventories of $25,762,686. Capital assets were listed at $37,295,816, and total assets at $108,273,768.

Quit Combines To Get Wider Film Variety

Independents Also Seek Shorter Clearances

MINNEAPOLIS, May 22.—A desire of many independent theatre owners for earlier runs and a wider variety of product is held by observers here to be the cause of the sudden breaking away of smaller independents from some film buying and booking combines in this territory.

Several independents are pulling out preparatory to demanding shortened clearance from distributors. Others have cancelled or intend to cancel their affiliations with combines due to the latter's refusal to buy the product of a distributor for all houses in the combine because of their inability to

Directorial Award Goes to Mankiewicz

HOLLYWOOD, May 22.—Screen Directors Guild tonight presented its first annual award for directorial achievement to Joseph L. Mankiewicz, for "Letter to Three Wives," at a dinner at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel. The award, which is in the form of a silver medallion, was voted by the membership from four nominees who had won quarterly awards during the year. Other contenders were Howard Hawks, Fred Zinneman and Anatole Litvak.

Honor guests were Louis B. Mayer, Darryl F. Zanuck and George Bagnall.

Film Salesmen Plan Aug. Pay Hike Bid

A bid for a general wage increase will be made by the country's 1,000-odd film salesmen in August when their union, the Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen of America, will move to open industry-wide contract negotiations. Present contract with the distributors, the union's first, will expire in October.

This was reported here at the weekend by David Beznor, Colosseum attorney, who said it was still too early to indicate how much of an increase will be sought. Beznor, who makes his headquarters in Milwaukee, returned there at the weekend after a two-day visit here.

Bond Drive Subject Good Screen Fare

"The Spirit of '49," the one-reel subject starring Jack Benny, with Rochester, which is being distributed by Universal-International as part of the industry's cooperation with the U. S. Treasury's current savings bond drive, is solid entertainment well worth its 12 minutes running time on anybody's screen.

Borrowing from Benny's radio program his popular characterization of himself as a man of miserly habits, the subject begins with a visit to Benny's well-protected vault where he displays a golden railroad spike to Rochester and relates its story. Benny depicts his ancestor who closed up a dry goods emporium in Waukegan, Ill., to join the California gold rush of 1849. His overland journey Westward is made impressive with the aid of scenes from "The Covered Wagon,"

Heavier Fines for Trust Violators

Washington, May 22. — House Small Business Committee Chairman Patman said he would introduce in the near future a bill to raise fines for violating the anti-trust laws from $5,000 to $50,000 and to give the government power to sue violators for treble damages. At present, only private citizens can sue for treble damages.

The bill when introduced will go to the House Judiciary Committee, which is planning an over-all study of the anti-trust laws. Justice Department officials have indorsed both higher fines and government treble damage powers.

Berger Claims Litigation Costs Boost Film Rentals

MINNEAPOLIS, May 22.—North Central Allied's annual convention will open here tomorrow at the Hotel Nicollet, and during the course of its two-day schedule delegates and national Allied guests will hear NCA president Ben Berger charge that "exorbitant" film costs are caused mainly by "the millions being drained off box-office income to meet the unlawful acts of distributors," it is understood.

Berger will tie up his attack on film rentals and the cost of attorney fees with a plea for continuance of the Smith-Berger conciliations plan, and its extension on a national basis. He will also urge independent exhibitors to police the Supreme Court decision in the Paramount case and to report violations of the decree to local exhibitor associations.

Stanley Kane, NCA executive counsel, will stress the achievement of the legislative members of the group in defeating every proposed anti-film measure introduced in this spring's sessions of the legislatures in Minnesota and North and South Dakota. He is also expected to report an improvement in the unit's financial condition, announce the addition of new members and the return of others who pre-

Tradewise...

By SHERWIN KANE

A NUMBER of industry executives who have given careful study to the suggestions advanced by the Anglo-American Film Council are still wondering whether the plan, solely from a practical approach, offers the American industry anything at all.

The suggestions that the British Film Producers Association work for a lower quota, increased dollar remittances to the U. S. and liberalized unremittable sterling uses in Britain cannot be assayed practically, some executives contend. They are suggestions that the BFPA take a particular stand with respect to those subjects. There is nothing to assure that anything beneficial to the American industry will result therefrom. The decision rests with the British government.

It is being pointed out in some quarters, too, that should the American industry become party to an agreement embodying those suggestions it would, in effect, constitute a recognition of the quota which could undermine the current opposition of the American government thereto and which might force it to retreat from the position it has taken.

For practical purposes, the suggestion that the three major British circuits show a minimum of 100 American "A" features annually is meaningless, some executives claim.

The three circuits can accommodate 156 "A" features annually.

Under Britain's 40 per cent quota, effective next October 1, the three circuits could play 94 American "A" features. Thus, ostensibly, agreement on the Anglo-American Council's suggestion would be a concession amounting to six American "A" features per year.

However, it is being pointed out that British producers will not and can not furnish 56 "A" pictures annually, not to mention the 62 "A" features for which the quota would reserve playing time. It is claimed, therefore, that the 100-picture guaranty offers the American industry nothing.

On that subject, too, British industry attorneys express the opinion that an agreement by the three circuits in question to play any specific number of American pictures would be illegal under British law.

Apart from the practical considerations, it is, of course, conceded that the value of the suggestions may reside in the extent to which they succeed in placating leaders of the British industry and in restoring amicable business relationships between the two industries. Presumably, that is the spirit in which the suggestions were offered and the latter aim surely should be a fundamental one for both sides of the Anglo-American Film Council.

The question then arises are the suggestions as drafted the only ones or the best ones likely to achieve that result?

To answer that, attention is turned to what the American industry would be expected to give.

Elimination of the unit playing program in Britain has little opposition from the standpoint of the contribution it would make to improved relations between the two industries. It is a well known fact that it has rankled the British leaders no end and that there is little hope of sweetening their opinions of us while it remains in effect.

The guaranty of an American subsidy payable to British producers annually on an ascending scale is not objected to by most on the basis of cost. The $4,000,000 and upward likely to be involved annually would impose no burden on the American industry.

However, quite a few responsible American executives are opposed to the idea of a subsidy on principle, as a precedent and because of doubts as to its propriety in the conduct of their business.

As a precedent, some are convinced that it is an extremely dangerous procedure, one that would invite demands for similar concessions from virtually every other market around the world and which, if denied to them, would be followed by new penalties imposed upon American films abroad. As for a business procedure, the question has been raised whether American stockholders would view favorably the application of their companies' funds to the financing of competitors.

There are those who believe that amity can be purchased on more acceptable terms.

Review

"One Woman's Story"

(Rank—Universal-International)

A SUPERB emotional performance by Ann Todd, and production quality that ranks with some of Hollywood's best are the distinguishing features of "One Woman's Story," produced in Britain by Ronald Neame under the aegis of J. Arthur Rank's Cineguild Productions.

Directed by David Lean, who previously was teamed with Neame in the making of "Brief Encounter," this latest of Universal-International's Rank imports recites, as did the former picture, the story of a married woman whose heart belongs to another man even though she feels a deep kindness and respect for her spouse. But the resemblance between the two films stops at that generalized comparison. Where "Brief Encounter probed into character and emotional forces, "One Woman's Story" merely emotes. However, no disparagement of the latter is intended in noting this; it stands among the better British pictures that have reached these shores. For marquee purposes there are also the names of Claude Rains and Trevor Howard, and, although none of the three lead names is exactly heavyweight by American commercial standards, each counts for no small attraction. The film has some good exploitation possibilities which, if adroitly utilized, can be made to pay off.

Based on a novel by H. G. Wells, Eric Ambler's screenplay creates circumstances that bring into contact at various intervals during a decade-and-a-half young biology professor Howard and Miss Todd, wife of oldish international banker Rains. The picture opens in the Swiss Alps where the two lovers meet by chance on vacation after a separation of many years. Rains has not yet arrived at the resort. Miss Todd reviews with the aid of flashbacks the history of this emotional triangle which offered her the alternatives of young, vibrant love and the security and luxury of her marriage. She chose the latter when crucial moments arrived. Finally, the chance and harmless vacation meeting infuriates the heretofore understanding Rains into filing for divorce. Near-tragedy marks the finale. Direction, acting and photography are all first rate and tower above what turns out to be a none-too-intriguing story.

Running time, 86 minutes. Adult audience classification. For June release.

WB Will Operate 1st House in Harrison

NEWARK, May 22.—K and R Co., a group of Newark businessmen, headed by David Cronheim, Lester Finger, and Julius Vinik, have started work on a new theatre, to have a capacity of 1,100 seats, in Harrison, to be leased to Warner Brothers for a long period of years.

Greater Harrison, with a population of 30,000, has never had any place of amusement, and is said to be the only city of its size in the United States without a theatre.

Cronheim handled the transaction, including a 20-year mortgage from Equitable Life Insurance. Architects are Drew and John Eberson; completion is expected in the fall.

To Report Video Film 'Inadequacies' in U.S.

Norman Livingston, director of commercial program operations for station WOR and WOR-TV here is scheduled to sharply criticize television film producers and distributors, at the May 26 meeting here of the National Television Film Council, where he will be guest speaker, Mel Gold, head of the NTFC reported at the weekend.

Livingston, who recently returned here from Hollywood and a tour of TV stations throughout the country, is reportedly prepared to denounce at the meeting what he describes as "the inadequacies of Hollywood's thinking, and the thinking and production efforts of some producers of TV films."

There is nothing in the subject which could be considered an imposition on theatre audiences. On the contrary, it is entertaining and informative. Nothing more. Every theatre in the country should show this subject. There will be 600 prints at Universal exchanges beginning today.

Dore Schary supervised the subject, which was produced by Richard Goldstone with Armand Deutsch as coordinator. Allen Rivkin wrote the screenplay. S.K.

Momand Again Appeals to U.S. High Court

Says Boston Ruling Will Upset Other Trust Suits

WASHINGTON, May 23.—A. B. Momand today again asked the U. S. Supreme Court to reconsider its May 2 action refusing to review a Boston Circuit Court of Appeals decision which threw out his 11-year-old anti-trust suit against eight major film companies.

A petition filed by the Washington law firm of Claggett and Schilz said that the Supreme Court in the Paramount case had established an illegal conspiracy among the film companies which should have been prima facie evidence in Momand's favor. In ruling that Momand had to prove specific intent to injure him, the petition said, the Boston court had ruled contrary to other Circuit Court decisions and had supplied the film companies with a new "escape hatch" to defend anti-trust suits.

The decision will affect such cases as the fifth and Walnut, Windsor ver-

Brandt In Charge of E-L's Ads, Publicity

Leon Brandt has taken over the duties of Eagle-Lion's director of advertising-publicity-exploitation, replacing Max E. Youngstein, who last Friday left as E-L advertising-publicity-exploitation vice-president to direct those operations for Paramount.

As exploitation manager, Brandt a few weeks ago took over the duties of publicity director Jerry Pickman when the latter left E-L for a public relations post at Paramount.

Query 20th-Fox On TV at Chicago Meet

CHICAGO, May 23.—Issues involving the potential threat of television to theatres and clarification of 20th Century-Fox's sliding scale system, dominated the discussions at the open forum meeting conducted by 20th-Fox officials for members of Allied Theatres of Illinois and prominent circuit exhibitors today at the Palmer House.

Questions on the company's new sales plan were answered by president Spyros Skouras and vice-presidents Al Lichtman and Andy W. Smith, Jr. Perturbation over possible inroads of TV on theatre business was evident in the discussion from the floor.

Ben Banowitz, Alliance Theatres head, asserted that theatres should be given full protection on all films, regardless of age, over the sale to television staions. "If 'Sitting

'NO QUOTA CHANGE', BRITISH TELL U. S.

Suggests Withholding Complaints Pending Council Negotiations

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The British government has delivered its answer to the State Department on U. S. protests against the British film quota—and it's a very flat "no change."

The British reply, delivered orally by a member of the Embassy staff here to Department officials Winthrop Brown and Merrill C. Gay, will undoubtedly touch off further MPAA protests and further criticism on Capitol Hill.

Several Congressmen have asked the State Department for a memo summarizing the British stand.

The British answer said it would be "most difficult'" to modify the new 40 per cent quota. It pointed out that it was fixed by law until October 1, 1950, and declared that it was reasonable in terms of British production, not in contravention of any legal com-

Palace Vaudeville In $32,000 Revival

Vaudeville, with "Canadian Pacific" on the screen, is very much alive at the Palace where the first week's gross will probably be close to $32,000. This represents a fancy profit since the house, which is charging from 55 cents to $1.20, has a break-point of only $17,000. During straight film programming, either first-run or double re-issues, the Palace grossed from $15,000 to $25,000 per week generally, with top admissions varied at from $1 to $1.40.

New York's 1st-Runs Are Still Sluggish

Sunday's rain was some help but not enough to lift the current week's grosses at New York first-runs above sub-par levels. Theatremen are attributing the continued slump to a "general condition," pointing out that business is almost uniformly off despite the fact that several of the current attractions won enthusiastic audience reception initially. MPAA Is Considering New Quota Protest

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The Motion Picture Association of America might make further representations to the State Department on the British quota, it is understood. A decision will be made sometime after MPAA president Eric Johnston returns here—he is due back Wednesday from a field trip.

MPAA officials understand that one portion of the British answer to U.S. quota protests declares that British producers can meet the quota and that the quota does not violate the General accord on tariffs negotiated at Geneva. The MPAA answer would presumably be a reassertion that the quota does violate the Geneva Pact and other Anglo-American agreements, and that the quota should have been negotiated rather than fixed arbitrarily by the British government.

E-L Sale Talks to Resume Tomorrow

New York Grosses

warm weather is believed to be the chief adverse factor.

"The Lady Gambles" is fairly bright at the Criterion, with the opening week's business figured at $25,000. "Big Jack" is adequate at the Gotham with $13,000 in prospect for the first week. "A Woman's Story" might reach $15,000 in a slow opening week at the Rivoli.

"Home of the Brave" is disappointing at the Victoria, with a second week's gross of about $17,500 in view, after taking close to $30,000 in a big opening week. Also under expectations, although it will stay, is "The Stratton Story" with a stage show at the Music Hall. The Hall did $78,000 Thursday through Sunday, indicating a second week's take of about $118,000; "Edward, My Son" is next, with May 2 as the probable starting date. Capitol is doing its slowest business in months with only $19,000 apparent for the second and final week of "The Sun Comes Up," with Glen Gray's orchestra and Gracie Barrie among others on stage.

Doing good business is "Barkleys of Broadway" at the State, where the third week's take could reach $35,000. "Champion" is falling off, but still is fair at the Globe, where the seventh week's income is about $15,000.

"Flamingo Road" is fair at the Strand where, with Ted Lewis' orchestra and a revue on stage, the second week's gross is likely to be about $33,000. "Forbidden Street," with Dick Haymes and an ice show on stage, probably will give the Roxy a very modest $65,000 in its second and final week, and will be replaced on Friday by "Beautiful Blonde from Bashful Bend." "Hamlet" at the Park should draw about $13,000 in a good 35th week. "We Were Strangers" could do about $15,000 in a fourth week at the Astor, leaving room for improvement.

"Quartet" is holding up very well at the Sutton, where $10,000 is apparent for the eighth week. At the Bijou, "The Red Shoes" still is healthy with $10,500 indicated for the 30th week.

Hence, the convention committee has urged members to make reservations as soon as possible.

TV Benefits Shorts, Says FitzPatrick

Being ideally suited for television presentation, the film short subject stands to benefit greatly from video useage, James A. FitzPatrick, shorts producer, declared here yesterday following a screening of his "Mighty Manhattan," Technicolor subject to be released by M-G-M. The company held the special screening and a reception for FitzPatrick at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

FitzPatrick, who will leave here June 12 on a whaling cruise to gather footage for his next subject, said he has a series of 12 shorts planned. He will release his old shorts for television "when the time is appropriate," he said. Present at yesterday's reception were: Nicholas Schenck and Mrs. Schenck, Herb Crooker, Fred Lynch, Max Weinberg, Richard Harper, Jack Bowen and others.

Video a Worry: Cheyfitz

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Television should worry the film industry, but the outlook is not entirely black, according to Edward Cheyfitz, assistant to Motion Picture Association of America president Eric Johnston and secretary of MPAA's television committee, at a panel discussion before the local chapter of the American Association of University Women on television's effects on various other media.

Test of Para. Plan Starts on May 29

MEMPHIS, May 23.—Distributors and exhibitors have temporarily halted negotiations on earlier release dates to permit deluxe second-run theatres and drive-ins to experiment with the earlier showing in three Memphis theatres of "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" simultaneously.

The Ritz, usually a first-run house, operated by David Flexer; the Idlewild, owned by Edward O. Cullins, and the Rosemary, owned by Augustine Cianciola, will show the "Yankee" for seven days, May 29-June 4.

All three booked the picture under Paramount's new offer to release pictures for second-runs in 30 days instead of the usual 39 if theatres would run the film seven days, guarantee a $750 rental against a 35 per cent cut for the first $3,500, and a 50-50 split over $3,500.

Momand Appeals

sus Loew's, Emerson Long versus Schine, Auburn Theatres versus Schine, and Meiselman versus Paramount, according to the petition.

In all of these cases, the Momand brief held, the film companies will use the same defense of "No specific intent" and thus defeat the intent of the anti-trust laws.

Defendants in the Momand suit, commenced in June 1937, are: Universal, Loew's M-G-M, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, RKO, Columbia and Vitagraph.

Ask Clearance Cut

ances in Des Moines and Omaha exchange territories "are out of line with clearances in other similar territories" and "are often dated from preceding runs other than the first-run, and subsequent-runs are therefore held back for unreasonable lengths of time beyond their proper and rightful playing time by this arbitrary arrangement."

The second resolution asks distributors "to consider the consequences" of licensing pictures to any drive-in ahead of the established indoor theatre.

chase by 20th Century-Fox for Albert Maltz's novel, "The Journey of Simon McKeever," which was followed by a company announcement that the story would not be filmed. This represents evidence, the plaintiffs charge, that the decision of the majors in 1947 not to employ the "ten" is a "conspiracy in perpetuity."

Amounts sought for individuals range from $3,000,000 to $8,000,000. An injunction against a continued ban on employment is asked by Robert Kenny, attorney for the plaintiffs. Federal Judge Pierson Hall has indicated that he will set a date for hearings within two weeks.

Iowa-Nebraska Allied Favor 20th-Fox Plan

Anamosa, Ia., May 23.—Reaction of Allied of Iowa and Nebraska to the new 20th Century-Fox sales policy is favorable, as reflected in a Caravan bulletin sent to all members by Charles Niles. "When a film company indicates they will sell the membership at fair and equitable prices, the time has come to sit down and talk to their sales manager," he writes.

Pretty' appeared on TV," he declared, "probably 50 per cent our business would be dissipated."

In reply to a question by Illinois Allied head Jack Kirsch on 20th-Fox's stipulation of the right to license films to TV or radio stations, Smith answered that the company would eliminate the section. He stated that it was retained because of the company's deal with television interests for newsreels.

Skouras predicted that the future of television may well prove to be the "zenith of grosses in theatres," and should not be shied away from. He repeated that the company was contemplating the installation of television equipment in 25 West Coast houses, providing the FCC issues the rights. Films sold to theatres would not be made available for television showing, Skouras said, but stated the company was producing special TV films.

The exhibitors appeared to be generally in accordance with the sliding scale system, but it was attacked by some. Arthur Schoenstadt, head of the Schoenstadt circuit, took issue with the allocation and license fees imposed under the system, and posed the question: "Who shall decide the division of profits and losses, and who shall decide the equity of that division?"

Jack Rose, head of the Manta-Rose circuit, wanted to know on what basis the sliding scale goes up or down, and what control there is over the number of films on sliding scale. Al Lichtman replied that "the true sliding scale is based on honest expense figures."

Allied Board To Sift 20th-Fox Sales Plan

MINNEAPOLIS, May 23.—Allied States will "sift out" the 20th Century-Fox sales proposition at a quarterly meeting of the board in Dallas this weekend, William T. Ainsworth, president, announced at the opening session today of the North Central Allied here which is being attended by more than 150 independent theatre owners from Minnesota, the Dakotas and Western Wisconsin. He said the Board will consider reports from meetings held throughout the country on the plan.

Benjamin N. Berger, NCA president, in his annual report predicted that while "divorcement is a fact" there will be "real competition in the very near future in all three branches of the industry."

'No Quota Change'

mitment with the U. S., and is necessary to conserve dollars.

State Department officials were frankly stumped as to their next move. They said they were "considering" the British reply.

The British also suggested that there be a "closed season" on official U. S. protests until the current round of negotiations in the Anglo-American Films Council is concluded.

The British answer, delivered orally by an Embassy official to State trade chief Winthrop Brown and film chief Merrill C. Gay, stressed the fact that the Anglo-American Films Council had worked out general principles of an agreement and would attempt to reduce them to final terms at a meeting next month, and suggested that both the British and American governments remain quiet on the subject until the negotiations are completed.

On the quota, the British said that it was fixed by law until October 1, 1950, and that it would be very difficult to persuade Parliament to change this "under obvious pressure from the U. S." The British also stressed the fact that many British oppose spending too many of Britain's limited dollars on films, and that they regard the quota as a device to prevent a permanent dollar drain by keeping U. S. film firms from building up too huge blocked dollar balances to be paid later.

A British Embassy official, while refusing to comment on the report of the British reply, said that he had advised his government in London that he "hoped things would be quiet for a bit, but that they should not be too sure."

The British film quota is expected to be aired on the Senate floor later this week when the Senate takes up extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act. Senator Knowland, California Republican, has an amendment pending to hit back tariff-wise at any country discriminating against American films or other products.

and the Paramount, which the two companies share on a 50-50 basis. Under terms of a 1933 agreement, which is to expire in 1956, the three houses are operated jointly with Shea and Warners equally dividing profits. The "joint venture" has been a very profitable one in recent years, it is understood.

Plaintiff Shea states that the Warner plan to take over operation of the Warner, to give the Park back to Shea and to sell its interest in the Paramount, is inequitable for, under it, Warners fails to acknowledge that the joint operation substantially enhanced the status of the Warner at the expense of the Park. Shea contends that prior to the agreement the Warner Theatre was a losing proposition, that the Park was a successful operation. Shea further states that the agreement provided that the Park be relegated to an inferior status, consequently its value in a separate operation, outside the pool, has deteriorated in large measure.

Shea asks that the assets of all three houses be divided equally rather than having each party recoup from the pool its own theatre and that the joint operation be placed in the hands of a receiver until such division is effected.

The complaint will be filed in New York Supreme Court following out-of-court preliminaries.

with the American members in New York.

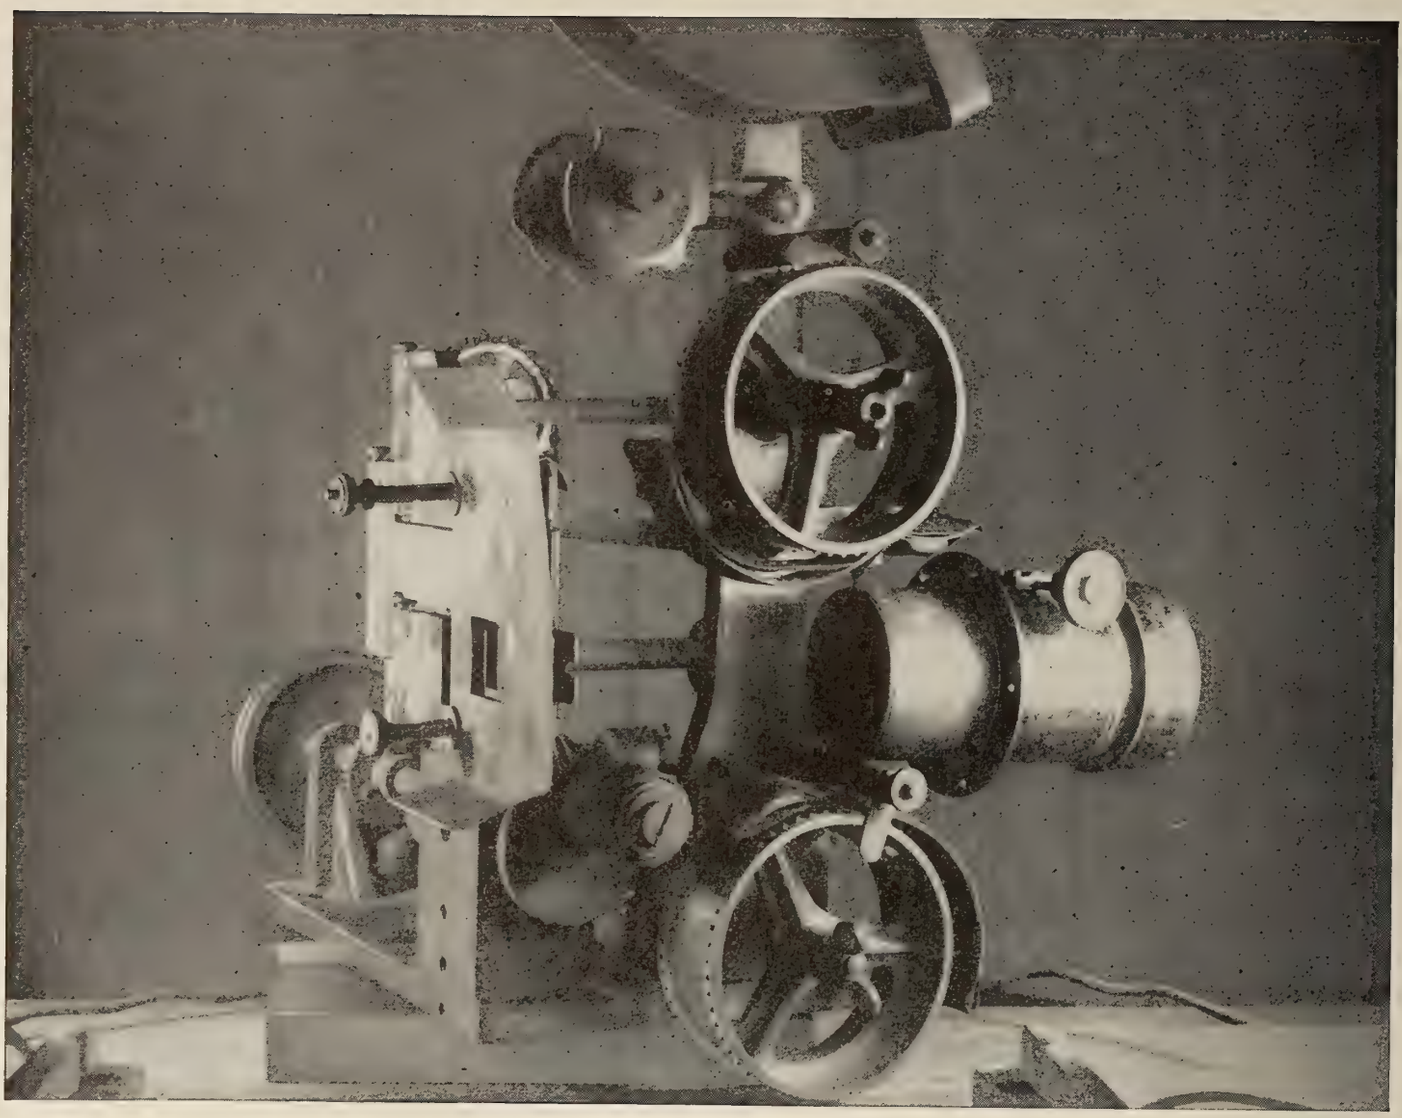
It is anticipated that while the British members of the Council will receive the majority backing of the BFPA, Thursday's meeting will give them no roving commission to take with them to New York. Their brief will be drawn in close detail and they will be expected to adhere to it.

The Board of Trade still has had no comment to make on the Council's suggestions except to point out that the legislative position forbids any change in the quota before April, 1950.

Meanwhile, independent producers, led by Maurice Ostrer, Victor Hanbury and Edward Dryhurst, will hold a special meeting on the Council's plan and will give their views of it to Harold Wilson, Board of Trade president, on his return from Canada.

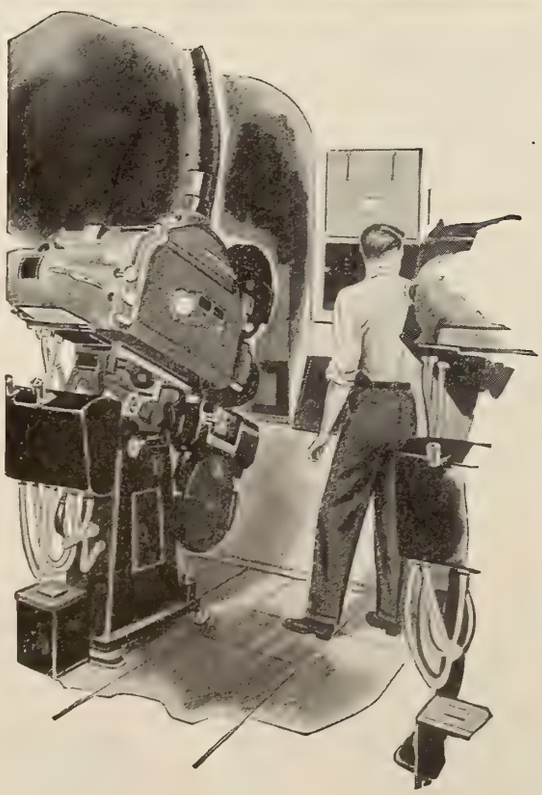
Cites Mono. Pact as Anglo-U. S. Mollifier

LONDON, May 23.—"Joint production and distribution projects such as we have entered into with Monogram are probably the ultimate solution to the Anglo-American film differences," declared William Moffat, Associated British-Pathe chief, on his return here from New York.



He claimed that Associated British films are already earning dollars in the U. S. and that the discussions he had with both Monogram and Warner executives will ensure them of even wider distribution.

Sears, Reisman to London; Kelly, Rome



LONDON, May 23.—Gradwell L. Sears, United Artists president, will return here tomorrow from a visit of several days in Ireland for meetings with John Davis of the J. Arthur Rank Organization. Arthur W. Kelly, UA executive vice-president, has returned here from Paris and will leave for Rome next Friday.

Phil Reisman, RKO Radio's foreign chief, is also due here tomorrow.

With this, the "unseen showman" got his epoch-making start . . .

THE projectionist has come a long, long way . . . since the 1890's when he put on his show with equipment such as this.

And today, as then, much of a motion picture's success depends upon the unseen showman in his booth.

To his sure sense of split-second timing . . . to his alert control of sound . . . to his deft handling of elaborate equipment . . . the film illusion owes much of its dramatic, realistic presentation on the screen.

Helping the projectionist to keep the mechanics of the medium from intruding is the top quality of Eastman motion picture films (both sight and sound) . . . members of a famous family started more than fifty years ago.

Color Video In Theatres 1st: 20th-Fox

Company Says It Will Outstrip Home Color

WASHINGTON, May 24. — Twentieth Century-Fox today urged "serious experimentation" on the use of color in theatre television projection.

In a 34-page progress report to the Federal Communications Commission on the company's theatre television experimenting, 20th-Fox said that it is possible that color television will be made available to the general public in the theatre before it is feasible for home reception.

This is due, it declared, because of

So. African Earnings Fight Is Redoubled

American distributors' representatives in South Africa and officials of that country's Schlesinger Circuit have established a "united front" in a campaign to avert the restrictions which the Capetown government has proposed to place on the earnings of imported films. This was reported here yesterday in industry foreign management circles.

The South African film quota year will begin again on July 1, and the organized "lobby" in behalf of the American industry has until then to make its oppositional stand accomplish its desired end. Under the restriction which threatens, 50 per cent of all film earnings (based on 1947 earnings) would be withheld by the South African government.

Balaban Optimistic Over New Setup

HOLLYWOOD, May 24.—Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, expressed the utmost confidence in the future of the company under its new status commencing January 1 when the new production-distribution company will start operations separated from the theatre circuit.

Addressing a meeting yesterday at the Ambassador Hotel of company executives and many exhibitors, as a function of "Paramount's Gold Rush of '49" West Coast regional sales drive, Balaban declared:

"This is a very important meeting, the last of a series of meetings following the vote of stockholders to segregate our business. This could not have been effected without assurance to our stockholders that excellent management has been provided for. Paramount will embark on its new

Argentine Moves to Exclude Old Films

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Argentine government has taken steps to exclude outdated films and films of dubious moral value, the U. S. Commerce Department said here today.

A report by acting Commerce film chief George R. Donnelly cited an Argentine decree requiring distributors of foreign films to submit a summary of the plot, date of release of the picture in the country of origin, and the date of the picture's arrival in port.

Donnelly also cited announcements from Buenos Aires disclosing that the government soon will require national films to be shown three weeks out of every five, instead of two.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—House Judiciary Chairman Celler, New York Democrat, today appointed a special seven-man sub-committee to study the need for tightening the anti-trust laws; and said he may go into film and radio problems.

Celler is a long-time critic of Ascap and major film companies.

The sub-committee may build up a case against the Webb-Pomerene Act and other acts which "soften competition" by creating exemptions from the anti-trust laws, Celler said.

Lichtman Wins NCA Okay for 20th-Fox

MINNEAPOLIS, May 24.—More than 200 enthusiastic exhibitors attending the North Central Allied meeting today gave hearty approval to an announcement by Al Lichtman, 20th Century-Fox vice-president, that every type of theatre operation can buy 20th-Fox product on a flat, percentage or sliding scale basis. His announcement that local autonomy has been given the branch manager to approve contracts caught militant exhibitors by surprise and diminished complaints to only half-a-dozen in discussions of the Lichtman plan from the floor.

Lichtman said he was crusading for a betterment of industry relations, which he believed would eventually result in improved box-office grosses.

'The Red Menace' Bids for Wide Public Attention

By SHERWIN KANE

Keyed to the widespread public concern throughout the United States over Communism, Republic's new production, "The Red Menace," now ready for release, makes a strong bid to center exceptional interest upon itself.

The picture was screened at the Republic home office and at the West Coast studio yesterday for trade press reviewers. It is a potently titled, fast-moving 87 minutes of screen action and exposition which tells more about what Communism is and purports to be, particularly in these United States, than any picture heretofore made available to American theatres.

All exhibitors should be aware of it for it could well prove to be one of those rarest of all present-day cinematic events—a sleeper. The public interest is ready and waiting for it, which is not exactly an unrecognized fact in Hollywood today, judging by the pictures on the subject of Communism either in production or contemplated. It deals with Communism in a punchy, educational way, while dramatizing the methods employed to win followers, to hold them or to wreak vengeance upon those who once having accepted it would repudiate it.

Interestingly, much of the informa-

$4 - Million Blocked In Japanese Money

WASHINGTON, May 24.—As of May 7, the Motion Picture Export Association had in Japan blocked yen equivalent to $4,350,955, according to testimony given the House Appropriations Committee by MPAA legislative representative Jack Bryson.

Bryson pointed out that the MPEA had operated in Japan for four years at an out-of-pocket cost of over $400,000, and asked $2,180,000 to reimburse the MPEA for losses through depreciation of the blocked yen. Bryson stressed that the funds asked did not include any profit, but only expenses plus a porportionate share of production costs.

Joseph Bernhard, president of Film Classics, yesterday denied that he is presently engaged in any negotiations with Si Fabian, president of Fabian Theatres, for the purchase of the former, and also denied that he is in on any deal with Walter Wanger and the Nassours for the same purpose, as reported on the Coast. Meanwhile, a spokesman in the Fabian office here said yesterday that there had been "some talk" about a deal, but he did not indicate whether a deal is still on.

Future ownership of the company is expected to be determined when directors of Cinecolor, parent of Film Classics, meet on June 14 to determine whether the two companies will be separated.

All eight RKO theatres in the city have been running trailers announcing the event. Henry Scholl, manager, and Ward and Farrar, publicists, aided in the promotion.

"Autry Day" in Trenton, according to Columbia spokesmen, is going to serve as a blueprint for Columbia Autry exploitation in the future.

Leaders Tell Press

sented to Parade's 15,000,000 readers in 26 cities under the affirmative heading "What's Right with the Movies?" as the first group interview of industry men of their rank on recent industry criticisms and questions, the article is regarded as countering much that the industry feels will appear in the Life magazine series on motion picture affairs.

Parade reports that as the round-table progressed, "it became clear that the makers of American motion pictures are on the whole pleased with their product, their industry, and with what it has meant to their fellow-countrymen and to people in every foreign land."

The oft-repeated question of what television "will do to movies" was answered by Skouras.

Skouras Sees TV a Boon

"In my opinion," Skouras is quoted as saying, "television will be a boon to the motion picture industry. It will never reach great success in the public entertainment field except as a part of the motion picture. . . . The present entertainment which the public receives on television today is not being accepted."

Video will succeed, Skouras maintained, "only when it has the right facilities." He concludes: "We feel that the large screen will develop within a short time. We feel that through the local theatre, television will succeed because the public will demand it as a higher type of entertainment."

The query as to why the adult film-going population is not larger, and what the industry intends to do about it, was received by Balaban with the observation that it was "not a new question." He has heard the question, he said, "for more than a quarter of a century.

Challenging the claim that attendance is falling off, Balaban pointed out that Paramount's business in the first 14 weeks of 1949 was about equal to that of 1946, "the top year so far."

Added Skouras: "In every theatre in the country, from Monday through Friday, 95 per cent of the audience is adult."

Elders Have Less Time

When the same topic arose again later. Depinet made this observation: "When you were young you had time to see pictures. As you grew older and had to go out and earn a living, you had less time. I think it is no more than natural that as people grow older they have less time to go to the movies than youngsters do."

Regarding the relative importance of the "star system," Depinet said he did not think "our industry can get away from the star system—I don't think the public will permit us to."

Breen was asked: "Does the Production Code of the MPAA lead to forfeiture of the rights of free expression? Is the industry censoring itself out of business?"

"No," Breen replied.

"Some people," he said, "have the idea that there is a mysterious something or somebody in Hollywood which seeks to deny to the motion picture screen the right of discussion of problems which are valid. Let me say right here that I know of no such group. I know of no such movement. I know of no such authority.

"If you will read the Code," he added, "you will find that it permits the widest possible freedom of expression. Nothing in the Code denies or curtails freedom of expression on any matter."

Asked what the industry is doing to foster the broadest showing of the best foreign films, Depinet pointed out that in the U. S. "there is no quota, there is no restriction, and their (foreign producers') money is free to go back to their own country. I wish we were treated as well as they are."

"If it were not for the American motion picture," Skouras added, "the majority of the theatres of the world would be closed."

As the round-table discussion concluded, Skouras made this parting observation: "There is only one thing wrong with the motion picture industry: We do not appreciate its real greatness and its importance to the people of America."

The idea of the round-table interview was conceived by Tom Waller of the MPAA's New York information department.

'Red Menace'

tive material corresponds both broadly and in detail with testimony of Party activities given by government witnesses in the current New York Federal Court trial of American Communist leaders charged with teaching the overthrow of the government by force and violence. Other phases of "The Red Menace" are reminiscent of evidence given in Communist spy trials and of incidents reported in the press from time to time of those who have succeeded in escaping from Communist influences.

The story itself, however, written by Albert DeMond, who collaborated on the screenplay with Gerald Geraghty, makes no pretense of going to such sources of record. It is the story of an ex-G.I., played by Robert Rockwell, who becomes a good prospect for the Party's recruiting agents when he believes he has been defrauded of his savings invested in a housing project which failed to materialize.

Locale Is Los Angeles

The persuasion routine begins at a bar, with girl companions used by the Party, moves to the greater privacy of the apartment provided for one of the girls, and from there to the secret classes and meeting rooms of the Party. The scene is Los Angeles.

Illustrated are the teachings, discipline and vengeance employed to influence members to accept the dictates of the Party hierarchy and to punish the rebellious. A Jewish poet, played by Shepard Menken, persecuted by the Party for his intellectual honesty, is driven to suicide. The Irish girl with whom he was in love, played by Barbra Fuller, renounces the Party thereafter. An Italian worker, critical of its teachings, is brutally beaten to death while the Communist press blames "Fascists" for killing him because he was a Communist. A Negro writer for the Party paper, fed up with his deceitful tasks, returns to his family.

Fear Party's Vengeance

As Rockwell progresses through Party training he falls in love with one of the teachers, played by Hanne Axman. Their misgivings over the Party methods employed develop gradually but spurred by their love and desire to live normal lives they decide to break with the Party. Fearing its vengeance they set out to lose themselves in a remote town. They tell their story to a sheriff at the end of their journey and are reassured by his reminder that as good citizens they are entitled to the protection of the law and the government.

"The Red Menace" is lacking in production polish and has some of the trappings of prosaic writing, but R. G. Springsteen's direction imparts continuous interest and movement, as well as suspense, to the screenplay. In addition to those mentioned, the cast includes Betty Lou Gerson, as a psychopathic Party leader; Lester Luther and William J. Lally as Party functionaries; Leo Cleary as a priest and Duke Williams as the Communist writer. Lloyd G. Davies, Los Angeles city council member, provides a narration.

Yates Says 'Red Menace' Will Play 'Every City, Town and Village'

HOLLYWOOD, May 24.—Following a preview of "Red Menace" at the studio today, Republic president Herbert J. Yates told the press, "I decided to make this picture primarily to make Americans vitally aware of what Communism is and how it is working right here in this country. Our industry has been accused being Communistic and it is proper we controvert that accusation with every means at our disposal.

"This picture puts Communist strategy and methods squarely before the public with the screen's matchless impact. I believe it will be great box office success on an entertainment basis alone, but we are determined it will play every city, town and village in the country at any cost."

In evidence of his determination in this connection, Yates said Republic will spend $50,000 on a promotion campaign for picture's June 8 opening at Hollywood and Los Angeles Paramounts, and added, "Our information is that top campaigns here cost not more than $15,000. We are spending $50,000 to make sure our picture gets a thorough testing here before we open it elsewhere. We'll use similar campaigns throughout the country later.

status with adequate resources and top manpower.

"Knowing the excellent position Paramount would enjoy, I elected to remain with production-distribution in facing the new situation starting in 1950."

At today's meeting Ginsberg predicted a rise in production in the near future and said that he and Balaban would sit down and map future productions, with purchase of new story material in the immediate offing.

Ginsberg, mentioning that he started in the industry as a salesman, stressed that production realized that greater domestic grosses must be obtained and said that the studio would build "showmanship" into films in order to achieve greater playing time. He called for teamwork between production and distribution and praised A. W. Schwalberg, sales vice-president, for bringing a spirit of enthusiaism to the organization.

Among others who addressed the meeting were Adolph Zukor, board chairman, A. W. Schwalberg, sales vice-president; Charles P. Skouras, president of National Theatres; Hugh Bruen, of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre owners; J. Myer Schine, president of Schine Theatres, and George A. Smith, Paramount West Coast division manager. Other company executives speaking today were: Y. Frank Freeman, E. K. (Ted) O'Shea, Oscar A. Morgan and Max Youngstein.

Neal East, San Francisco branch manager, was named divisional captain for the sales drive to be initiated under the slogan, "The West is the Best." Edward Canty, San Francisco booker, and John Kent, Seattle salesman, were named to the company's "100 Per Cent Club" by Smith.

the comparatively few units involved in any change-over and the magnitude of the required investment.

The film company told the FCC that it believed that theatre television had now advanced to the point where it could be taken from the laboratory and introduced to the American public "as a new medium of entertainment." Further experimentation is of course necessary, but that can be done in the open, 20th-Fox said.

"Considering the many improvements that have been made during the past year it appears that the generation of a theatre television picture of suitable quality is not only possible but practical," 20th-Fox said.

The report was prepared by 20th's research director Earl I. Sponable and was personally submitted by attorney Vincent Welch in conferences with individual FCC commissioners.

The company pointed out that it had placed equal emphasis in its experiments on both direct projection and film storage methods of theatre television. "The direct projection method of large-screen theatre television," the report declared, "has now reached a stage of development which warrants the design of commercial equipment for theatre installation and operation.

"It is believed that a multiple point-to-point intra-city distribution system of theatre television could be established for such an operation with a minimum of two channels and that separate channels would not be required for each point-to-point link.

"Although the film storage method has a number of advantages over the direct projection method and must be included in any complete system, there exists in that system certain fundamental difficulties in tone reproduction which are yet to be resolved. Furthermore, there continue to be serious problems of conversion," the report said.

After outlining experiments and research in the field, the 20th-Fox report listed these major changes as having taken place: The direct projection unit has been radically reduced in size and weight; the optical system has been separated and as a result the design of a practical piece of equipment for either large or small theatres is now feasible; considerable improvement in screen lighting is claimed, and also an improvement in the film storage process of theatre television.

Celler stated that he expects another sub-committee to report out this week—and the full Judiciary Committee next week—a bill to tighten the Clayton Act by prohibiting one firm from acquiring the physical assets of another where the result would be to lessen competition substantially.

Justice Department Leaves Paramount TV Bid to FCC

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Department of Justice, which had asked to be heard before any final decision on the question of whether Paramount and other film companies found guilty of violating the anti-trust laws should be allowed into the television field, has notified the Federal Communications Commission that it has lost interest in Paramount since the consent decree was signed.

Protests on British Quota Action Reach Capital; More Expected

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Protests from the film industry over the British government's refusal to consider modification of the British quota have been received by California Senator Downey today, with a telephone call from Joseph Schenck, 20th Century-Fox executive, and a wire from Robert H. Garton, film technicians union representative.

The California Congressional delegation expect the protests to increase tomorrow as the news of the British reply circulates. Several Congressmen called on Jack Bryson, Motion Picture Association of America legislative representative, for information on what steps the MPAA proposes to take.

HOLLYWOOD, May 24. — The AFL Film Council here telegraphed the entire California representation in Congress, saying, "urgently request your cooperation in asking State Department to reject British note re film quota and demand immediate negotiations for elimination of quota."

Lichtman Wins NCA

He declared that flat rentals are the practical way to sell small situations, with the exchange and exhibitors negotiating playing time to include the days the pictures contracted for can do the most business. He warned, however, that the plan was not conceived to decrease 20th-Fox revenues, but rather to increase the income for both company and exhibitor.

Andy W. Smith, Jr., praised by Ben Berger, NCA president, for his efforts to "be fair," replied to an inquiry that the 20th-Fox manager would naturally negotiate for the best playing time for his company's top pictures and "hoped" the exhibitors would be fair in their negotiations. Berger approved most of the 20th-Fox policy statement "in principle," but bitterly attacked the "must" percentage for small situations as "an obnoxious policy that has destroyed our business and forced us to sell peanuts and popcorn to make a living."

Smith praised Berger for conceiving the Smith-Berger plan and said that conciliation with 20th-Fox would be continued for the present at the local level, adding that he would like to see it placed on a national level and accepted by all distributors and independent exhibitors.

Berger and the entire NCA board were re-elected.

Hollywood Up In Arms Over British Quota

Nine Organizations Ask Congressional Probe

HOLLYWOOD, May 25.—One of the most concerted production protests ever made was voiced here today when nine producer, talent guild and labor union groups charged, through the Motion Picture Industry Council, that "undisclosed motives behind these persistent breaches of faith tend to bolster the suspicion that present British government policy primarily is aimed at stifling the American film industry in the world market."

The nine organizations, representing many thousands in Hollywood production, petitioned for a Congressional in-

UK Quota Protests Pour in on Capital

Practically every California Congressman had eight or ten wires from Hollywood labor and industry groups,

20th-Fox Availability Plan to Start Today

W.B.'s Chicago Video Plans Are Dropped

Washington, May 25.—Warner Brothers will stick by its original plan to withdraw its application for a Chicago television station, attorney Marcus Cohn said here today. He indicated that the Federal Communications Commission would probably dismiss the application on Friday.

Warner asked the FCC some weeks ago to dismiss the application but later asked that action on its request be deferred, indicating Warner might change its mind.

PHILADELPHIA, May 25.—The 18 local theatres which will open tomorrow with first neighborhood runs under the new 20th Century-Fox plan for earlier availabilities are giving the set-up full promotional backing. "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College" will open at all 18 houses.

Five of the 18 will increase admission prices for the run of "Belvedere." Of the quintet, three—the Fernrock, Ogontz and Oxford—are Warner houses; the others are the independent Jeffries and Mayfair. Prices will vary from 26 to 45 cents for matinees and 45 to 70 cents evenings. Exhibitors in the area will watch closely for audience reaction to the temporary increase in admissions for a non-advanced admission price picture.

Warner-K-B Ruling Due By June 15

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Attorneys for the K-B Amusement Co. and Warner Brothers argued in District Court here today whether or not K-B has the first right to buy out Warner from the jointly-owned MacArthur Theatre when Warner is getting out under a court order in the Paramount case.

The occasion was arguments before Judge Matthew McGuire on a suit by K-B, originally to force Warner out of the MacArthur, and now to get the Warner interest at the low terms prescribed in a 1945 contract. Judge McGuire promised to hand down a decision by June 15.

Warner argued that the contract gave K-B the first right to buy the Warner interest only if Warner was getting out voluntarily. The consent judgment under which it now is getting out is an involuntary disposal, Warner attorney Philip Amram argued, and K-B has no "first crack" at the Warner interest. Amram said that under the judgment Warner could either sell or dissolve, and had decided to ask the court to dissolve the joint venture and sell the assets at public auction.

K-B attorney Monroe Oppenheim said that a 50 per cent stockholder could not dissolve a corporation, and that since Warner must sell, it should be required to sell at the terms fixed in the contract. He said they were drawn up with a possible court order in the Paramount case in mind.

Final decision in the case could have wide effect on many other situations under the Paramount decree.

MPEA Ironing Out Jap Trade Problems

Exhibitors of American pictures in Japan are getting a practical lesson in democratic procedures, the Motion Picture Export Association reported here yesterday. For the first time in the Jap film business, exhibitors in all provinces are meeting with distributors, airing their grievances and suggesting improvements in service and operations, it was said. Charles Mayer, MPEA managing director of Japan, inaugurated the series of open forums. The object of the meetings, which are being held regionally, is to enable MPEA to patch up weak spots in distribution for the 800 theatres which now exhibit the product of MPEA's 10 member companies.

Complaints, "though in most respects isolated," were said to range all the way from occasional delays in the routing of prints and dissatisfaction with the dates of program changes, to the tardy delivery of publicity material. Suggestions were made for cooperative printing of theatre programs and for continuation of lecture courses on theatre management and showmanship techniques which MPEA introduced to the Japanese trade a year ago.

Review

"The Beautiful Blonde from Bashful Bend"

(20th Century-Fox) Hollywood, May 25

IT'S pretty hard to discount the box-office power of a star like Betty Grable, voted placement among the "Top Ten" in the past seven Motion Picture Herald-Fame "Money-Making Star" polls, but the vehicle which Preston Sturges wrote, produced and directed for her use this time warrants a warning to showmen. In an all-out exercise of his singularly vigorous whimsy, the man who hit with "Great McGinty" and "Miracle of Morgan's Creek" has cooked up a burlesque on Western melodrama which runs to excesses in so many directions as to raise grave doubt about what he was trying to do. After a fast and funny 15 minutes not too offensively flecked with hot situations and double-edged dialogue, the picture skids into a blend of slapstick and running gags that gets down ultimately to a Chic Sale bit eliciting the kind of howl from which no family audience can rebound save in the wrong direction. Prior to this the heroine shot the local judge twice in the posterior, this being the master point on which the story depends, and so there is nothing left to do but have her shoot him again in the same place for the finale.

The Sturges scrip is about a blonde orphan whose grandfather taught her in infancy (about 1870 or so, and out West) to fire a pistol with utter accuracy. She grows up to become a dance hall girl with a trigger-quick temper and a yen for a gambler (Cesar Romero) who reciprocates her yen and also many others, a state of affairs which sends her gunning for him and shooting the judge by mistake. From that start the thing fans out to involve a prodigiously large number of caricatured characters—hillbilly types, ruffians, halfwits, sheriffs, nondescripts and miscellany—who engage in prolonged mass gunfights entailing constant shooting but no fatalities save audience interest. Among the players taking part in these dubious proceedings are: Rudy Vallee, Olga San Juan, Sterling Holloway, Hugh Herbert, El Brendel, Porter Hall, Pati Embers, Margaret Hamilton, Danny Jackson, Emory Parnell, Alan Bridge, Chris-Pin Martin and many more.

All of the Sturges working materials have been poured into the job without stint, including money, Technicolor and camera tricks. The dialogue contains slick switches and coined words, and he keeps the heroine undressing a good deal of the time but kills her only two song numbers for her fans by subordinating them to comedy business. As matters wind up, the success of the picture depends much less on whether you like Miss Grable than on whether you're a Sturges addict, and it appeared that a very large proportion of the preview audience which saw the picture at the Alex theatre in Glendale were not.

Running time, 77 minutes. Adult audience classification. Release date, not set.

CIO 'Collarites' Step Up Loew's Picketing

Picketing of Loew's theatres by the Screen Publicists Guild and the Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild, which has been in effect since May 3 and is aimed at all major companies who have not signed contracts with the CIO unions, was stepped up last night on the eve of the resumption of negotiations.

Termed by a union spokesman as a demonstration of strength in the event of a strike, the picketing extended to Loew's houses in Manhattan, Bronx and Brooklyn, with a concentration in front of the State on Broadway. The joint strategy committee has been authorized to hold a strike ballot if present negotiations fail to obtain contracts.

The deal covers four years ending with the 1949-50 program and embraces these territories: Egypt, Sudan, Eritrea, Abyssinia, Cyprus, Syria, Lebanon, Transjordania, Iraq and Iran. Dollar Film will operate out of exchanges in Cairo, Beirut and Baghdad.

Malik is in the final stages of a second deal covering the same territory with SRO on a basis which is reported to represent a new approach in negotiations between an American distributor and a foreign buyer.

Malik, who has been in New York from Cairo for several weeks, will leave for Hollywood over the weekend, but will return here for another stay.

mistic" about the success of the new set up. He pointed out that while theatres previously enjoying key runs had clearance reduced seven days after first-run downtown, many of the new key runs have had clearances slashed 21 days. It is also possible for theatres which had been operating at 42-64 days under former clearance, to negotiate for a key-run at a 21-day availability.

Minsky stressed that each zone operated as a separate situation. He also emphasized that all problems evolving from the plan would be tackled as they turned up by discussions with the theatremen.

All advertising, publicity and exploitation plans for the new policy were prepared at a special meeting at the 20th-Fox exchange, under the direction of Harry Freeman, local 20th-Fox publicist.

Large cooperative ads will appear tomorrow in the Philadelphia Inquirer, Bulletin and Daily News and the theatres' own campaigns include flash lobby and front displays, trailer clips telling of the earlier runs, distribution of heralds in merchant tie-ins, lobby displays with indorsements by the theatre managers, extra posters, special children's matinees, store window displays, neighborhood newspaper promotions and other media.

Added incentive will be awards by Fox of a $100, $50 and a $25 U. S. bond to the theatre managers conducting the most outstanding campaign for the opening.

ness, totaled $26,307,280—about $4,839,000 or more than 15 per cent below the $31,146,236 collected in April, 1948. The April collections were even more sharply below the $34,716,074 collected in March, reflecting February business. In 1948, business went up from February to March.

The over-all first quarter showing was not too bad, however, since collections in both February and March, reflecting January and February business, exceeded those of the comparable 1948 months—by about $1,500,000 in February and about $4,250,000 in March. Collections for the February-through-April period, reflecting first quarter business, totaled $87,930,738 this year, compared with $87,018,546 in 1948.

Collections for the first four months of 1949, reflecting December, 1948, through March, 1949, business, totaled $113,697,536, a shade below the $115,707,001 collected in the first four months of 1948.

Penn Sues Majors For More Damages

PHILADELPHIA, May 25. — Harry Norman Ball, trustee for the Penn Theatre, Ambridge, Pa., has filed supplementary damage proceedings in his anti-trust suit against Paramount, Loew's, RKO, 20th Century-Fox and Penn Ware Corp., in U. S. District Court here.

The original suit heard in Pittsburgh Federal District Court last July, resulted in a judgment against the defendants. In the supplementary complaint Ball charges the Penn has continued to suffer losses because of the defendant distributors' conspiracy and asks unspecified damages.

Council Delay

the Council's program and a formal request for a postponement of next week's meeting is expected to be made by the BFPA immediately thereafter, it was understood yesterday in top industry circles here and in London.

Meanwhile, no call has been issued here for a meeting of the Motion Picture Export Association to hear the report and recommendations of its subcommittee appointed to study the Council's program. Ratification by the MPEA is required before next Wednesday to permit the American members of the Council to proceed further with the negotiations.

See Program's Collapse

Postponement of next week's Anglo-U. S. Council meeting is generally interpreted here as signalling the collapse of the program developed by the Council in Washington as a means of improving relationships between the British and American industries. The program met with unexpected criticism and opposition on both sides of the Atlantic, and indications are that both its British and American proponents are not averse now to dropping either the entire program or its major phases which drew the greatest fire.

That could leave an emasculated, face-saving program limited to the suggestions of cooperation on mutual problems in the future, promotional and institutional campaigns for films in Britain and other world markets, exchange of technical skills and technical information between the British and American industries, and promotion of a single world film festival.

Quota Action Dooms Plan

All of the trade suggestions pertaining to playing time for American films in Britain, subsidies for British producers, elimination of the American unit playing program in Britain, reduction of the British quota, liberalization of the remittance agreement and of the permitted uses for blocked sterling of American companies in Britain presumably would be knocked out.

Trade authorities here say that the British government's reply to the State Department refusing to consider a lowering of the quota in itself deals those provisions a death-blow, since they all are based upon playing time for American films in Britain and could not be realized without a change in the quota.

SIMMP Hits

had notified House Small Business Committee chairman Patman and Senator Claude Pepper, who was once chairman of a special Senate Committee studying problems of American small business abroad, of his objections to the proposals as violating the Webb-Pomerene Act.

The press release reiterated Arnall's position that the Act was never intended to permit American film producers to "join forces with their potential competitors abroad and thus cartelize world trade in their respective industries," and that MPEA approval of the Films Council propsals would violate the anti-trust laws. It also reaffirmed SIMPP's opposition to any plan to "subsidize foreign production at the expense of American motion picture producers."

Patman is out of town, as is anti-trust chief Herbert Bergson. Attorney General Tom Clark's office said Arnall had not seen Clark.

vestigation to uncover motives behind Britain's rejection of U. S. appeals to end its quota discrimination against American pictures.

The MPIC statement was addressed to the State Department in Washington and to all California Congressmen and Senators and urges "prompt action to give effect to the warning by Representative Cecil R. King, speaking in the House on April 13 that he would ask the Ways and Means committee to make such an investigation."

The statement said, "It has been amply demonstrated that dollar shortages have little or no bearing whatever on the high British quota."

The statement was signed by Cecil B. DeMille, MPIC chairman, with the following organizations represented: Motion Picture Producers Association, Hollywood AFL Film Council, Screen Actors Guild, Screen Writers Guild, Screen Directors Guild, Independent Office Workers and the Society of Motion Picture Art Directors.

UK Quota Protests

including protests from Roy Brewer on behalf of the AFL Film Council and from Cecil B. DeMille on behalf of the Motion Picture Industry Council. Several demanded Congressional investigations.

Some discussion on the film quota will undoubtedly come on the Senate floor next week when the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act is debated.

Sen. Knowland has an amendment pending to strike back tariff-wise at Britain and other countries discriminating against American films and other products. On the other side of the Capitol, it was learned that Rep. King has been sounding out top members of the House Ways and Means Committee on the possibility of that group investigating the situation after it finishes debate on Social Security.

Allied Agenda

today by Allied general counsel Abram F. Myers. Other points include a survey of what should be done about television, discussion of whether the time is ripe to propose to distributors revision of certain of the standard clauses in exhibitor contract forms, possibilities of improving screen trailers "to reflect more accurately the type of picture being advertised," whether distributors are living up to the commitments made to a special Allied committee on forced percentage playing and the need for any further action in this field. Also, any improvement in the print shortage situation, and "what is being done or can be done to secure lower insurance rates for theatres and what will be the effect of the switch to non-inflammable film."

Myers will report on the prospects of getting an admission tax reduction at this session of Congress, and possibly make recommendations on this point.

Membership committee chairman Niles will report on the progress of the drive to get 1,000 new Allied members. S. E. Samuelson will deliver a caravan committee report and Edward A. Lachman will discuss negotiations with the Army on competition from post theatres. Reports will be delivered on the status of the Brandt and Berger cases and other matters relating to ASCAP, and on work to date for the 1949 convention at Minneapolis. The bond drive and industry shorts also will be discussed.

The board meeting will be in the Hotel Adolphus in Dallas. On Sunday afternoon, there will be a general Caravan meeting. On Wednesday, June 1, Allied Theatre Owners of Texas will hold its convention, which Allied board members and officers will attend. The entire program will be climaxed Wednesday night with a testimonial banquet in honor of H. A. Cole, Texas Allied president.

Myers said the board would discuss what the new 20th-Fox selling policies actually mean and whether any action should be taken by Allied on them. He has notified all Allied members to bring to Dallas whatever observations they have on changes in 20th-Fox's selling policy, and said he was especially hopeful that some indication of whether the company was following the original Lichtman plan or the new Skouras policy would come from exhibitors in Minneapolis and Chicago.

Myers will leave Washington tomorrow for Boston for the convention of the Independent Exhibitors of New England, and will go to Dallas from there.

British Would Meet Again Next August

Strong Opposition to Proposals Seen Factor

LONDON, May 26.—As expected, the British Film Producers Association, following its emergency meeting here today, announced that it had decided unanimously that it is necessary to postpone until next August the meeting of the Anglo-American Film Advisory Council which had been scheduled for next Wednesday and Thursday in New York.

'Would Like to See the Quota Lifted': Clift

"I would like to see the quota lifted so I can be a showman again and play the pictures which the public likes." Thus did Sir Sydney Clift, head of Clifton Cinema Circuit of England, express himself on his arrival here from London yesterday on the SS Queen Elizabeth.

Clift was formerly national president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association.

Clift, who is here to "see product" and do some "fact finding," declared that he does not think England can meet the quota satisfactorily. He pointed out that "if quality is sacrificed for quantity, it will kill the public desire for pictures."

Clift declined any comment on the Anglo-American Film Council meetings. Expressing concern, however, he said laconically that he wanted to "see that the independents are not squashed out." On Clift's agenda for next week is a talk with Eric Johnston.

Two Senators, Rep. King Ask for Written Protest

WASHINGTON, May 26. — Two Senators and a member of the House said today that the State Department should make a formal written protest to the British government on its film quota reply, and should demand that the British meet immediately with our government to negotiate reduction or elimination of the quota.

The Senators were Republican Senator Knowland and Democratic Senator Downey, both of California. The Representative was California Democratic Rep. Cecil King. King has already written acting Secretary of State Webb to this effect, while Downey and Knowland will make public tomorrow a joint letter to Webb along these lines.

Meanwhile, the Motion Picture Association of America made plans to carry new protests to the State Department. Joyce O'Hara, executive assistant to MPAA president Eric Johnston, will confer tomorrow with international trade policy chief Winthrop Brown and film chief Merrill Gay. Sometime later—probably next week—Johnston will call on Webb.

Lipton also has yet to name a permanent successor here to Al Horwits, whose post as Eastern publicity manager for U-I has been filled temporarily by Phil Gerard since Horwits was transferred to the Coast some months ago as head of U-I publicity at the studio.

Meanwhile, plans for permanent establishment of Lipton's headquarters at the home office have been deferred indefinitely in consequence of studio conferences between Nat J. Blumberg, president, and William A. Scully, vice-president and general sales manager. Scully is expected back from the Coast next week.

box-office." Maintaining that the theatre must be the center of community life, Dembow urged exhibitors to do "their utmost to cement good will with patrons."

Walter A. Lapham, merchandising manager of the New England Confectionery Co., addressed the convention on the extent to which theatre candy sales can be increased, and urged exhibitors to "take advantage of the tremendous opportunity candy offers in merchandising possibilities."

The general economic situation and prospects were examined for the meeting by Arthur C. Babson of Babson's Reports.

Film Ad Cuts Are Hit By New Jersey TOA

PASSAIC, N. J., May 26.—The annual convention of the New Jersey chapter of the Theatre Owners of America yesterday decried the action of those producers and distributors who have curtailed advertising. Companies' cessation of such promotional efforts, the organization held, "will be injurious to the successful sale at the box-office of good productions."

The convention re-elected Maury Miller president of the New Jersey TOA. The 1949-50 leadership also includes Harold Eskin, vice-president; Frank Fowler, secretary; Adam Adams, treasurer, and Walter Reade, Jr., national delegate.

Following the business session, Gael Sullivan and Edward Lachman, national exhibitor co-chairmen of the industry's division of the bond drive, were honored by the New Jersey organization at a testimonial dinner in the Ritz Restaurant here. Harold Blumenthal was general chairman of the convention.

SIMPP, British Aim

the Films Council participated in a conspiracy in violation of law when it met to map recommendations for a new trade formula within the framework of the U. S.-British film agreement of March 11, 1948.

On the second front, Arnall and Rubin are seeking a means of opening that agreement and for that purpose again will see the State Department's Winthrop Brown, head of the commercial policy division, and Merrill Gay, head of the motion picture division. The British refusal to consider a reduction in the present quota will be protested by Arnall.

Arnall took up the overall matter with Borkland, Brown and Gay on Wednesday when the formal State Department complaint of the SIMPP was presented. He said here yesterday that he is convinced that the Films Council activities to date constitute a "clear cut violation of law" but he declined to elaborate on the "procedures" to be taken up next week in the capital.

Arnall disclosed that Rep. Emanuel Celler, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, has been apprised of SIMPP's "cause of complaints" this because the Celler group is now considering procedures to strengthen the anti-trust laws.

Arnall to Address C. of C. in Colorado

Ellis G. Arnall, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, is scheduled to deliver the keynote address at the meeting of the U. S. Junior of Commerce in Colorado Springs, Col., on June 9. An invitation was extended by Robert Graham, vice-president of the organization, and general counsel for the Pacific Coast Independent Theatre Owners. Now in New York, Arnall will leave for Atlanta today to spend the weekend at home, after which he will go to Washington and then to the Coast.

ponement, suggested that the next meeting be held early in August in London. American members are expected to hold out for an American location for the second meeting, with the third meeting in London as originally scheduled.

American delegates, Johnston declared, will be happy to discuss at the next meeting a British suggestion to increase the Council's membership from six to eight members. The British suggestion was made to get Sir Philip Warter of A.B.P.C. on the Council.

MPAA officials had no comment on whether the British proposal would be used to add a representative of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers to the American membership of the Council, in turn. A basic phase of the spirited opposition by SIMPP to the Council's activities has been the contention that it did not and could not speak or act for independent producers who are not represented on the Council.

MPEA Fills Polish Post

British Would Meet

gram, devised in Washington last month, sought to commit the three British circuits, of which ABPC is one, to guaranteed playing time for American pictures although that company was not represented on the Council, nor did the British Council members have any authorization to act for it.

The reason given for the postponement of next week's meeting in a cable sent to Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Association president and member of the Council with Barney Balaban and Nicholas M. Schenck, was that it is made partly necessary by the absence of Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, from London. Wilson, currently visiting in Canada, was consulted on the Council's proposals prior to his departure. His reaction at the time was negative, or, at best, noncommittal.

Actually, the BFPA's ranks are as divided on the Washington proposals as are those of organized American producer-distributors. Several members, vigorously critical, contended that Rank, French and Korda had no authority to act for or to purport to represent all British producers.

Union Joins Protest

Elsewhere today, Tom O'Brien, head of the powerful National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employes, joined the protestors asserting that the only persons efficiently represented at the Washington meeting were the stockholders in Rank's and similar companies. His obvious inference was that the Washington proposals appear to have been directed toward the assistance of Rank and Korda only.

Vigorously condemning the implication that big combines represent the entire British industry, O'Brien threatened to raise the matter in the House of Commons, of which he is a member, if an attempt is made to commit trade unions, independent producers or exhibtors to the Washington program without prior consultation with them.

Board of Trade officials remained noncommital but smiled satirically at any suggestion that Wilson had given the big producers even the slightest mandate to negotiate on behalf of the government.

Generally, the trade here considers all major or controversial phases of the Washington program as permanently killed irrespective of whether or not the Council meets in August.

'IA' 'Collarities' Aid Greater N. Y. Fund

A drive in behalf of the Greater New York Fund opened yesterday at the home offices of Warners, Universal, Paramount International, United Artists, Republic, DeLuxe Laboratories, Pathe Laboratories, Consolidated Film Laboratories and several music companies, under the auspices of the IATSE Motion Picture Home Office Employes Local No. H-63, whose "white collarite" members have been asked to contribute.

Russell Moss, H-63 executive vice-president, said that it has been suggested that each member of the local donate at least an hour's pay.

performance," and said that the British government was trying to evade the quota issue by "hiding supinely" behind the Joint Anglo-American Film Council.

"The quota is not an industry matter," King said. "It is a government matter. It was proposed by the British government and jammed through Parliament under the whip of the British government, which cannot now duck its responsibility."

The California Congressman, a member of the Ways and Means Committee and an advocate of an investigation of the film quota by that committee, said that the British had affirmed that the quota did not violate the general agreement on trade and tariffs. King said that it did, and that "the State Department will be derelict in its duty if it permits the British to get away with this unilateral interpretation of the agreement."

The Downey-Knowland letter, it was learned, takes a similar tack. It expresses "severe disappointment" at the British stand, and says that the refusal to do anything is "rough treatment." The suggestion that further action be held off until the Anglo-American Council finishes its deliberations is attacked on the ground that the British government set the quota and the British government must reduce or end it.

Finally, the letter reminds the State Department and the British that the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act is pending before the Senate.

FCC Hopes

bands. The FCC announcement is expected to serve as a very strong green light for the entire television industry.

The Commission, with only Commissioner Frieda B. Hennock dissenting on the grounds that it is "premature," said it would issue a proposed rule on the whole matter within six weeks. The proposed rule will not only cover the contemplated use of channels in the UHF band but will also contain a revised allocation for the present VHF band. Alternatives can be submitted by the industry for a 30-day period, and then there will be a hearing and oral argument. All possible speed will be used, the Commission said, "but it does not appear that final decision can be made before late fall." Some observers believe it may be considerably longer. The Commission said it proposed to use approximately one-half of the lower portion of the UHF band for regular television operation on six megacycle channels. This band is now used for experimentation. The upper portion of the band will be kept open for television research, including, presumably, theatre television.

Quota Attack To Be Pressed Before Senate

California Senators Tie It to Trade Act Debate

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Senators Sheridan Downey and William F. Knowland, both of California, have served notice that they intend to "go into the British film quota thoroughly" when extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act goes before the Senate.

The Act may come up this week if Finance Committee Chairman George is out of the hospital. If he is not, it may be put off for some time.

Knowland, a Republican, has an amendment pending to strike back tariff-wise at any country discriminating against American films and other products. Downey, a Democrat, said he is not so sure that this amendment is the best way of dealing with the situtation and is himself looking about for a solution.

Downey and Knowland made the statement about going into the quota on the Senate floor in a letter to Secretary of State Dean Acheson. They

Tax Reduction Not Expected Before 1951

Back from Washington following conferences with government officials, Theatre Owners of America executive director Gael Sullivan reports that the Administration apparently will not be ready until January, 1951, to examine the possibility of lifting the wartime emergency theatre admission tax. Ten per cent of the present 20 per cent Federal admission tax was applied as an emergency levy during World War II. The "emergency" period ended when President Truman abandoned his special wartime powers.

In making his observation, Sullivan hastened to point out, however, that there are "too many imponderables" still to be considered in attempting to analyze excise tax cut prospects. There are, he said, too many contin-

'Youth Week' May Inspire U.S. Program

Theatre Owners of America's "Youth Week" program, tentatively scheduled for late next October, may serve as the springboard for a general government-sponsored anti-juvenile delinquency program in 1950, TOA executive director Gael Sullivan disclosed here upon his return from Washington where he conferred with U. S. Attorney-General Tom C. Clark on "youth week" plans. Sullivan said Clark is pondering the possibility of a Federal Security Administration drive against youth crimes, patterned somewhat along the lines of TOA's "youth week" drive.

AFM Will Meet On Coast Next Week

American Federation of Musicians president James C. Petrillo and his staff will leave here this week for Los Angeles, where the organization's annual convention will be held June 6-10 at the Civic Auditorium.

An AFM spokesman at the weekend indicated it is unlikely that the convention will take up the subject of the AFM's contracts with Hollywood producers, since the present pacts will expire in August thus leaving plenty of time meanwhile for the union to draft demands.

AFM's present contract with the eight majors provides for employment at the studios of 339 musicians, while the pact with the independent producers stipulates that the latter shall provide 30,000 man hours of work yearly.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Columbia president Harry Cohn received 9,795 shares of Columbia common stock in March "in satisfaction of indebtedness," according to a report filed by the Securities and Exchange Commission on transactions in film stocks by company officers and directors. The report covers the April 11 to May 10 period, although in some cases the transactions are from earlier months.

At the end of the period Cohn held 151,122 shares of common and 400 shares of preferred. Jack Cohn in April bought 400 shares of Columbia common in his own name for a total of 48,968, and 100 for his trust ac-

MPA Mapping Broad Public Relations Plan

Need Active Cooperation Of Exhibitors Locally

An ambitious program of industry and public relations, national in scope and local in organization, is reliably reported to be in the planning stages by the Motion Picture Association.

The program is tied in with the current reorganization of the MPAA's community service and exhibitor relations departments under Francis Harmon, vice-president in charge of the New York office of the association.

It contemplates the cooperation and active participation of all national and regional exhibitor organizations and of numerous civic groups currently working with the MPAA's community relations department around the country. Harmon has been named by Eric Johnston to head up the two coordinated departments and will be in charge of the eleborate industry and public relations program.

The public relations phase of the plan resembles last year's public re-

Cities Fail to Levy Tax

NASHVILLE, May 30.—No move has yet been made by Tennessee cities to levy the two per cent amusement tax made available to local authorities when the state legislature reduced the tax from four per cent to two. Receipts under the tax would range from $30,000 to $75,000 annually in major cities.

Reviews

"Johnny Allegro"

(Columbia)

"JOHNNY ALLEGRO" is a polished melodrama, full of familiar ingredients, but always touched with excitement. George Raft, Nina Foch and George Macready provide the triangle around which the melodramatic and frequently violent events rotate. The film warrants good playing time in those situations which are receptive to hard-boiled adventures of this kind.

Raft, in the title role, portrays an old-time underworld character who has registered a good service record in the war and now operates a swank florist shop. As it develops, Federal authorities are following a mysterious lady who is the suspected key to a huge counterfeit ring. Since this lady, Miss Foch, has already gotten to know Raft, the authorities decide to enlist his aid to get at the center of the ring. Raft is allowed to help Miss Foch in a getaway, and there follows a flight by air and sea until an island hideout is reached in the Caribbean Sea. It is here that Macready, Miss Foch's husband and master of the island, is introduced. A man of cultured tastes and sadistic impulses, he loves to toy menacingly with a bow and arrow. Eventually, it is learned that Macready is in cahoots with a foreign power to flood this country with worthless money. But it is inevitable that he discovers Raft's true identity, and when this finally happens the film reaches its climax in a primitive game of hunter and hunted.

The screenplay, by Karen DeWolf and Guy Endore, pads out the action with a series of melodramatic events, ending in Macready's death. The finale has a Coast Guard rescue of Raft and Miss Foch from the island and the pair setting out to face the future together. Irving Starr produced, from the story by James Edward Grant; Ted Tetzlaff directed.

Running time, 81 minutes. Adult audience classification. For June release.

MANDEL HERBSTMAN

"Mighty Joe Young"

(Arko Productions—RKO Radio)

IT looks as though RKO Radio has the exploitation picture of the year in "Mighty Joe Young," a John Ford-Merian C. Cooper presentation about a gigantic, 50-foot-tall African gorilla's adventures as a Hollywood nightclub entertainer.

A gargantuan frolic in the realm of serio-comic impossibility, this Arko Production received from director Ernest B. Schoedsack a most appropriate tongue-in-cheek treatment. Witness these sample incidents: the anthropoid hero of the title having a good time for himself dunking Primo Carnera like a doughnut into a pool on the super-colossal nightclub's stage; the gorilla wrecking the joint like a nightclub has never before been wrecked by a gorilla on a binge; "Mighty Joe" winning with ease a tug-of-war with 10 of the country's famous strong men; a nocturnal highway chase between the police and a big truck which is used in an attempt to get the gorilla back to Africa safely after the animal's nightclub rampage; "Mighty Joe" vindicating himself by performing spectacular rescue work in an equally spectacular orphanage fire.

Of course, it is all done with a trick camera and processed shots, as was the case in making "King Kong." In this one, technical creator Willis O'Brien gives a good account of his capabilities in making the huge mechanical beast perform like a living creature. The story, briefly, has famous nightclub owner Robert Armstrong persuade pretty African farm girl Terry Moore to let him feature her and her pet, "Mighty Joe," in his new club. Although apprehensive, she agrees, and the consequences are as outlined above. In the end Miss Terry, cowboy Ben Johnson with whom she falls in love, and "Mighty Joe," who can toss lions around as though they were kittens, return to Africa to live happily ever after. The cast is rounded out by Frank McHugh, Douglas Fowley, Denis Green, Paul Guilfoyle, Nestor Paiva, Regis Toomey, Lora Lee Michel and James Flavin. The picture has plenty of laughs, plenty of thrills, and, viewing it as an exploitation "natural," it should do plenty of business.

Running time, 94 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

Two-City Premiere For 20th's 'Spring'

PITTSBURGH, May 30.—Twentieth Century-Fox's "It Happens Every Spring" opened here Friday at the J. P. Harris Theatre with the film's stars, Linda Darnell, Paul Douglas and Jean Peters, flying in from St. Louis, where they had participated in a three-day buildup of the premiere there. The picture will open this week in 62 theatres in Illinois, Kentucky and Missouri.

The St. Louis send-off was a civic affair, with the Hollywood contingent launching the city's Poppy drive. They were guests of the Cardinals at Sportsmen's Park, and were hosts at a cocktail party attended by civic notables and representatives of the press from cities as widely separated as Houston in the South and the Atlantic Coast.

'Joan' Ahead 25% in High-Scale RKO Run

Multiple booking of Walter Wanger's "Joan of Arc" in the RKO Metropolitan New York circuit of 34 theatres at advanced scales resulted in an overall increase of 25 per cent above normal business for the five-day run ended Saturday night.

Admissions were under average but more than compensating for this were the uniform roadshow prices, 76 cents to six P.M. and $1.20 for evenings, which represent an increase of about 60 per cent over regular scales. Last increased admission-film to play the circuit was "Best Years of Our Lives," about two years ago.

It is said here that "Joan" revenue at the RKO theatres was about 25 per cent under the "Best Years" mark but that the marked change in general economic conditions makes the comparison more favorable than the figures alone would indicate.

Quota Attack

called on Acheson to formally protest the British film quota to the British government and to insist that the British negotiate with our government or reduce or eliminate the quota. The letter said that Article Four of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade specifically provides for such negotiations.

The Downey-Knowland letter is similar to one sent to Acheson last week by Rep. King, California Democrat and head of a committee appointed by California House members to get action on the film quota.

The California Senators in their letter said that the British attitude has "seriously damaged the cause of reciprocal trade," and that the British stand "is singular evidence of a spirit of non-cooperation." The letter termed the quota "highly restrictive" and "directed against American motion pictures."

It said the British reply to the State Department was "most unsatisfactory and clearly reveals the British intention not to abide by the spirit and purpose of solemn obligations under international agreements."

As did King, Downey and Knowland attacked the British government for trying to "evade" the quota issue by suggesting that government action be held up pending the outcome of the meetings of the Anglo-American Film Council. "Private industry can do nothing about the quota," they wrote. "This is a governmental matter. Only the British government can provide relief from its onerous provisions. The British government is responsible, and no evasive words can shift that responsibility."

Merrill C. Gay. O'Hara informed the State Department officials of the postponement of the Council meeting.

Brown, Gay and O'Hara discussed various possibilities of action for the Department, following the British reply. The Department is still studying the answer.

Meanwhile, the State Department forwarded to Johnston official notice of the British answer. A letter from Acting Secretary Webb outlined the terms of the British position. The letter was virtually identical with one sent Rep. Cecil King, California Democrat, and released by him last Thursday.

Johnston will return to New York on Wednesday and will return to Washington from there.

Ontario Censors Put UK Films First

TORONTO, May 30.—British and foreign films are praised and Hollywood's product covertly censured in the annual report of Ontario's Motion Picture Censorship and Theatre Inspection branch.

The report said British-made films were "mature in outlook, socially significant and highly entertaining. Technically they are on a high plane, with detail work and color outstanding."

British producers displayed a "sense of responsibility in producing at considerable cost a great number of short subjects to meet demands for children's entertainment," the report stated. Increased popularity of the foreign film was due to elements of appeal not usually found in Hollywood products. "European dramas are unusually realistic," it was said.

The board of censors reviewed 606 motion pictures from the United States, Great Britain and Continental Europe. About 25 per cent required cutting before being exhibited. One subject was rejected entirely.

Tax Cut Prospects

gencies that can influence the Administration's attitude toward tax cutting.

For example, Sullivan said, if the current Foreign Ministers' meeting in Paris were to bring about improved relations between the East and the West, America's defense budget of $30,000,000,000 might be considered eligible for trimming to the point where excise cuts would be in order perhaps before 1951.

The present session of Congress, like the previous one, has seen the introduction of a large number of bills providing for elimination of the emergency admission tax. However, it is commonly accepted, Sullivan said, that such measures will not meet with favorable Congressional action while the Administration withholds approval of excise tax cuts.

Warner gave away 5,000 shares, dropping his holdings to 421,500; trust accounts hold another 21,500 shares. Albert Warner gave away 3,300 shares and bought 200, dropping his personal holdings to 441,800; there are 21,000 in his trust.

damages sought. Filing attorney was Monroe E. Stein of New York.

The new action was described as bringing up to date the first suit's charges, including one of conspiracy to deprive the plaintiff's National Theatre, Louisville, of first-run product. The initial action, instituted in 1946, carried allegations covering a period ending with that year, while the new litigation covers the period between 1946 and the present.

Last March 14, presiding U. S. Circuit Court Judge Augustus N. Hand and associate judges Harrie B. Chase and Charles E. Clark reserved decision on the plaintiff's appeal of Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell's decision in favor of the defendants. The Circuit Court's ruling is expected to influence the future conduct of other private anti-trust actions in the industry, as it may determine whether a final decree in the industry's anti-trust suit can be used in private actions.

MPAA Mapping

lations campaign conducted by the Theatre Owners of America, although it would be on a far more ambitious level. It would, however, employ the TOA idea of supplying constructive information, news and feature copy for local "planting" by exhibitor organizations, individual theatre operators and other agencies friendly to the industry.

In addition, speeches or material for public addresses would be supplied to the same agencies; aid would be provided local exhibitors in forming film committees consisting of representatives of influential civic organizations in their communities and full material for answering critics of the industry would be furnished.

Organization of the industry public relations network might be patterned after the War Activities Committee, which Harmon directed during the war years.

See Closer Liaison

The trade relations phase of the program would call for closer liaison between the several branches of the industry and among the members of each branch. Johnston and Harmon presumably will be available for exhibitor meetings around the country to discuss industry problems and to answer exhibitor questions. A trade practice plan for exhibition also is understood to be a possibility within the framework of the program.

Official details of the plan, however, are not available yet as the entire project is only now in its formative stage. An MPAA announcement released for publication today said only that "It is expected that in the future the community relations of the industry will be exhibitor-centered to a far greater degree than in the past."

Field Posts Dropped

The announcement confirmed that in line with the reorganization of the MPAA's community service and exhibitor relations departments, Irvin Deere, Duke Hickey and Alice Field were being dropped for economy reasons, their field posts in the Midwest, Eastern and West Coast areas being eliminated and their functions being shifted to New York under Harmon. Mrs. Field headed the MPAA previewing service in Hollywood which, with the corresponding service operated in New York, represented 12 national organizations cooperating with the MPAA. Those not already functioning in New York have agreed to appoint preview committees from the New York area for designated terms of service. Preview reports previously published both in Hollywood and New York will emanate exclusively from here after July 1. Mrs. Field had been with the MPAA's Hollywood office for 20 years.

Deere has been working out of Chicago for 15 years and Hickey has had a roving assignment with MPAA since 1942. Both were associated with the community relations department.

90,097 Film Houses in the World: U. S.

Increase of 11,123, Or 14% in Two Years

WASHINGTON, May 31. — There were an estimated 90,097 motion picture theatres operating in 116 countries throughout the world on Jan. 1, 1949, an increase of 11,123, or 14.1 per cent, over the 1947 estimated total of 78,974 theatres, the U. S. Commerce Department reported here today.

Approximately 72 per cent of all features shown in these 90,097 theatres were U. S. productions.

The report, made by film chief Nathan D. Golden, said that part of this increase, especially in Europe and the Far East, represented reopening of theatres closed by the war, but that

Most of the business in connection with the negotiations is being carried on by telephone among officials of Pathe Industries here and First National Bank of Boston executives who will decide whether control of E-L, Pathe subsidiary, will go to Small.

First Runs Still Off; $60,000 for 'Tulsa'

New York first-run business continues sluggish for the most part. The long weekend was credited with only a minor assist. Theatremen in the Broadway area are said to be giving some thought to new cuts in admission scales as a possible answer to box-office doldrums but definite decision on this has yet to be reported. Only change so far is the re-scaling at the Park where beginning today more lower-priced seats will be added but with roadshow prices to be continued.

"Tulsa" is going fairly well at the Capitol where the first week, with Eddy Howard and Marilyn Maxwell on stage, probably will result in a gross of $60,000. "Beautiful Blonde from Bashful Bend" with Al Bernie topping the stage show at the Roxy should provide a moderately healthy first week's take of $78,000. "The Younger Brothers" with Bobby Byrne's orchestra on stage should give the Strand about $37,000.

20th's Philadelphia Plan Grosses Mount

Twentieth Century-Fox's earlier runs plan in Philadelphia has made it possible for "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College" to out-gross "The Snake Pit" and "Sitting Pretty" by more than 20 per cent in that city, the company reported here yesterday following the first five days' application of the Philadelphia plan.

Compared with the other two pictures, both being previous high grossers, "Belvedere" grossed from $1,000 to $5,000 more over the five-day period in a majority of the Philadelphia theatres, the company said.

"The new distribution plan has done everything we expected of it," A. W. Smith, Jr., 20th-Fox distribution vice-president, declared here yesterday.

Precedent Is Threatened In FTC 'Blimp' Decision

WASHINGTON, May 31.—A Federal Trade Commission trial examiner has recommended to the full Commission a proposed order that United Artists cease and desist from distributing or advertising "Colonel Blimp" in any abridged version without clearly disclosing that the film is a cut version.

If the order is upheld by the full Commission, it can have wide effect on film advertising, for while directed to the one film, the order would serve as a precedent for all films.

Examiner Abner E. Lipscomb ruled that UA's methods of advertising a cut version of "Blimp" led many people to believe that it was the full, un-

Trend Toward Earlier Runs For Drive-ins

May Move Up to First Chicago Availability

Distribution executives and attorneys are taking a dim view of complaints of exhibitor organizations—Iowa-Nebraska Allied was the most recent—against early runs for competitive drive-in houses.

While not committing themselves to any blanket policy, film company spokesmen here maintain they are called upon under court order to sell in non-discriminatory manner and if the drive-in represents a bigger money outlet than the competitive conventional house, the drive-in is issued the earlier license.

In some instances the open houses actually have successfully bid against regular theatres, but this is only in smaller towns so far. In Ocean City, DALLAS, May 31.—The Allied States Association national board recommended a "wait and see policy" in regard to the recent 20th Century-Fox proposed increase in film rentals at a meeting here today held in conjunction with a Texas ATO convention. The board also reaffirmed previous stands on competitive bidding and behavior of film stars.

In a resolution the board urged regional ATO organizations to follow the 20th-Fox plan closely in order to take any action deemed necessary, again voiced opposition to competitive bidding and added a recommendation that in instances where pictures are sold by bids those bids should be open for inspection. HOLLYWOOD, May 31.—Mitchell Pantzer, operating the Independent Poster Exchange, Philadelphia, has started suit alleging libel, in the Federal District court in New York City against Herman Robbins, president of National Screen Service Corp., asking $500,000 damages.

Pantzer, who is also president of the Independent Poster Exchanges of America, stated: "In my capacity as president of the Independent Poster Exchanges of America, I had written National Screen, objecting to excessive increases and charges demanded of the independent poster men, for standard accessory advertising material, which National holds under exclusive production and distribution rights for most of the film producing companies.

"In reply," said Pantzer, "Robbins wrote a letter to members of the Independent Poster Exchanges of America. In this letter, Robbins villifies and libels me with statements that have absolutely no foundation of truth."

National Screen Service officials here declined to comment yesterday on the Pantzer suit.

An application by the Sign Pictorial and Display Union, Local 230, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, AFL, for an election among employes at the RKO Radio home office now in the jurisdiction of the Screen Publicists Guild, has been rejected by Charles T. Douds, New York regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, it was announced here yesterday by the SPG.

Following the SPG announcement, however, a spokesman for a group of RKO Radio employes who have resigned from SPG reported that Douds' decision was "temporary," and that the regional director has asked the NLRB in Washington for a "direct ruling" on Local 230's application.

Queried on the matter, the NLRB here reported that Douds dismissed the petition as "inappropriate," but that an appeal of the decision filed by Local 230 is currently being considered by the NLRB in Washington.

Argentine Grosses At All-Time Peak

Theatre business in Argentina continues to spiral upward following a wartime boom, with the result that grosses at present in that country are 25 per cent greater than they were at the wartime peak. This was reported here yesterday by Argentine producer-director Hugo Fregonese and secretary of the Argentinian Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Charles De Cruz, both of whom are beginning extended U. S. visits. The Argentinians estimated that their country's theatre business this year is 10 per cent better than last year.

"Johnny Belinda," they said, has broken all box-office records in Argentina. Other pictures whose box-office performances were cited are: "Arch of Triumph," "Sitting Pretty," "Street With No Name," "Naked City," "The Search," and "Open City."

Fregonese, who will endeavor to close a U. S. distribution deal for his recently-completed "Hardly a Criminal" before he returns to Buenos Aires three months hence, will seek to persuade American producers that Argentina offers many advantages for those making pictures abroad.

Johnston Wants 'Private Action'

In an address before the Canadian Club today, Johnston spoke against what he termed "big" government, holding it results in "little" people, "little" business organizations. He said: "We are wondering today if we can't come up with solutions to our social and economic problems by group action. We are wondering if we can't get the security our people are clamoring for through private action—by a concert of minds and action among management and labor."

New York 1st Runs

Palace looks like a duplicate of the first with $29,000, a very handsome figure, again apparent; eight new acts and "Slightly French" comprise the show. "Jigsaw" is doing fair business at the Mayfair which has about $14,000 in view for the first week.

The large number of New York visitors at the weekend helped to boost returns at the Music Hall where "The Stratton Story" with a stage show is headed for a nice third and final week's gross of $127,000; "Edward My Son" will open at the Hall tomorrow.

"Sorrowful Jones" will open at the Paramount on Sunday, the first Sunday opening at the house in its history, to succeed "Manhandled" which, with Janet Blair and Jan Murray on stage, completed its first week with about $56,000, which is fair income.

"Home of the Brave" is holding to a robust pace at the Victoria where a big $23,000 is in prospect for a third week. "We Were Strangers" is losing ground at the Astor with about $12,000, rather slow, indicated for the fifth week. "Lady Gambles" is doing well enough at the Criterion which looks for $20,000 in a second week.

"Champion" continues to be one of the better holdovers with $16,000 likely in a good eighth week at the Globe. "Johnny Allegro" is at the Rivoli, having moved in on Sunday to replace "One Woman's Story." House did about $10,500 for the last five days of "Story," including business on Sunday when a "preview" of "Allegro" also was on the bill.

UA has filed exceptions to almost the entire trial examiner's ruling and proposed order. The FTC attorneys have filed their final briefs with the full Commission, and when the UA brief comes in from Attorney Edward Raftery, the Commission will set a date for final argument in the case.

Raftery is said to be not so much interested in "Blimp" itself, it having been played out for some time, but is said to be concerned primarily with the precedental aspects of the FTC ruling.

90,097 Film Houses

a large portion were new theatres built during the past two years.

Seating capacity as of Jan. 1, 1949 was 48,750,147, compared with 42,667,411 two years earlier.

Golden said that U. S. films today are facing their greatest and most intensive competition from European and Latin American films, made often with government assistance, and that therefore "precise information as to the potentialities of the individual markets" was more than ever necessary. The report praised the contribution of American films abroad as "silent salesmen" for other American products. It quoted a message by American Vice-Consul Blackman, in Trinidad, that "during their period of currency restrictions when American merchandise is very scarce, the American film industry renders a real service to American industry as a whole by keeping American products and new developments before the public." Says Golden: "Trade still follows the film."

Middle East Gains Most

The huge growth in theatres, Golden declares, shows "the desires of people the world over for their most economical entertainment—the motion picture." He praises Hollywood for continuing—despite quotas and other restrictions—"the flow of U. S. films to the four corners of the world, enabling the peoples of those countries to see how a true democracy lives and plays."

U. S. figures in the Golden survey are based on the MPAA figures. Other figures come from Embassy and trade sources overseas.

Biggest increase during the two-year-period came in the Middle East, where theatres increased from 1,876 to 2,676—or 42.6 per cent. The only drop reported was a 2.2 per cent decline in the U. S.—from 18,765 to 18,351. (The Motion Picture Association of America total shows distributors' film rental accounts. A Quigley Publications' market study of one year ago reported 16,880 regularly operated theatres open more than three days a week and more than three months a year).

Europe Jumps 20%

The Far East reported a 30.4 per cent increase, from 2,701 theatres to 3,523 theatres. The Atlantic Islands were up 36.0 per cent—from 122 to 166. Europe showed a 19.9 per cent jump—from 43,652 theatres to 52,344. South America had a slim 6.9 per cent increase—from 4,672 to 4,994—and Mexico and Central America increased from 1,653 to 1,952 or 18.0 per cent.

The Caribbean area's theatre increased 8.8 per cent from 659 to 717. The South Pacific's went from 2,080 to 2,268, a 9.0 per cent jump, and Africa's theatres went from 1,171 to 1,281, an increase of 9.4 per cent. Canada's theatres increased 13.5 per cent—from 1,493 to 1,695.

U. S. films naturally chalked up the best record in the U. S. and Puerto Rico, where they accounted for 95 per cent of the screen time as of Jan. 1, 1949. In the Caribbean area, they accounted for 82 per cent, in the Atlantic Islands for 81 per cent and in Mexico and Central America, Canada, and the South Pacific for 75 per cent. In South America, U. S. films got 64 per cent of all screen time and in Africa, 62 per cent.

Runs for Drive-ins

Cal., for one, the Mid-Way Drive-in won out in bidding against the Margo Theatre for an RKO first run. Previously the Margo had been playing seven days after downtown San Diego. Although this is a single situation, there is a general trend toward earlier availabilities for drive-ins in many sections, it is said here.

Drive-ins in many sections being a seasonal operation, distributors in all cases are not too anxious to sell away from standard houses despite immediate revenue gains, for the obvious reason that they are dealing with the standard runs all year around. Product splits have been one means of settling differences in large measure but not entirely. Negotiation of run and competitive bidding are resorted to by some distributors when "problems" are encountered.

No Hard-and-Fast Rules

Any hard-and-fast rule governing film company selling to drive-ins could hardly be adopted, it is said. Each situation must be examined on a strictly individual basis with consideration given to rental yield, the existence of substantial competition and, of course, policy of the theatre. Distributors for example were averse to selling on percentage to one drive-in which recently set admissions at one dollar per car regardless of the number of occupants.

Auto-ramp houses have become a definite part of exhibition in the past two years particularly and still are mushrooming throughout the country, according to some distributor records which list close to 2,000 of them. That they are making inroads on the grosses of the conventional houses would seem to be evidenced by the number of theatre organizations which have adopted resolutions aiming to relegate them to last run. Some in the industry incline to the belief that the drive-in draws an almost entirely new patronage.

Some Yield Top Money

Importance of the open-air stands as top money yielders is underlined by success of the three top ones in and near Chicago, particularly Jack Barger's Twin Drive-in in Oaklawn, a suburb, where $30,000 is not an unusual week's gross, it is said. The Twin is now playing first-run after the Loop and may move up to full Chicago first-run this summer, it is believed in some quarters here. This would hardly involve a top film which normally plays the Loop first and the Twin second, however, but rather an attraction not likely to get the two runs. The consideration here would be whether the Twin alone on first-run could mean a better deal for the distributor than a Loop house on first-run.

$2-Million New York Trust Suit Names 4

RKO, 20th Century-Fox, Warners and Universal were named defendants in a $2,250,000 triple-damage anti-trust action filed yesterday in U. S. District Court here by Beathecorp, Inc., and Salana, Inc., former and present operators, respectively, of the Beacon Theatre here.

Beathecorp asks triple damages totaling $900,000 and charges violation of the anti-trust laws between 1944 and 1946, the period during which it operated the Beacon. Salana asks triple damages totaling $1,350,000, and makes the same allegation for the period of 1946 to the present.

Plaintiffs claim the defendants refused to contract for first-run pictures at the Beacon during the respective periods of operation, and maintain the house is superior to nearby RKO theatres. It is charged that the defendants entered into franchise, cross-licensing, clearance and other agreements in violation of the anti-trust laws.

Johnston Officiates At Quigley Awards Ceremony

Substantial Rise in Studio Employment

Hollywood, June 1.—Studio employment increased substantially in April, according to the monthly report of the California Labor Statistics Bureau which showed an index figure of 73.1 per cent on a scale which regards the 1940 average as 100. The March figure was 67.8, and April a year ago was 79.5.

Weekly earnings were down, however, from March's $97.50 to $94.74 with the average work week down from 40.4 to 39.3 hours.

At an informal ceremony held yesterday in the executive quarters of the Motion Picture Association of America office here, MPAA president Eric A. Johnston presented to Mrs. Alice N. Gorham of Detroit and Willis Shaffer of Atchison, Kans., the Quigley Showmanship Awards for 1948.

To Mrs. Gorham went the top prize, the Silver Grand Award, for her campaigns in Detroit as advertising-publicity manager for United Detroit Theatres. Clearance Suit Up In U.S. Court Today

PHILADELPHIA, June 1.—What is believed to be the first case involving clearance-and-run between towns to be heard in a Federal Court since the U. S. Supreme Court decision in the Paramount case last year, will come up in U. S. District court here tomorrow when the anti-trust suit against seven major distributors, is heard before U. S. Judge William H. Kirkpatrick.

Plaintiffs are Jack H. Greenberg and Ann Greenberg on behalf of the New Harbor Theatre in Stone Harbor, N. J., due to open around June 21.

Charging conspiracy and discrimination among the defendant distributors to prevent him from playing pictures in the New Harbor on territorial release and alleging that the defendants withhold product from his theatre until 14 days after Wildwood, Greenberg is asking first-run teritorial standing for the New Harbor on the basis that there is no substantial competition between theatres in the two communities. Stone Harbor is 14 miles from Wildwood by open roads, seven miles by toll bridge.

Hunts Theatres, operating in Wildwood and Cape May, have filed a petition to be a part defendant in the suit.

(This Is America—RKO Radio)

The art of trimming excess poundage from milady's figure is a big business in the U. S. The latest issue of This Is America turns to this "pursuit of glamour" by the ladies and shows how it has become an important industry in this commercial world. Some of the best sequences of the film show how the women go through what looks like ancient tortures in order to look a little more like the beguiling model in the magazine advertisement. The subject for the most part focusses on one housewife's efforts to follow in the rules of Goddess Diana. Running time, 18 minutes.

Birmingham Ban on 'Snake Pit' Asked

LONDON, June 1.—Birmingham Mental Hospital authorities have asked 200 local licensing justices to ban "The Snake Pit" in that city's 200 theatres. They contend that some depicted scenes are unknown in British mental hospitals and that the picture, if shown, would discourage voluntary treatment by patients and would unnecessarily upset relatives of patients.

At the Odeon Theatre here 20th-Fox has provided a prologue to the film, spoken from the stage, assuring the audience that the conditions shown relate to America only. The company plans to have the prologue recorded and added to the picture.

Abram F. Myers, Allied States general counsel, spoke in a most optimistic vein about the future of the industry under the "new freedom." Other speakers were Fred Harrington, Nathan Hamins, Ben Berger and H. M. Richey, M-G-M exhibitor relations head, who saw the concern of the industry not so much the division of the amusement dollar from within, but in attempts of outside competitors to divide it from without.

Following the session a testimonial dinner to Cole was held in the Adolphus Hotel.

All convention delegates wore yellow ties emblazoned with a likeness of Cole. He was host to the delegates at a barbecue supper at his home here Monday night.

Special Overseas Award for his campaigns in Santiago, Chile, where he is manager of the Metro Theatre, received a scroll from Arthur Pincus, assistant advertising-publicity manager of Loew's International, who is on a South American tour.

Johnston took the occasion of the awards, which are conducted annually by the Managers' Round Table of Motion Picture Herald, to cite the vital role of showmanship in motion picture industry achievement.

"Yes," he told the winners who were present, "it's the showmanship— the special kind of showmanship that has stirred and stimulated our industry into greatness. It's the showmanship that created and developed a marvelous new art form and spread the impact of it around the world."

Johnston added: "That's the kind of showmanship that's an old but still exciting story to Martin Quigley. It's symbolized this year in the Quigley Awards to Alice N. Gorham, Willis Shaffer and Guillermo Echazu. It's a symbol, too, of what the movies mean to the millions."

Following the award presentations to Mrs. Gorham and Shaffer, Johnston volunteered to give them an award in his own behalf—autographed copies of his latest book, "We're All in It."

Representing his father at yesterday's ceremonies was Martin Quigley, Jr., who pointed out during conversations about the nature of the awards that the Quigley organization "is just a clearing house" for the showmanship campaign. Actually, he remarked, the advertising-publicity leaders in distribution and exhibition who serve as judges of the entries are the persons who make the awards possible.

Johnston, who took obvious pleasure in participating in the ceremonies, brought forth a round of laughter when, as the time for making the presentation to Mrs. Gorham approached, he quipped: "Well, I'm perfectly willing to carry coal to Newcastle by giving silver to Gorham."

Cameramen from the Associated Press, International News Photos and Quigley Publications photographed the presentations. Also on hand at the presentation ceremonies were Walter Brooks, director of Manager's Round Table; Tom Waller of the MPAA information office here, and Mrs. Shaffer.

Niles Hits Companies' Saturation Selling

ANAMOSA, Ia., June 1.—"No matter what you call a rose, it stinks the same," writes Charles Niles, Iowa-Nebraska Allied executive, regarding mass releasing deals and saturation selling, in an Allied Caravan bulletin sent to members of Allied of Iowa-Nebraksa.

"You can't blame the film companies if they can get the little exhibitors to pay 40 per cent and even 50 per cent (in film rentals), but every time you do this you are kicking the companies selling you a fair flat-rental right in the teeth."

Winner of 20th Century-Fox's "Most Beautiful Blonde" contest will be selected on the stage of the Roxy here tonight. Contest is in conjunction with "Beautiful Blonde from Bashful Bend." Prizes include a trip to Havana.

MPAA Italian Loan

nental European manager, is in Rome at present to participate in the signing of the agreement. The loan, viewed by the MPAA here as a compromise arrangement, was conceived by association leaders several months ago when Italy's production industry was exerting extreme pressure on the Italian government and legislature to take measures to halt the "flooding" of the Italian market with U. S. films.

Under terms of the agreement U. S. film companies will make loan payments to the Italian government's bank which, functioning much along the same lines as the Film Finance Bank in England, will provide individual Italian producers with funds. Advocates of the loan, both American and Italian, had expected the arrangement to be operative long before now; however, the MPAA official explained, Italian lawmakers persisted in offering "crippling" amendments which, while they have not been adopted, served to stimulate delaying discussions.

Loans Interest-Free

The loans will be interest-free, it is understood, but retention of the Italian market, described by the MPAA as "highly lucrative," is expected to be adequate compensation for the U. S. distributors. Repayment will be made to the American companies along with regular remittances. Details in this connection are expected to be announced when the agreement has been signed.

Among the advantages which the agreement will have for the American industry, the MPAA spokesman said, will be its assurance that only consistently high grade American films will be shown in Italy henceforth, thus increasing the prestige of the U. S. industry in that country. Makers of inferior quality pictures, he explained, are likely to find it financially unprofitable to turn over to the Italian government $3,000 or $4,000 per picture shipped to Italy since the earning power of poorer quality pictures is relatively low.

The MPAA official pointed out that responsibility for much of the so-called "flooding" of the Italian market with U. S. pictures lay with Italian distributors, who bought up large numbers of old and inferior American films for release in Italy. Italian producers urged restrictive measures since Italian-made films cannot compete successfully in that country against even inferior Hollywood pictures.

Distributors Step Up TV Trailer Plans

Initial Replies to TOA Appeal Report Progress

Distribution is decidedly receptive to Theatre Owners of America's bid for expanded use of television trailers to promote feature pictures, and appears to be anxious to experiment in that sphere of promotion, according to the first replies received by TOA executive director Gael Sullivan to the letters of advocacy he sent recently to company presidents.

RKO Radio, for one, expects soon to have trailers "adequate for serious testing of their effectiveness in any market where the television station is prepared to do a top quality scanning job," vice-president John M. Whitaker, replying in behalf of RKO president Ned E. Depinet, told Sullivan.

Exhibitors in Boston are expected to feel the effects of the strike on weekend business.

Columbia Profit on Upswing; $452,000 Earned in 39 Weeks

Columbia Pictures reports a new profit of $452,000 for the 39 weeks ended March 26, 1949, equal to 34 cents per share of common stock, against a profit of $855,000, or 96 cents per share, for the corresponding period in 1948.

However, showing a continued improvement this year, Columbia earned $304,000 for the 13 weeks ended March 26, 1949, compared with a profit of $171,000 for the 13 weeks ended Dec. 25, 1948, and a loss of $23,000 for the 13-week period ended Sept. 25, 1948.

The profit of $304,000 for the 13 weeks ended March 26, 1949, is substantially above the similar 1948 period, when $130,000 was earned.

Phila. Plan Brings More Playing Time

Results of the new 20th Century-Fox distribution plan in Philadelphia, giving earlier runs to de luxe neighborhood houses, are giving the company's "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College" extra playing time in several of the 28 theatres which booked "Mr. Belvedere" to test the new plan, the company's home office reported here yesterday.

UK Quota No 'Technical' Violation, Acheson Says

Schine Decision Seen Coming Next Week

Washington, June 2. — Schine attorneys and Justice Department officials held further consent decree talks today, with indications that the crucial period in the talks is coming up next week.

"We'll know shortly whether we're going to get a decree or if the whole thing is going to fall through," a Justice official said, adding that the case has been "dragged out too long."

HOLLYWOOD, June 2.—Answering Hollywood protests of British quota restrictions, U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson has stated that "in a technical sense" the British government cannot be charged directly with violation of the general agreement on tariffs and trade.

Acheson, however, was not unsympathetic to the Hollywood complaints. He characterized the British quota as "unduly protective in nature and not wholly justified as a dollar-conserving measure."

Acheson's observations were made in an exchange of correspondence with Cecil B. DeMille, chairman of the Motion Picture Industry Council,

Wilson Claims Canada Wants More UK Films

Gave Johnston No Hope For Quota Reduction

LONDON, June 2.—Harold Wilson, president of the British Board of Trade, just returned from a visit to Canada, pointedly claimed at a meeting with the press here today that he had found a general desire among Canadian exhibitors to show British films, even in key situations where, currently, there are no British-controlled theatres.

Wilson related that he had had conversations with Famous Players-Canadian and Odeon Theatres executives on the subject, and has under consideration points raised by both. He did not explain what the "points" were.

Insider's Outlook

By RED KANN

"THE RED SHOES" enters its 28th week at the Bijou, New York, today and continues indefinitely. Tickets are being sold 10 weeks in advance. No other engagement in the United States compares with New York, although the film has been doing extremely well in many cities to the west of the Hudson.

Chiefly, however, it is significant to report that J. Arthur Rank is the authority for the comment this attraction is faring better here than in England. If there is a conclusion—and one is clearly indicated—it is that British films suffer neither from prejudice, boycott nor indifference in the American market when they reveal on the screen the kind of content which American audiences are willing to buy.

There are those in England submitting to nationalism, politics and self-aggrandizement who will not acknowledge this fundamental truth. It is contrary to their belief or to their interest to do so, but the inevitability of the conclusion in no wise is countermanded by such a viewpoint.

It has been set down in this space many times that the American exhibitor and the American public will not be conscious parties to geographic or political barriers where motion picture entertainment enters. The determining equation is the ability of the product offered to deliver satisfaction.

This cannot be repeated too often.

The conveniences of these times are so thoroughly accepted as part of the scenery that few bother to give them thought. Efficiency in transportation, in communications and in the other services simply is taken for granted. It's that way in the picture business, too.

There is the case of National Screen Service which is telling part of its story of service in advertising copy. It's quite a story, based on authenticated and carefully checked records ranging over a period of nine weeks, and it shows:

That 1,263,072 units [accessory items and trailers] were shipped in the four weeks ending May 7, or an average of 315,768 a week. Since the bulk of this material is rented to exhibitors, it had to be returned, checked, sorted and put back on the shelves. On this basis, the totals soared to 631,536 units a week during the period covered. Incidentally, these four weeks were average.

"Many exhibitors have told us that they did not previously visualize the gigantic extent of the detail work performed in our exchanges week in and week out," observes Herman Robbins, NSS president. "The volume of items handled is an index not only to the extraordinary activity in our shipping rooms, but also to the many preparatory and recording steps necessary to support the orderly flow of this profusion of advertising material."

NSS is proud and excited over this demonstration of nationwide service—a 'round-the-clock, throughout-the-year service, by the way—and with every justification.

Mrs. Willis Shaffer, wife of the Atchison, Kansas, showman who is winner of the Bronze Grand Award in the Quigley Showmanship Awards for 1948, wonders how much of an impression the placque will make on their seven-year old Stephen.

The kids at grade school have been swapping information about their fathers and what they do. Stephen has been telling the others, "My father does nothing. He's with the theatres."

Hollywood, where cycles flourish like the night-blooming honeysuckle, appears to be heading toward gambling and gambling joints as a source of story material.

Grassroots America won't appreciate the trend.

Sir Sydney Clift of the Clifton Cinema Circuit arrived from London a few days ago. He also arrived at the heart of the Anglo-American situation with these words:

"I would like to see the quota lifted so I can be a showman again and play the pictures which the public likes."

AFM Convention to Attack Federal Tax

SAN FRANCISCO, June 2.—One of the major acts of the American Federation of Musicians when it meets in convention here next week will be to urge removal of the 20 per cent Federal tax on amusements, James C. Petrillo, AFM president, declared last night upon his arrival by plane from New York.

"It will be a great help for everyone in the amusement industry if the 20 per cent tax is done away with," Petrillo asserted, adding that "actually, if the tax is reduced to five per cent everyone, including the government, would get more than they do now."

Petrillo will preside at the convention which will open Monday at the Palace Hotel here. Some 1,100 delegates from all over the country are expected to attend.

The AFM chief dispelled rumors that he intended to retire from the union's leadership. "As long as my health permits and the delegates want to elect me I'll be glad to serve," he said. "Somebody wants to get rid of me," he added as an afterthought, "but it's not the musicians."

"Any Number Can Play"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) Hollywood, June 2

THE gambler role given to Clark Gable here is a good deal more to his measure than most of those which he has had in recent years, and this should please his immense following; the talent alongside makes good marquee news. Included are Alexis Smith, Barry Sullivan, Frank Morgan, Mary Astor, Edgar Buchanan, Lewis Stone, Wendell Corey, Marjorie Rambeau, Leon Ames and Darryl Hickman. Production is by Arthur Freed and direction is by Mervyn LeRoy. All this name power appears more than enough to carry a story that needs some carrying into the high gross category.

The story, scripted by Richard Brooks, from a novel by Edward Harris Heth, sums up in the incidents of one evening the career of a rugged, but honest, gambler who has come up the hard way in 20 years from adventurous obscurity to proprietorship of a luxurious gambling house in an area where gambling is legal. The picture opens with his doctor warning him that he has a heart condition grave enough to warrant his leaving his business for a while, and he decides to do so. He changes his mind when his son, who has been carefully reared to college age, refuses to go along because, as he finally reveals flatly, he is ashamed of his father's occupation. A dishonest brother-in-law whom the gambler has housed and employed, a rich woman who has been in love with the gambler for years, another rich woman who admires him for his stalwart character, an oldtime gambler down on his luck, an immensely wealthy friend who has determined to break the bank, and two sharpies who try to stick up the house in the final sequences figure in events of the evening which are collectively responsible for a change in the son's attitude and for the happy ending in which the gambler gives the institution to his faithful employes.

Gable's performance is the most typically Gable of his post-war career, and most of the other characters are individually strong under the seasoned LeRoy direction. A script that undertakes to follow too many characters and leaves several story lines dangling like unfinished business costs the picture a good deal in unity, tension and impact although considerable suspense is attained in the key sequences depicting the gambler's defense of his holdings against a millionaire who has hit a terrific run of passes at the crap table. Something of point is sacrificed also by the failure to make it clear whether the gambler quits the business for his family's sake or because his heart has gone bad on him.

Most of the action takes place in the gambling house, which is operated on a policy of impeccable honesty, and the picture in the whole, as well as specifically in one stretch of dialogue, makes quite a case for legalized gambling although registering firmly enough also that the majority of gamblers do not fare very well in the long run and are not happy people.

Running time, 113 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, not set.

Set 2-City Premiere For UA's 'Dan Patch'

Twin world premieres of "The Great Dan Patch," film based on "the wonder horse" of harness racing, have been set for July 20 at Minneapolis and Indianapolis, cities where the horse reached the peak of its career almost half a century ago.

W. R. Frank, Minneapolis exhibitor who produced the picture for United Artists release, is at present on a nation-wide promotional tour of exchange centers. He is showing a 10-minute film, made in 1905, that depicts Dan Patch and other great harness racers of the time in action.

Circuit Ad Heads to Talk Para. Campaign

Representing a cross section of circuits in the United States and Canada, 11 theatre advertising-publicity directors will participate in a two-day conference on the promotional angles of Paramount's forthcoming production, William Wyler's "The Heiress," Max E. Youngstein, Paramount advertising-publicity director, announced here yesterday.

Youngstein said the conference, to be held next Tuesday and Wednesday here, is aimed at developing, with the assistance of exhibitor representatives, maximum sales appeal for the picture. The Paramount policy of advertising consultant meetings long in advance of a picture's release, Youngstein said, is to "make available to every Paramount account the most effective tools necessary to insure top merchandising of the company's product."

A. W. Schwalberg, distribution vice-president, described the meetings as "a most progressive step toward developing maximum merchandising plans by this type of cooperation between exhibitors and distributors."

Participating in the discussions will be the following theatre ad-publicity heads:

Alice N. Gorham, United Detroit Theatres, Detroit; Frank Starz, Interstate Circuit, Dallas; Margaret Goodrich, Greater Indianapolis Amusement Co., Indianapolis; William Hollander, Balaban and Katz, Chicago; Everett C. Callow, Warner Theatres, Philadelphia; Harry Browning, New England Theatres, Boston; Seymour Morris, Schine Circuit, Gloversville, N. Y.; James Nairn, of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto; Harry Mandel, RKO Theatres; Dan Terrell, Loew's, and Harry Goldberg, Warner Theatres.

Settle Phila. Suit Until Final Hearing

PHILA., June 2.—Agreement was reached today in U. S. District Court here in Jack H. Greenberg's motion for a preliminary injunction in his anti-trust suit against seven majors on behalf of his new Harbor Theatre, Stone Harbor, N. J., pending final hearing. Federal Judge William H. Kirkpatrick continued the final hearing until late summer.

It is understood that in return for a reduction in the clearance enjoyed by Wildwood Theatre over the Harbor, Greenberg is waiving certain rights pending the final hearing. The agreement was reached over objection of Hunts Theatres, Inc., operator of theatres in Wildwood and Cape May. Greenberg declared he intends to open on June 24 under the agreement, but indicated that he will press the suit to gain territorial release.

He emphasized that Hollywood's techniques and equipment are unsurpassable. Pasternak will leave for Hollywood Sunday to start work on a new film, "Nancy Goes to Rio."

that "we have been giving careful thought for months as to how we can use television to increase motion picture audiences and not decrease them." He added that Republic will use video trailers in connection with the world premiere of "The Red Menace" at the Los Angeles and Hollywood Paramount theatres on June 9.

Replying in behalf of Universal-International president Nate J. Blumberg, Maurice Bergman, U-I executive, wrote that U-I looked with favor on the TOA proposal, and, reminding that the company already has made use of video trailers to a limited extent, he indicated that plans are being considered for further development of that promotional technique.

The RKO Radio reply pointed out that that company's actual use of the media "has been very limited because its effective coverage has been limited to so few markets." However, the company is "very much interested in the possibilities of television as a media for the advertising and promotion of motion pictures," Whitaker stated.

"We are now trying to develop trailers which we think will be capable of doing an effective selling job," Whitaker revealed. Apparently having in mind possible American Federation of Musicians objections, the RKO Radio vice-president said: "Naturally the trailers will not be as effective without music as they would be with a music track and the pictorial material using clips from the film will not be as interesting as specially-made trailers would be. However, if the media is as effective as we think it should be the added expense of special production will be justified and by that time the music question may be resolved."

Sullivan declared yesterday that at every one of the many meetings of TOA regional affiliates he has attended lately exhibitors expressed a "keen and lively" interest in television trailer promotion.

Yates pointed indirectly to the possibility of TOA's becoming a clearing house for video trailer information. "It would be a splendid idea," Yates wrote, "if you would send us the details of your experience, results obtained and suggested trailer requirements by those using television trailers for exploitation purposes. We will let you know what results we have with 'The Red Menace' as soon as possible."

Radio Editorializing Rules Set By FCC

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The Federal Communications Commission ruled today that radio broadcasters can editorialize so long as the editorializing is clearly identified as such and so long as it is part of the "more general presentation of views or comments on the various issues."

The Commission's decision was a major, though not complete, relaxation of its January, 1941, Mayflower decision, which said the "broadcaster cannot be an advocate." It will be binding in television as well as on radio broadcasting.

"All Over the Town"

(Rank—Prestige—Universal-International)

TOUCHINGLY simple and sincere, this British production should prove quite acceptable to American audiences. It is a quiet, competently-made film about a small-town newspaper reporter who launches a crusade against important advertisers only to encounter unforeseen consequences that serve to restore his lost faith in the common people.

Exploitation-wise, the picture has the advantage of starring Sarah Churchill, daughter of the former British Prime Minister, who turns out to be a fine actress and a woman of pleasing looks. Her performance blends in very well with that of Norman Wooland, her leading man, who in his manner and bearing could pass for an American and who should further contribute to the film's favorable acceptance here. Other parts are portrayed with excellence, in a fine script by Derek Twist and Michael Gordon who gave the picture a wry sense of humor along with some drama and a romantic touch. Twist also directed this Ian Dalrymple Wessex Production.

The story depends mostly on the individual actors in their clever and mild satire on British small-town characters. Wooland returns to his pre-war job at the Tormouth Clarion, the town's only newspaper, but is kept from picking up as of old by his war-replacement, Miss Churchill, with whom he proceeds to fall in love. He proposes and she accepts under the condition that they move to London and start anew, and to her more exciting, life.

Then Wooland is offered a partnership in the paper and decides to stay. He starts by panning a locally-produced operetta and intrigue closes his plant when he tries to expose the selfish plan of a town councillor for rebuilding the sea-shore part of the community. Helped by Sarah, he puts out the paper anyhow, in time to convince the people that he is right.

Running time, 87 minutes. General audience classification. For August release.

contract clause," SPG declared here yesterday in a statement.

"The action came after an SPG subcommittee had met with the distributors in a negotiating session, only to come up against a deadlock on job security, union security and other provisions which the union is asking for in its new contract with the movie outfits," the Guild said.

"At present both SPG and SOPEG are maintaining picket lines in front of Loew's theatres here five nights a week, including week-ends. The action of the representative council bears heavily upon a motion passed at a joint membership meeting of the SPG and SOPEG which authorized the joint strike-strategy committee to call a strike vote," according to the SPG statement.

it for three extra days, with a possibility of going a full second week. The Bandbox, which normally holds a film for two weeks, will go into a third and may keep it for a fourth. From the Mayfair, the film will go into a moveover first-run at the Devon.

Reports from Philadelphia also show that the new plan brought in between 25 and 30 per cent more business than under the former 28-day availability, with some theatres showing a gross of 40 per cent over their previous figures, the company said.

that "it would be hard for them to avoid the British problem."

There has been some speculation that MPAA might invite Arnall to participate in the next Anglo-American Film Council meeting. The two presidents might also discuss posibilities for joint action to arouse Congressional sentiment for modification of the film quota.

The SIMPP president said Johnston had invited him, he was happy to accept and "hoped that something worthwhile for the industry would come of it."

Arnall and SIMPP general counsel Robert J. Rubin were here today, renewing their complaints at the Justice Department on the Anglo-American Film Council agreement. Arnall will visit State Department officials tomorrow to protest the quota, the agreement, and to stress the need for government action to aid the industry abroad.

Arnall saw Commerce Department film chief Nathan Golden this afternoon on foreign problems. Tomorrow, in addition to the State officials, he expects to see some Congressmen and Senators, and possibly Attorney General Tom Clark. Today the two SIMPP officials met with anti-trust chief Herbert Bergson and his assistant, Herbert Borkland.

Wilson Claims

Picture Association of America president, Wilson was asked whether he had given Johnston any encouragement over the possibility of a reduction of Britain's film quota.

"No," Wilson replied with emphasis. "That wasn't what I went to Canada for."

Asked whether he gave Johnston any indication or encouragement for continuation of the Anglo-American Films Council talks, Wilson replied that that is a matter for Johnston and the British Film Producers Association.

Wilson said there was no attempt to negotiate anything during his brief talk with Johnston because, in Wilson's view, "there is nothing to negotiate."

"We had only a general and indeterminate discussion of films, plus an exchange of pleasantries," he said.

The Board of Trade president said he regarded motion pictures as the smallest item in the overall picture of his Canadian mission, which he said was designed primarily to boost exports of British goods generally to Canada.

Famous Players Head Confirms Wilson Talks in Toronto

TORONTO, June 2.—J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of Famous Players Canadian Corp., confirmed reports that he talked with Harold Wilson, head of the British Board of Trade, during his visit here, but gave no further information.

Wilson is said to have suggested that Famous Players book a block of British features where there is no Odeon competition, but it is understood that the deal is not being considered because profits from British playdates would only serve to bolster the J. Arthur Rank group, which includes theatres competing with the Fitzgibbons circuit.

excerpts of which were made public by DeMille today.

DeMille said in his reply, "Our feeling here is that, in the light of previous understandings, there still is good ground for questioning any contention by the British government that no commitment has been made in the general trade agreement which would pertain to the British quota and related problems."

Nine producer, talent guild and labor union groups last week, through the MPIC charged that "undisclosed motives behind these persistent breaches of faith tend to bolster the suspicion that the present British government policy primarily is aimed at stifling the American film industry in the world market." The charges were made in the form of a statement which was sent to the State Department and to all California congressmen.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers and the Motion Picture Association of America have agreed to "work closely together in all areas and in all situations where American motion pictures are treated unfairly or are discriminated against by foreign governments."

The two organizations also believe that "it is the responsibility of the State Department to intercede in all cases where foreign governments impose unjust quotas, restrictions or other burdens."

Specifically, they have agreed to jointly urge the State Department to send "a new and vigorous protest to the British government on the British film quota."

Majors Again Challenge Momand Case Decision

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The decision of the Boston Court of Appeals in the Momand case "is in no sense a holding that a specific intent to injure is necessary as a prerequisite to any recovery in an anti-trust action," the U. S. Supreme Court was told by eight major film companies.

The companies have filed in opposition to a petition of A. B. Momand that the high court should reconsider its earlier refusal to review the Boston court's decision against Momand. The lower court threw out Momand's 11-year-old anti-trust case against Universal, Loew's, M-G-M, 20th Century-Fox, Vitagraph, RKO, United Artists and Columbia.

Actor Edwards Cites 'Home' as Milestone

Hollywood has lagged behind public receptivity insofar as films with courageous themes are concerned, and proof of that lies in the way the public and the press have received the picture, "Home of the Brave," it was declared here at the weekend by James Edwards, who plays the Negro soldier in the film. The occasion of Edwards' remarks was a testimonial luncheon for him at Sardi's Restaurant here on Friday following an official City Hall reception by Manhattan Borough President Hugo Rogers and other civic leaders.

Now that Hollywood has taken the step it has with the production of "Home," it is to be hoped that it will continue to make pictures of that calibre, Edwards declared.

Aim at 400 Dates for 'Joe' in New England

BOSTON, June 5.—RKO Radio has already lined up 125 dates against a probable total of 400 for the New England area premiere of "Mighty Joe Young," on July 13. Cropper expects a total of 250 in addition to Max Westebbe's Albany branch, the Buffalo office headed by John Chinell and Barney Pitkin's New Haven exchange.

A campaign is now in preparation under the supervision of Terry Turner, national director of exploitation.

"Take One False Step"

(Universal-International)

"TAKE One False Step" is a top grade melodrama, artfully contrived, briskly paced, and permeated with a pleasant trace of comic flavor. It presents William Powell in the lead as a college professor who suddenly turns sleuth in order to clear himself of suspicion of murder. Offering fine supporting roles are Shelley Winters, Marsha Hunt, James Gleason, Dorothy Hart and Felix Bressart. The picture shapes up as sound box-office merchandise.

The one false step taken by Powell, a former Army colonel and now a married respectable citizen is his going into a bar where he meets Miss Winters. Scheming, and with pronounced personality disturbances, she was a former sweetheart of Powell's. Before long, Powell is lured into a rendezvous with Miss Winters, after which she mysteriously disappears, casting suspicion upon Powell. With the police hot on Powell's trail, he travels up and down the state of California trying to find Miss Winters and unravel the enigma. To intensify matters, Powell has been bitten by a dog which supposedly had rabies. Powell's plight becomes a dramatic race against time in which he has to elude police and clash with gangsters to get to the bottom of the disappearance.

Miss Hunt is appealing as Powell's friend who helps him in his thorny dilemma. As the detectives on the case, Gleason and Sheldon Leonard give enjoyable though orthodox characterizations, while Miss Hart adds a satisfactory vignette as Powell's wife. Powell finally works his way into the clear after successfully exposing an underworld syndicate. The whole affair leaves him with an unlikely story to relate to his wife, but Professor Powell, in the finale, dedicates the new university he worked so hard to launch and all ends merrily. The flippant view of marriage shown in Miss Winter's role puts the film in an adult classification. Under Chester Erskine's direction, there is some clever and imaginative use of the camera. A Chester Erskine production, the screenplay was provided by Irwin Shaw and Erskine, based upon "Nightcall," a novel by Irwin and Chester Erskine.

MANDEL HERBSTMAN

"Broken Journey"

(Rank—Eagle-Lion)

A FORCED airplane landing atop a glacier slope in the Alps and the desperate efforts of passengers and crew to survive their temporary isolation provide a fairly different story line in "Broken Journey." The J. Arthur Rank offering has its moments of interest and excitement but too frequently stock devices are used in the staging where touches of imagination and resourcefulness might have served to distinguish the production. Consequently, it is just another average British picture.

Phylis Calvert, Margot Grahame, James Donald, Francis L. Sullivan and Raymond Huntley are the principal players in Robert Westerby's original screenplay which focuses on as diverse an airborne group as one is likely to encounter anywhere. The 13 persons aboard the plane include a frustrated publicist, an iron-lung patient, a temperamental screen star and a self-centered opera star. It is the man in the iron lung who is the hero, sacrificing his own life by giving up his breathing-apparatus batteries so that the plane's dead radio can be used to summon help for the others. What romance there is involves Miss Calvert, as the hostess, and Donald, the co-pilot. Other players are David Tomlinson, Derek Bond, Guy Rolfe, Sonia Holm, Grey Blake, Andrew Crawford and Charles Victor. Kenneth Annakin directed the Sydney Box production for Gainsborough.

Running time, 89 minutes. General audience classification. GENE ARNEEL

"Against the Wind"

(Rank—Eagle-Lion)

A STORY of British underground workers that is skillfully different from the general run of wartime spy melodramas is presented in J. Arthur Rank's "Against the Wind." The picture offers an almost documentary-like outline of a London training center for sabotage agents, but at the same time the story is presented in human terms. Simone Signoret, who was introduced to filmgoers here as the title girl in the French importation "Dedee," heads the cast along with Robert Beatty and Jack Warner. The film is one that shapes up as enjoyable adult fare for the discriminating.

The plot brings together an assortment of personalities who are working to sabotage the enemy. The effect of their dangerous activities upon their personal lives forms the basis of the story. The highlight is reached in a harrowing but successful attempt to rescue one of their group from the Nazi enemy.

Charles Crichton's direction keeps events moving at a relentless pace. A romantic angle between Miss Signoret and Gordon Jackson is woven into the story. Beatty as a priest dedicated to working against the enemy, gives a touching performance. Miss Signoret is appealing and gives depth to her central role. The title is derived from a line by Byron. A Michael Balcon production, it was based on a T. E. B. Clarke screenplay. Sidney Cole was associate producer.

Running time, 88 minutes. Adult audience classification. For June release.

in industry circles as a major victory for Arnall, who has been stressing this point ever since he took over as SIMPP president. MPAA officials, however, were quick to declare that Johnston, too, has always urged State Department action in the case of unjust quotas, and in June, 1948, called on the Department to act against the British 45 per cent quota.

Predict Council's Demise

The agreement was also taken to mean that the last nail had been driven into the coffin of the Anglo-American Film council. MPAA spokesmen said that there were still large areas of "mutual production problems" left to the Council, without any discussion of quotas or currency restrictions, but predictions were made that the Council will never meet again.

Johnston had invited Arnall to meet to discuss a possible joint approach, but industry observers had not expected events to run as smoothly as apparently they did. Both MPAA and SIMPP officials agreed that the entire meeting was most cordial and straightforward. Other meetings will be held from time to time, when there are other "mutual problems where there may be areas of cooperation benefiting the industry as a whole."

Quota Reply 'Unacceptable'

The joint statement issued at the end of Friday's meeting declared, with respect to the British quota, that the British government's rejection of the State Department's recent oral protest is "completely unacceptable."

"Because the quota is so clearly unreasonable and excessive and runs directly counter to the spirit and purposes of the trade agreements between Britain and the U. S., we feel that the State Department should immediately and vigorously take up the matter again with the British government to relieve this intolerable situation," the statement said. "The British quota is a matter that far transcends the interest alone of the American motion picture industry. It threatens the American national policy of fostering and promoting freer and expanded international trade and should be of serious concern to our government."

MPAA officials participating, in addition to Johnston, were Francis Harmon, Joyce O'Hara, John McCarthy, Jack Bryson, Kenneth Clark, Sidney Schreiber, Fred Duvall, and Edward Cheyfitz.

Arnall Will Still 'Fight'

Arnall declared that SIMPP "likes to cooperate in all things that can improve the industry as a whole, but we'll continue to fight like hell when something happens that we think doesn't help the entire industry." However, he added, "There's no doubt we can accomplish more working together than fighting each other."

Before the meeting, Arnall spent the morning at the State Department, discussing the foreign situation with trade policy officials, and on Capitol Hill where "I worked the film situation into conversations with a few of my old friends," he said. He did not return to the Justice Department.

He left Friday for New York and is scheduled to leave there for the Coast tonight, with a stopover at Colorado Springs to address the Junior Chamber of Commerce national convention.

Reviews

"The Doolins of Oklahoma"

(Columbia)

LATEST in the screen's recitations of the exploits of famous bandit bands of the old West, "The Doolins of Oklahoma" is an entertaining Western of standard calibre. But its running time seems rather excessive for a film of its type, and it appears that if some of the occasional stretches of conversation had been snipped, a tighter, swifter-moving outdoor saga would have resulted. Bulk of the action in this Randolph Scott starrer is confined to the Doolin gang's fleet operations on horseback.

In its quieter moments, the film is given to moralizing, and does so in a patently confused vein. U. S. Marshal George Macready, relentless in his pursuit of Big Bill Doolin (Scott), emerges as far less of a sympathetic character than his quarry. And the peace officer's preachments sound rather hollow when they are directed against so nice a fellow as Doolin, who, the picture would have us believe, was no more than a victim of adverse circumstances and certainly not an inherently hardened outlaw.

Kenneth Gamet's script provides also a fairly strong romantic angle which opens the way for a saddening finale. Doolin, forced to abandon his pretty wife (Virginia Huston) by the tightening net of the law, eventually returns to her with the intention of escaping into uncharted territory to begin a new life as a farmer. She departs for their planned destination, but Macready and his men succeed at that moment in cornering the outlaw who absorbs a fusillade of death-dealing bullets. Also in the cast are Louise Allbritton, John Ireland, Charles Kemper, Noah Beery, Jr., Dona Drake, Robert H. Barrat and several others. Harry Joe Brown produced and Gordon Douglas directed.

Running time, 90 minutes. General audience classification. For July release.

(Republic)

PRODUCED by Melville Tucker, as associate, directed by Philip Ford and written by Norman S. Hall, this Western about pre-Civil War days has dashing Monte Hale in the role of Buffalo Bill Cody. Providing romantic support is Gail Davis. The fast-moving script features stagecoach holdups and the looting and burning of ranches and towns.

After his father is killed in a stagecoach attack, Hale determines to track down the murderers. His only clue is a hotel room key which he finds at the scene of the holdup. In order to make certain of the identity of the leader, Hale joins the forces of the bandits who plunder and terrorize the area. He discovers the ringleader is a respected citizen of the town, played by John Holland. However, Hale organizes a militia which finally subdues the outlaws. Others in the cast are Paul Hurst, Roy Barcroft, Scott Elliott and Lane Bradford.

Running time, 60 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, May 9.

pected to be outlined at the session which probably will be a pattern for others to be held later with exhibitor groups here and around the country.

Johnston and Harmon plan to discuss broad industry problems, both domestic and foreign, with exhibitor groups to furnish them with material for a better understanding of producer-distributor and industry-wide policies. Also contemplated is an enlistment of exhibitor cooperation on the local level in industry public and community relations activities similar to the campaign conducted last year by TOA. Reportedly, Harmon has in mind a national industry organization not unlike the War Activities Committee which he administered during the war years. An executive assistant to Harmon is expected to be named soon to aid in the organization and field work. Mentioned in this connection has been the name of Claude Lee, former exhibitor relations executive for Paramount.

Last Friday top executives of MPAA's New York and Washington offices met here on general MPAA problems, including possible new staff assignments. Here from New York were MPAA executives Francis Harmon, John McCarthy, Fred Duvall and Sidney Schreiber.

OTTAWA, June 5.—Eastern Theatres' net profit for the 52 weeks ended Jan. 1, 1949, was up narrowly, at $106,972, compared with $101,292 in 1947. A substantial reduction in income tax provisions more than offset a $22,000 drop in earnings.

"Universal is eager to move ahead with its public relations program and to consolidate a number of activities under one executive head," Blumberg's announcement of Bergman's promotion said.

Bergman currently is directing industry participation in the U. S. Treasury's savings bond drive, which will be concluded at the end of this month. He joined the industry in 1928 as a member of Publix Theatres' advertising staff, later joining the Lord and Thomas advertising agency. He is a former advertising-publicity director of Columbia Pictures, was with the 20th Century-Fox home office advertising-publicity department, is a former president of Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, and was chairman of the public relations division of the industry's War Activities Committee in 1945.

Ascap Submits New Decree Terms to U. S.

Would Collect Its Music Fees from Producers

In furtherance of its aim to secure a firm basis for dealing directly with film producers, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has submitted to the Department of Justice its proposals for new consent decree provisions, superseding the agreement the two parties entered into in 1940, and declared as conforming with the New York and Minneapolis Federal Court decisions which enjoin Ascap from collecting music license fees from theatres.

The Ascap proposals reportedly would allow the Society to collect public performance rights fees from producers in behalf of its members under a plan which would involve no bargaining on the part of Ascap. The Society appears to have in mind some sort of formula which would standardize the rates for music used in films. That accomplished, the Society thereafter would merely collect in accordance with the fixed-rate formula.

Main streets were deserted. Many theatres depend upon the carriage trade for their business and patrons coming by bus, but over the weekend they stayed home.

Mayors of the cities affected are clamoring for state intervention because business is practically at a standstill. Business losses are expected to run into the millions. Mercantile establishments are prepared to close, and stores selling perishables are giving their goods below cost so that they will not rot.

Lloyd Curtailing His Film Plans for Year

Harold Lloyd, whose "Movie Crazy" is being reissued by Motion Picture Sales Corp., said here yesterday that his film plans for next year will be curtailed as a result of the fact that he is to be installed as Imperial Potentate of the Shriners at its annual convention in Chicago next month.

Lloyd pointed out that "Movie Crazy," which was made in 1932 at a cost of $750,000, could not be made today under $2,00,000. He said he has in mind an idea for another film which he expects to launch after his year with the Shriners. He asserted that it probably would be made in connection with M. P. Sales Corp. Lloyd pointed out that there are seven pictures which M. P. Sales Corp. very likely would reissue. They are, besides "Movie Crazy," which will be the Globe Theatre's next attraction here, "The Freshman," "Safety Last," "Grandma's Boy," "Speedy," "Welcome Danger' and "Cat's Paw." Lloyd disclosed that his most recent film, "Mad Wednesday," made for RKO, probably will be released at the end of the year.

Charles L. Casanave, executive vice-president of M. P. Sales Corp., revealed that "Movie Crazy" recently had 10 theatre "sneak previews," and some 20 private screenings.

the setting up of machinery under which television talent will be organized and administered by the Four A's, an organization representing various talent unions. Equity's action, Harding said, is contingent upon whether Screen Actors Guild and Screen Extras Guild enter into the agreement, and upon the working out of a "working agreement" between television authorities and the guilds in case SAG and SEG do not wish to participate in the Four A's joint action.

Harding said the membership voted that if any other talent group or groups should not endorse the agreement by the time of the Four A's meeting, scheduled for June 17, the Equity delegates to that meeting are instructed to petition the Four A's for a general meeting of the memberships of all Four A organizations to determine what position to take in the television matter.

Ballots were being counted yesterday following the weekend election of Equity officers, and results will be announced shortly, Harding said. Some 1,000 ballots were cast.

Nat Bronsten's Plantagenet Films, currently making "Give Us This Day" at Rank's Denham studio, with Edward Dmytryk directing, also received end-money from Film Finance. The picture has a GFD distribution guaranty, implying playing time on Rank's Gaumont-British or Odeon circuits.

Another independent production, Edward Dryhursts's "The Romantic Age," featuring a number of Rank's top artists, is scheduled to start eight weeks' shooting at Denham on June 13 with a GFD distribution guaranty. So far as can be learned, however, Dryhurst has received no advance from the Finance Corp.

Rank himself plans to make only 20 features in the next 12 months at Denham and Pinewood, to be financed out of the box-office takes of previous pictures.

Reviews

"Calamity Jane and Sam Bass"

(Universal-International)

A FULL-SCALE production treatment, including Technicolor and all of the trappings, has been accorded Universal-International's "Calamity Jane and Sam Bass." The picture features Howard Duff as a horse-loving cowhand who gets on the wrong side of law and order when he tries to exact his own justice for the villainous poisoning of his mare. Sharing the billing with Duff as the other name of the title is Yvonne de Carlo, a hoydenish adventuress who casts her lot with him only to find herself not altogether wanted. Dorothy Hart provides the third corner to the triangle as the refined and elegant young lady who wants to make Duff a dutiful wife. Designed for popular appeal, the picture is rounded out with the standard quota of gunplay and chases. The picture will have a Dallas premiere tomorrow as part of some 300 openings.

When Duff arrives in town he is a good sort of person, greatly interested in horse racing. He borrows enough money to buy a mare and then starts conditioning the animal for the race. The fleet-footed mare meets amazing success, but in a crucial race she drops dead as a result of poisoning by some gambler outlaws. Motivated by a moral sense of justice, Duff tries to retrieve the money he lost on the race, is forced to kill in self-defense, and in time he himself becomes a hunted outlaw. Slowly Duff and his little group, including Miss De Carlo, are hunted down by the sheriff and his posse.

The formula-made screenplay, by Maurice Geraghty and Melvin Levy, ends with a different twist as the hero-outlaw is finally brought down by the relentless sheriff. Leonard Goldenson produced and George Sherman, directed from a screenplay based on his own story.

MANDEL HERBSTMAN

"Movie Crazy"

(Harold Lloyd—Motion Picture Sales Corp.)

HAROLD LLOYD'S "Movie Crazy" is one of those comedies whose entertainment value is timeless. Happily, it has been scheduled for reissue this month after 17 years in the vaults.

It is a story of goggle-eyed Harold's attempts to become a big romantic Hollywood star. His every effort results in trouble until finally when he believes he is protecting Constance Cummings from the hands of the villain and engages in a rough and tumble fight a producer sees the possibilities of developing a new comedy star. Since it is comedy which depends upon situations and slapstick rather than dialogue, it is of the type which lives on indefinitely. As an exhibitors' picture it has numerous exploitation possibilities. First it will attract children who know of Harold Lloyd only by name and reputation and secondly it will draw their parents who will enjoy not only the picture but the nostalgia therein. At a screening for high school editors in New York Lloyd's screen antics kept the projection room in an almost constant state of laughter.

Lloyd produced and Clyde Bruckman directed, from a screenplay by Vincent Lawrence. When the picture was first released by Paramount, MOTION PICTURE DAILY's review in the issue of August 11, 1932, said: ". . . one of the best constructed and best timed comedies that has hit the screen in some time."

Running time, 85 minutes. General audience classification. For June release.

Legion Reviews 9; Classes Two 'B'

Nine additional films have been reviewed by the National Legion of Decency, with two receiving a "B" rating. In that category are Universal-International's "Daybreak" and Warner Brothers' "The Fountainhead."

In Class A-I are Republic's "Red Menace" and Columbia's "Home in San Antone." In Class A-II are: "Hellfire" and "Streets of San Francisco," both Republic; Columbia's "Johnny Allegro"; Universal-International's "Take One False Step," and RKO Radio's "Mighty Joe Young."

production departments turn out and whatever goodwill your company is able to generate among the trade upon whom they call."

The Colosseum attorney told Lichtman that the salesman "is not a private contractor." He added: "In his presentation to his exhibitor, properly instructed, he is like the sound track of a picture produced by management. No matter how anxious he may be to write a contract, he must stay within the limits of his authority, which are carefully circumscribed by established sales policy."

In its new "Statement of Policy," issued May 11, the company announced that "Our policy provides that each division head, branch manager and salesman will conduct his business in his own territory as if he were the owner of that business." Twentieth-Fox distribution vice-president Andy W. Smith, Jr., told the ITOA meeting that this meant that home office approval of contracts is eliminated.

Efforts yesterday to reach 20th-Fox vice-president Al Lichtman for comment on the letter sent by Colosseum attorney David Beznor were unsuccessful.

Ascap Submits

How Ascap could take part in any initial standard rate-fixing in a manner devoid of bargaining was not made clear.

Synchronization rights which the producer would continue to license separately are cleared through the Music Publishers Protective Association.

Drafting of the Ascap proposals followed a new round of discussions in Washington recently between Justice attorneys and Ascap executives and counsel. Another meeting is scheduled for tomorrow, also in Washington.

To what extent the Justice Department will be receptive to the Ascap plan was not disclosed although it was ascertained that independent producers may come up with some objections to it. Counsel for the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers has told Justice that its group would oppose any plan which would give Ascap control over most of the important musical compositions and thus place independents in an unfair bargaining position. SIMPP has not mapped any counter proposals but might look favorably upon an arrangement under which Ascap would serve only as a collecting agency with no bargaining power.

Continuing indications are that the exhibitor plaintiffs in the New York case, where appeals are now pending, would consent to withdrawal of the action if a decree with the government would achieve the same results, i.e., permanently enjoin Ascap from theatre collections. In the Minneapolis suit, the exhibitor group in that city was the defendant, the action having been instituted by Ascap for non-payment of public performance rights to its music.

Ascap Submits New Draft

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Ascap officials submitted to the Department of Justice today another draft of proposed revisions in their consent decree.

The MPAA plan for improved industry relations calls for closer liaison between the various branches of the film business and among the members of each branch. Both Johnston and Harmon are expected to be available for exhibitor meetings in the field to take up trade problems.

Procedure Sustained On FCC Arguments

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The U. S. Supreme Court ruled today that the Federal Communications Commission can decide whether and when to grant oral argument in connection with a case before it.

By a 8-to-0 vote, the court reversed a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals which said that the FCC was wrong in refusing to grant oral argument to station WJR, Detroit, in a case in which WJR was involved. The FCC had appealed, saying the lower court decision created grave administrative problems, and the high court today said the FCC decision not to grant oral argument was clearly within the agency's discretionary powers.

Yates to Sell

I leave that to my sales department," Yates said. "But this is one picture I am going to personally help distribute throughout the length and breadth of this land. Despite threats from any quarter, I am going to show it, if I have to go out and hire halls to do so."

Yates for the first time in his industry career is personally being credited as producer of a picture, being listed as executive producer of "The Red Menace."

Already through a series of showings to various members of veterans, women's, political, press and labor groups, "The Red Menace" has helped to bring individuals and organizations together as a unified front in the current fight against Communism, said a company statement.

The Senate Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities in California has issued a special commendation to Republic and Yates stating in part that "in recognition of the great contribution that has been made by Republic Studios in the fight against those forces who seek to deprive the American people of the freedoms we all cherish so dearly, the Senate committee does commend Republic Studios and those persons who have so courageously assisted in this production."

Yates intends to give the picture the most intensive and far-reaching campaign in picture history, it was said. In order to accomplish this, he announced that he will add to his public relation group over 50 men to carry the exploitation campaign throughout the country.

Republic's "Red Menace" to Open Here at Mayfair, July 2

"The Red Menace" will open at Brandt's Mayfair Theatre in New York on July 2, following its world premiere at the Paramount Downtown and Hollywood in Los Angeles on Thursday. The New York opening will be backed by the biggest campaign in the history of the company, it was announced by James R. Grainger, executive vice-president.

1949 Rentals Are Ahead of 1941: Balaban

Circuit Ad Directors Meet With Para. Chiefs

Significant evidence that the industry is enjoying at present greater prosperity than is generally recognized lies in the fact that film rentals this year are ahead of those of 1941, Paramount president Barney Balaban declared here yesterday at a company-sponsored luncheon-meeting attended by advertising-publicity directors of 11 circuits and Paramount field promotion representatives.

Balaban said he chose to measure the economic situation in terms of film rentals because theatre attendance is thereby most accurately determined. Thus, according to the Paramount president's analysis, attendance at theatres has been greater this year than it was during the peak year prior to the war.

The luncheon-meeting, held at the Hotel Astor, was one facet of a two-

Schine Decree Seen Ready Next Week

An agreement with the Department of Justice on a consent decree ending the government's 10 years of anti-trust litigation against the Schine circuit can be reached by the end of next week, barring unforeseen obstacles, a spokesman for Schine said here yesterday.

The spokesman said that what defendants regard as only minor problems still remain to be settled. Recent progress on the decree has been slowed because of the frequent absence from Washington of anti-trust department officials on other business, with the Schine meetings having been delayed in consequence.

The net for the six months is equivalent to 77 cents per share on 7,295,000 shares of common stock outstanding. The net for the corresponding period last year was equivalent to $1.00 per share.

Film rentals, theatre admissions, sales, etc., after eliminating intercompany transactions, for the six months ending February 26, amounted to $68,520,000.

New Drive for U. K. Playing TimeHereSeen

Portal Group's Report Expected to Include It

LONDON, June 7.—Likelihood that the so-called Portal Committee will renew urgings for increased playing time on American screens for British pictures is conceded in informed quarters here. The report, based on a study of all phases of the British industry conducted by the government-appointed committee, is expected to be released soon.

It is also anticipated that the committee will recommend against nationalization of the British film industry; that it will ask for a ceiling on distribution costs, probably 15 per cent, and that it will urge means whereby a producer will have a quicker draw on box-office receipts and, consequently, a speedier amortization of his production costs.

The committee is understood to be divided on the question of divorcement of production-distribution from exhibi-

NY 1st-Run Revenue Continues Sluggish

The "off" period for New York's first-runs has yet to run its course, business for the current week continuing sluggish with only a few exceptions. Lure of local beaches is growing, this having been especially apparent over last weekend. Some improvement is in prospect for the end of the week when a convention of the International Rotary Clubs is expected to bring several thousands to town.

"Edward, My Son," with a stage presentation, is drawing a good portion of available business to the Music Hall where the first week's gross might reach $127,000. "Sorrowful Jones," with Louis Prima's orchestra on stage, is doing exceptionally good business at the Paramount with $37,000 indicated for the opening last Sunday through yesterday. "Johnny Allegro" is a mild newcomer at the Rivoli where only $12,500 is apparent.

Palace Shows Drop

The Palace vaudeville show, with "The Judge Steps Out" on the screen, appears to be headed for $21,000 this week, representing a substantial drop from the preceding two weeks. An impressive holdover is "Home of the Brave" which may give the Victoria close to $18,000 in a big fourth week. Also continuing strong is "Barkleys of Broadway" at the State where $22,000 is likely for a fifth week. "The Lady Gambles" held up fairly well at the Criterion with $15,000 possible for a third and final week; it will be replaced on Friday with "Illegal Entry."

At the Capitol, "Tulsa," which is running with Eddy Howard and Marilyn Maxwell on stage, might not gross beyond $25,000 in a dull second and final week; it will be succeeded by "Neptune's Daughter" tomorrow. "Beautiful Blonde from Bashful Bend," with Al Bernie heading a stage show at the Roxy might wind up a second week with close to $40,000, which is minor income for that house; it will be followed by "It Happens Every Spring," on Friday.

'Champion' Holds Up

"The Younger Brothers" with Bobby Byrnes on stage is expected to give the Strand an estimated $26,000 in a disappointing second week. "Champion" is holding up well at the Globe where $12,000 is in view for a ninth week. About $9,000 is anticipated at the Mayfair with "Jigsaw" in a fair second week. Still doing good business is "Hamlet" at the Park where $10,000 is estimated for the 36th week. "We Were Strangers" is figured for about $8,000 in a sixth week at the Astor; this is meager business.

The Biggest Picture of All Time Is In Preparation: "QUO VADIS"

Paramount Meeting

day series of conferences being focussed on William Wyler's "The Heiress," with the circuit executives serving as consultants on the nature and extent of promotional effort which should be put behind the film. However, Paramount advertising-publicity director Max E. Youngstein, who served as chairman of the luncheon gathering, Balaban, board chairman Adolph Zukor, vice-president Paul Raibourn, and distribution vice-president Alfred Schwalberg, all of whom addressed the exhibition guests, utilized the meeting principally to examine possibilities for improving industry conditions in general.

Cites Advertising Role

Zukor, who pointed out that making the picture "is only half the battle," cited the selling role played by advertising and publicity. Harking back to the time when he headed the former Famous Players-Lasky Corp., Zukor declared that the importance of advertising and publicity has in no way diminished since those early days when they were vital to a company's existence.

The Paramount board chairman urged the circuit's advertising-publicity directors to discover what the theatre customers want in a film and then relay to the producers the facts discovered. Also, he advised, the "staying qualities" of a picture must be studied by advertising-publicity specialists in order to establish the value of the picture, and once the value is established it must be used to full advantage promotion-wise.

Balaban fired a few barbs at industry critics who constantly "jump from one side of the fence to the other" in their attitude toward the efforts of Hollywood and the industry in general. He deplored the fact that many of those criticis are believed by the public. The Motion Picture Association of America's current efforts toward establishing better exhibitor and public relations will succeed, Balaban said confidently. But, he admonished, the MPAA success depends very much on what exhibition accomplishes in public relations.

Sees Prosperous Future

With the new "fighting group" of advertising-publicity executives recently acquired by the company, Paramount envisions an increasingly prosperous future, Balaban said.

Raibourn confined his remarks to a plea for adoption by the industry of the type of enthusiasm which he said pervades the infant television industry. In the video industry, he said, "there's no such thing as a bad television show." Its people "think closely, listen to each other" and in other ways draw inspiration from their work. There are important possibilties for the motion picture industry in such an outlook, Raibourn declared.

Schwalberg, holding that "anybody can be a hero" with a top-grade picture, said he would like to see conferences with exhibitor representatives such as Paramount is conducting become an industry institution with a view to putting across all pictures.

In his address which opened the meeting, Youngstein pointed out that distribution and exhibition each cannot prosper separately. Both branches, he declared, must establish closer links of sympathy in order that each may enjoy increased prosperity. Both, he said, are concerned with getting the most out of the box-office.

Among those present at the luncheon were Buchanan and Co. executives Rudy Montgelas, William Boley and George Richardson; several Paramount home office executives, and the following circuit advertising-publicity directors: Harry Browning, Everett C. Callow, Harry Goldberg, Margaret Goodrich, William Hollander, Harry Mandel, Seymour Morris, James Nairn, Frank Starz, Dan Terrell and Alice N. Gorham. Miss Gorham, advertising-publicity director for United Detroit Theatres, was the winner of the top Quigley Showmanship Award for 1948. J. J. Fitzgibbons, head of Famous Players Canadian, also was on hand, and so was Sid Blumenstock who soon will become Paramount advertising manager.

on studying possibilities for a global convention will be made.

Slated to participate in the meeting here, among others, are Edwin P. Kilroe, of 20th Century-Fox, as head of the copyright committee of the Motion Picture Association of America; Robert J. The Department also said that: It will continue to spread American newsreels abroad; it hopes to expand its overseas film program now that some of its budget troubles are being overcome; close working relations with MPEA are helpful and should be continued.

Palfreyman said he had no definite plans for the future. He admitted he was considering going into exhibition in Indiana for himself, and that there had been "four or five interesting" job offers.

A native of Angola, Ind., Palfreyman became secretary and manager of the Detroit Film Board of Trade in 1924. In 1929 he went to New York to establish the theatre service division of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and headed that ever since.

Franklin Loses Motion

CHICAGO, June 7.—Federal Judge Walter Labuy of District Court here has overruled a motion ito dismiss the indictment against Irwin Franklin, Midwest agent for Artkino films and also a booking agent. Franklin, a native of Russia, was charged with posing as a citizen of the United States and with failing to register as an alien during World War II. Franklin had challenged constitutionality of the act under which he was indicated. Judge Labuy has set a trial heading for October 17.

tion and the disintegration of large combines.

Professor Arnold Plant, member of the committee and its economist, in the Monopoly Report of 1944 recommended legislation curbing concentrations of power. He is still of the same mind but divergent views on the committee are expected to limit its recommendations in this respect to the encouragement of independent production and its statutorily safeguarded exhibition outlets. That is in line with the present government attitude as reflected by Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, in supporting the Film Finance bank and other measures.

In his 1944 Monopoly Report, Professor Plant also proposed that the government should discuss with the United States government and the American industry means of increasing the exhibition of British films in the U. S. It is regarded as very likely that Plant will renew that proposal in the coming report.

It is generally accepted here that Wilson will take no action on Anglo-American motion picture developments until the Portal committee's report has been made. It is also surmised that the imminence of the report had something to do with the recent desire of the British members of the Anglo-U. S. Films Council for an early meeting with the American members.

Multer admitted he did not have the film industry in mind, but that it could be affected. As does the Webb-Pomerene Act, the bill says anti-trust laws will not apply to export associations, but the Multer Bill sticks on provisos that the associations, to be exempt, must not restrain the exports of any competing firm and must not "either in the U. S. or elsewhere enter into any agreement, understanding or conspiracy" which in any manner prohibits, restricts or impedes any foreign buyer from purchasing directly from any U. S. firm or any agent of any U. S. firm.

The Business of dollars and sense....

We're talking about the banking business. Specifically, those individual banks who have played a major role in motion picture financing since the early days of our industry.

Yes, DOLLARS make SENSE when you invest them in COLOR. And your dollars will buy more in CINECOLOR ...the lowest color cost in the industry.

Bigger Co-op. Advertising Role for Para.

Youngstein States Plan; 'Heiress' Meets Lauded

Not only will Paramount not curtail its exhibitor cooperative advertising, it actually will increase its role in that sphere, providing the exhibitor meets the company on a fair and equitable basis. Paramount's advertising-publicity director, Max E. Youngstein, made that disclosure here yesterday at a press interview participated in by most of the 11 circuit advertising-publicity directors following their two-day parley with company promotion executives on the forthcoming campaigns for William Wyler's "The Heiress." Youngstein gave considerable emphasis to his qualification—"providing the exhibitor meets us on a fair and equitable basis."

Youngstein called the interview to

Palfreyman Cited By Allied's Myers

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Dave Palfreyman's "retirement" will be regretted by the entire Allied States organization and by independent exhibitors throughout the country, Allied general counsel Abram Myers said today.

"While Palfreyman faithfully represented distributors, he had the confidence of independent exhibitor organizations, and was always welcome at their meetings," Myers stated. "I think the distribution branch has lost a valuable asset."

Myers would not comment on the naming of Motion Picture Association of America vice-president Francis Harmon as the new trade relations chief.

British Have Legal Right to Raise Quota: State Dep't.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The State Department today told Congressmen protesting the British film quota stand that it was concerned over the quota situation but "must recognize the right" of the British government to fix the quota since no specific commitment on the matter had been made under the general agreement on trade and tariffs.

The Department's reply was made in almost identical letters from Acting Secretary of State Webb to Rep. Cecil King and Senators Sheridan Downey and William C. Knowland. Downey and Knowland had sent a joint letter to Webb, and King had protested as chairman of a special committee of House members from California. All three had demanded a new formal U. S. protest, and that

Johnston Sees Time Ripe for Cooperation

All segments of the industry should get together to resolve internal differences, create better understanding and present an improved united front on matters of public policy, Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Association president, suggested to Theatre Owners of America leaders at an informal conference in Washington Tuesday night, it was learned yesterday.

The theme of industry cooperation was the keynote of the meeting sounded by Johnston and the one which he presumably will reiterate at later meetings with other exhibitor organization leaders.

No formal program was presented during the discussion, which apparently took the form of a "sounding

The M-G-M film is now in release and is current at the Music Hall here. The CBS video version would have starred Robert Morley who also appeared in the top role in the play.

The picture, which will be distributed here and in England by Warners, is slated to go into England's ABC circuit as well as Granada's theatres, Bernstein said, adding that the present booking schedule thus far covers some 2,000 British theatres. Ingrid Bergman is starred.

Before he returns to England by plane in about 10 days, Bernstein will study American television.

Two U-I Premieres at Dallas and Capital

Universal-International's "Calamity Jane and Sam Bass" and "Illegal Entry" had world premieres last night at Dallas and Washington, respectively. The Dallas showing, at the Majestic, was the first savings bond premiere in the Southwest and will be followed by some 300 day-and-date openings in the Texas and Oklahoma area.

The "Illegal Entry" premiere, at RKO's Keith, Washington, was attended by U.S. and foreign notables, with Sweden's Ambassador holding an afternoon reception for Marta Toren, Swedish-born lead.

The latter film, which deals with activities of the Immigration Service's border patrol, received a plug on the Senate floor when Sen. Wiley (Wis., Rep.) said it should be seen by every American "not only as an exciting film, but as a patriotic inspiration on the work of the border patrol officers and an education in this vital problem, illegal entries."

First Drive-in Film Premiere Clicks

DENVER, June 8.—The West Drive-in Theatre, with a 1,000-car capacity, was packed with over 1,600 cars containing more than 7,000 persons on the night of the first known drive-in world premiere, with "Colorado Territory." On Sunday night the drive-in took in within 26 cents of as much as the downtown day-and-date Broadway took in all day. The gross for the week is expected to be only about $1,000 apart, the Broadway doing $12,000 and the drive-in $11,000.

The convention approved the industry public relations shorts and urged exhibitors to book them.

Paramount Ad Role

give the guests from the circuits a chance to air their views on the accomplishments of the parley in particular and on industry problems in general. They chose to confine their remarks to the former subject for the most part. The general consensus was that the conferences were well worth the time, effort and expense involved, and that other distributors should follow the pattern set.

Interpolating during the interview, Youngstein said Paramount will (a) very likely hold similar conferences in behalf of advertising-publicity campaigns for other pictures, (b) set up "Heiress" campaigns on a regional as well as a national basis, (c) devise campaigns for the picture for first, second and subsequent runs.

Impressions expressed by the circuit "counsellors" in consequence of the parleys, which were in the nature of being an innovation, are as follows:

Alice N. Gorham, United Detroit Theatres: "They clarified our thinking. . . . They bring him (Youngstein) closer to the person who puts the dollar in at the box-office." (Miss Gorham was the 1948 winner of the top Quigley Showmanship Award which was presented to her recently by Motion Picture Association of America president Eric A. Johnston.)

'Constructive . . . Helpful'

Seymour Morris, Schine Circuit: "I believe Paramount should be congratulated on taking the step. The company's publicity department has come down out of its 'ivory tower.' The pattern should be followed by all the companies."

Harry Browning, New England Theatres, Inc.: "Very constructive and helpful to us and in the way we see things in small towns. An interchange of ideas is always good."

Frank Starz, Interstate Circuit, Inc.: "Well worth the trip . . . best of a series of meetings I've been to. In this instance we won't have to worry about drafting a campaign only to discard it later."

James Nairn, Famous Players Canadian Corp.: "We were not brought in for 'window dressing' but for productive work. Concrete plans have come out of what were rough suggestions."

William Hollander, Balaban & Katz: "Conferences such as this are a service to exhibitors as well as to Paramount. Pressbooks are frequently set up before pictures are made and ads are put in the pressbooks without a foreknowledge of what the picture is like. Now, however, 'Heiress' pressbook ads will be a direct result of the meetings."

Also satisfied with the outcome of the conferences was Margaret Goodrich of Greater Indianapolis Amusement Co., who was among those interviewed.

Hollander Scores Hollywood On Public Relations Point

"Tell Hollywood to speak kindlier of pictures and the public will get a better impression of what Hollywood has to offer." Thus did William K. Hollander, director of advertising and publicity for the Balaban & Katz circuit, sum up yesterday his own theory as to how industry public relations can be bettered. Here from Chicago, Hollander was one of the 11 advertising-publicity directors of various circuits who attended Paramount's two-day promotional conference on William Wyler's "The Heiress."

Elaborating on his statement, Hollander said it was deplorable that some producers who never fail to speak well of their own pictures are prone sometimes to criticize openly the films of other producers. Hollander refrained from naming names.

Review

"Illegal Entry"

(Universal-International)

A PROLOGUE by U. S. Attorney General Tom Clark and other official stampings give "Illegal Entry" a commanding aura of authenticity as it dramatizes a case history "from the files" of the U. S. Immigration Department. The story about the "I"-Men in their battle against the illegal entry of aliens into this country is presented with zip and sufficient polish in a compact, efficient production that seems to be well qualified to meet the commercial standards of any situation where entertainment of a more vigorous nature pays off. Howard Duff, Marta Toren and George Brent are the principal players.

Partially documentary in treatment, "Illegal Entry" was made with the cooperation of the Attorney General and the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Department of Justice. After introductory remarks by Clark, the yarn gets underway as Brent's department sets the stage for an attack on a West Coast gang which is smuggling aliens into the U. S. by plane from Mexico. Brent enlists the aid of Duff, a down-at-the-heels pilot, who saw war service with Miss Toren's deceased husband. Miss Toren is one of the key figures in the alien traffic game. The two see eye-to-eye romantically and her aid in breaking the gang, after many exciting sequences, allows for a happy and plausible ending. Performances are good without exception. Playing up the "official" angle, Universal-International staged the premiere of the film last night at RKO Keith's in Washington.

Gar Moore, Tom Tully, Paul Stewart, Richard Rober and Joseph Vitale are among the others cast in the Jules Schermer production. Frederick de Cordova directed and tells a lot of story with proper emphasis on pace and without too much footage. Joel Malone's screenplay, adapted by Art Cohn, is based on a story by Ben Bengal, Herbert Kline and Dan Moore.

SAG's Dales to Fly East on Film Talks

HOLLYWOOD, June 8.—Screen Actors Guild executive secretary Jack Dales, Jr., will leave here Saturday by plane for Washington conferences with industry and government officials in efforts to bring about a lifting of foreign restrictions on playing time for American films, and unfreezing funds abroad. The Guild contends these restrictions have led producers to make pictures abroad designed for the American market, thus reducing payrolls for American workers by "millions of dollars."

Kenneth Thomson, SAG's television administrator, will accompany Dales, with both to sit in on conferences with Eastern talent guilds of the organization and administration of the television field for all entertainers except musicians. Following the annual meeting of the Four A's on June 17, Dales will proceed to Washington to meet with Eric Johnston, SIMPP representatives, State Department and California's Congressional representatives.

tails of the company's plans for this year and into 1950. The major discussions of the meets will be geared to expanded production plans for the future as recently outlined by Harry M., Jack L. and Albert Warner. The additions to the company's talent roster and the story properties lined up for them will key Warner's address to the convention delegates.

Mort Blumenstock, advertising and publicity vice-president, will outline the company's merchandising plans for product on the current release schedule as well as for the new season.

Video Supply Groups

tion of video camera pictures of Barney Balaban, Francis Harmon, Paul Raibourn, Robert Weitman and Gael Sullivan which had been taken in the theatre just prior to the showing. All hailed the mutual benefits to be derived from the "marriage" of motion picture theatres and television. Speaking from the screen, Balaban looked ahead to the time when people will not have to stay at home to see important events being televised. Not having submitted to pancake makeup, the executives all appeared in serious need of a shave.

The ball game came into good view with the only shortcomings being the obvious result of the largeness of the field of action, this in contrast with the theatre's previous experience with such spectacles as prize fights where the scope of activity is limited and can be more closely covered.

The industry group, following the demonstration, was escorted to the projection room where the special video equipment was explained by Raibourn. Also shown was new equipment which was said to require only eight seconds for processing from the time the subject matter is photographed from a video receiver to its projection.

There were some comments on the large size of the equipment in relation to a smaller theatre.

Special committees of the MPAA and the TOA are now at work investigating the adaptability of television for theatres in a large scale. Yesterday's showing was arranged in cooperation with National Broadcasting. In addition to those mentioned, others present included Ralph Cohn, Theodore Black, Samuel Schneider, George Shuppert, Robert W. Coyne, D. John Phillips, Edward Cheyfitz, Robert Chambers, Lewis Blumberg and Edward Fabian. SIMPP counsel Robert J. Rubin also was present at the invitation of MPAA.

Says Films Must Improve To Meet Video Competition

NEW BRUNSWICK, Canada, June 8.—Federal Communications Commissioner George E. Sterling said today that Hollywood must make better films if it's to survive the competition of television. "The movie house is not going to lure people out of their homes away from their television sets unless it can offer them something far better than it is now making available," he told the Canadian Manufacturers Association meeting here.

Hollywood should be the logical source for television's films, Sterling said, but production costs are still too high. The increase in the number of television stations will help solve this problem, he stated.

British Quota Right

negotiations be started at once to reduce the quota.

Webb said that the Department's ability to negotiate with the British necessarily depended on mutual consent, since the British had the legal right to raise the quota, and that negotiations "in the final analysis depend on what we can offer as a quid pro quo for further British concessions."

The Department is studying the matter for further action, Webb said, and has requested certain additional information from the industry. As yet it hasn't arrived, he declared.

A spokesman for the Motion Picture Association of America said that MPAA is putting the "finishing touches" on its formal protest to the British answer, and that it might go over to the Department at the end of this week or early next week. He said it still was not decided whether a joint MPAA-SIMPP protest would be made, or whether each would make similar protests at about the same time.

Krim Back to Law

He became president of Eagle-Lion upon its inception about two and a half years ago and previous to that was treasurer of National Screen Service. He had continued as a partner in the law firm while in both posts.

Gould Resigns

Gould will have Western Hemisphere rights to all Strengholdt's pictures and, in addition, will have exclusive rights to acquire films in this Hemisphere for Strengholdt's distribution organization in Europe.

In addition, Gould plans to add similar sales representation for other European producers and distributors after his new enterprise gets under way.

Gould joined United Artists in 1926 and represented the company in major Latin American countries during the early years of his association with it. He remains one of the most widely known and influential home office sales executives in the export market.

Gould plans to visit the Coast early in July and will go to Europe thereafter to conclude several arrangements for his new enterprise, which is expected to get under way early in August.

Indications are that most of his U.A. duties will be assumed by Arthur W. Kelly, U.A. executive vice-president and foreign department supervisor and by other members of the home office foreign department. Kelly is expected back here Saturday from a European trip.

are: Dan Blair, Sol Frank, E. M. Block, William Bradfield, and Francis Meyer.

Group meetings were held this morning for exhibitors interested in use of Allied's Caravan, booking-buying service and for discussions with national Allied president William Ainsworth, who is in attendance. A closed session in the afternoon featured discussions on drive-ins, concessions and various theatre equipment. A luncheon was held for the ladies attending the meet.

'Africa' Title Suit

Charging unfair competition and asking for an injunction to restrain United Artists from exhibiting the picture "Africa Screams" under that title, Classic Pictures, owners of distribution rights to the 1930 production, "Africa Speaks," has filed suit in U. S. District Court here against UA. Asking also for an accounting of profits, plaintiff maintains that the title of the UA picture causes confusion in the public mind and violates the plaintiff's rights.

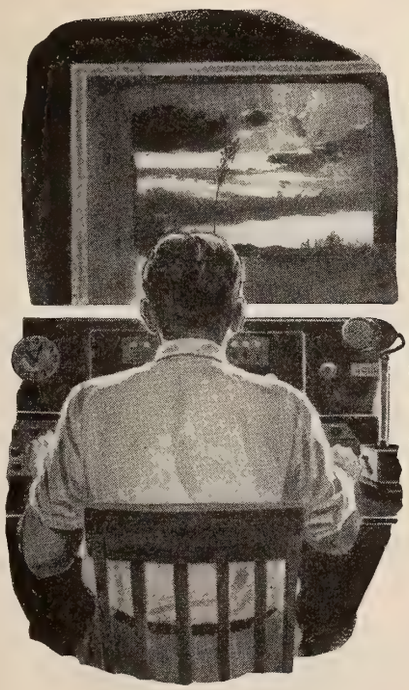
out" presentation on the need for better internal industry cooperation and improved public relations in an effort to ascertain how much exhibitor assistance might be counted upon in the event MPAA proceeds with its plans for extended exhibitor and community relations activities under Francis Harmon, MPAA vice-president.

However, no commitments were sought from or given by the TOA representatives, Ted Gamble, board chairman; Gael Sullivan, executive director, and Robert Coyne, board member. The discussion, it was learned, turned up no proposals concrete enough to be presented to the TOA board, although a report on the discussion undoubtedly will be made to directors in due course.

Urges Closer Relations

Johnston reportedly suggested that with the major industry litigation moving to a close, the time might be propitious for a closer working arrangement within the industry. It was suggested that there might be a pattern established for holding meetings of the various industry segments, including the trade press, under someone's aegis at which mutual problems could be discussed and explained; questions asked and answered and information provided.



TOA representatives expressed the belief that the average exhibitor has no serious public relations problems other than those which originate in Hollywood and which he inherits from it at the local level. It was also pointed out that when TOA undertook at its own expense a public relations program last year there were some major companies which evinced no tangible interest in it beyond back-patting.

The conference had been called without preliminaries when it was learned that the three TOA representatives were to be in Washington on business of their own Tuesday. Later meetings with TOA officials, as well as with representatives of other exhibitor organizations, are planned.

Award to Chas. Skouras

HOLLYWOOD, June 8.—Charles P. Skouras, National Theatres president, tonight received the Helms Athletic Foundation award "in recognition of noteworthy contributions to youth and youth activities throughout the United States," at ceremonies held in Helms Hall, Culver City. Paul H. Helms, founder and sponsor of the foundation, made the presentation.

When "the dawn comes up like thunder"...

HE'S at his console—the re-recording mixer—weaving skeins of sound into the picture's pattern . . . skillfully matching sound to sight, mood for mood.

Under his sensitive control, dialogue and music and special effects are expertly proportioned, delicately balanced to round out the realism and drama of the scene.

To fulfill this essential contribution to the picture, the re-recording mixer requires creative understanding of the director's desires . . . a sense of the dramatic . . . a feeling for mood . . . and the high order of faithful sound reproduction and re-recording he gets from the large and versatile family of Eastman motion picture films.

TOA, SMPE to Meet on Video Theatre Link

Joint Television Confab To Open Here June 28

Joint television committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and the Theatre Owners of America will convene here on June 28 with the hope of coming up with definite answers to a variety of questions on theatre television, foremost among them being its actual feasibility.

Still looked upon as the most likely adaptation of the new medium at present is its use by a cooperative group in exhibition, but here again this would be largely experimental, it was said. Mitchell Wolfson, chairman of the TOA video committee, among others, has suggested this plan so that a more concrete study could be made to determine cost factors, engineering, programming and general values of television to the theatre.

Contrary to earlier indications,

Treasury Straddles Local Taxation Issue

WASHINGTON, June 9.—A Treasury Department tax study straddles the issue of whether the Federal government should withdraw from the admission tax field in favor of the states and municipalities.

The study, a revision of a July, 1947 report on Federal-state-local tax overlapping, declares that from an administrative point of view, "there are no compelling reasons for an immedi-

Topical Film Title Offered by Clark

Washington, June 9.—Attorney General Clark, speaking at the premiere here of U-I's "Illegal Entry," urged the film company to make a sequel.

With the recent Gerhardt Eisler escape in mind, Clark wryly remarked that there should be another film entitled "Illegal Exit." Clark headed a long list of top government officials at RKO Keith's for the invitation-only premiere.

Wilby-Kincey Invites Distributors to Submit Bids for Theatre Playing Time

Atlanta, June 9.—Wilby-Kincey Theatres, taking a leaf from the Book of Distribution, have notified Loew's, RKO Radio, 20th Century-Fox and Universal-International that circuit officials will entertain competitive bids from the four for the "highly desirable July 4th holiday" playing time at the Alabama Theatre, Birmingham; the Tivoli, Chattanooga, and the Tennessee, Knoxville.

J. H. Harrison, Wilby-Kincey film buyer here, in a letter to the distributors lists the holiday playing time available at each theatre and offers the privilege of the runs to the highest bidders.

Each distributor is asked to state the terms expected for each picture, from each theatre, whether a guarantee against percentage; straight percentage or a minimum guarantee to the theatres; the amount of money to be spent by the distributor in advertising each picture, and the clearance offered.

Harrison reserves the right to reject any or all bids but, if playing time is awarded, it will mail a confirmation to the successful bidder before June 15. Bids must be received by June 10.

Harrison insists it's no "gag."

Heineman, distribution vice-president. Postponement of the final drawing until Monday from its originally scheduled time today was decided to permit exhibitors to attend the Will Rogers Memorial Home ceremonies at Saranac Lake.

Richards, Jr., on the break-up of the extensive Paramount Richards Theatres, New Orleans; with A. H. Blank, Tri-States and Central States Theatres, Des Moines; J. J. Many Percentage Suits Settled Out of Court

Seventy-one Federal or state court suits alleging fraudulent percentage returns on film rentals by exhibitors have been filed since the major distributors started such legal prosecutions a few years ago. The records show percentage actions on court calendars in 22 states, most of them in the East and Midwest.

Of the 71, 33 are still pending, in 16 states, involving 155 theatres. Most of the other 38 actions were settled out of court and legal sources in the industry here expect that a number of the 31 cases pending will be disposed of similarly. It was further disclosed that many percentage complaints have been satisfied without court action.

Warner described the list of 38 productions as "an accomplished fact." He added: "Here is our history for the next year and a half—not history in the making but history already made."

The production chief told the convention that he could say that the company has plans and commitments

Insider's Outlook

By RED KANN

THE most interesting development of the week is the joining of forces represented by the Society of Independent M.P. Producers and the Motion Picture Association as a united front "in all areas and in all situations where American motion pictures are treated unfairly or are discriminated against by foreign governments." The areas are numerous, large, widely scattered and vital to the economic well being of the American industry.

It is natural that the first situation commanding joint attention is Britain, where the impasse arising out of quota and blocked funds continues as muddled as ever. Since these twin British factors trace to official action, the difficulty in attempting to relieve such a situation on any but a like level is obvious. Therefore, when SIMPP and MPAA take the position that they must look to the State Department for aid, their thinking is sound regardless of its transparency.

It has been painfully clear that the division of interests on the American side has served the British well. If the British had not argued the impossibility of striking some kind of agreement on the ground that MPAA actually did not represent all of American production and distribution, they might well have. And, of course, this went for SIMPP as well.

The disadvantages, moreover, have not been absent from the American scene. The MPAA has been working with, and on, the State Department to get forthright in its anti-quota attitude. The SIMPP has been covering the same beat, but in its own way. Maybe the State Department boys have been slightly mixed up by all this. If so, no longer should this prevail provided the two associations intend proceeding as their press releases declare they will. Together, then can generate considerable steam.

Bill Heineman, typewriter in hand, acknowledges full and proper attention to last week's piece in this column on "The Red Shoes," but adds: "I do want to bring you up to date on the number of weeks the picture has played in New York. Instead of 28 weeks [as reported, in error] we are now finishing our 33rd at the Bijou and the theatre has ordered tickets up to the first of the year. This will give you some idea of the confidence in the staying power of the picture."

Warming to his subject, Heineman continues with generous references to a 30th week coming up at the Majestic, Boston; a 25th at the Trans Lux, Philadelphia; a 24th at the Fine Arts, Los Angeles, as well as the Selwyn, Chicago. In approximately 60 engagements, Eagle-Lion's end thus far touched $1,000,000 this week. Source? The same.

Departure of Dave Palfreyman as head of the trade relations division of the Motion Picture Association will be marked by a trail of regrets across the country. No other individual has been at his kind of work for so long. No one made himself so widely accepted in exhibitor association ranks regardless of their stripe.

Representing a trade association in which all five theatre-owning producers and distributors were members, Palfreyman nevertheless was genuinely and gladly welcomed at national and regional Allied conventions. The sessions may have been closed, but never to him. He was there—by invitation never worn thin and never withdrawn within the memory and the recollection of this writer, who has been on hand at most of them himself.

Hedda Hopper, in her column, reports: "I'm not surprised that Harold Lloyd's 'Movie Crazy', made in '32, has gone over big. . . ."

Nice and friedly, but the fact is the revived film is yet to play its first date.

In his talk before New York area exhibitors at the Astor on April 1, Andy W. Smith placed 20th-Fox's average negative cost on the 1949 program of 24 at $1,751,000, comparing this with $1,831,000 on 20 in 1948, and $2,330,000 on 18 in 1947.

These costs were revised by Spyros Skouras in remarks made at the 20th-Fox's stockholders' meeting recently. There he said the 1949 cost would average $1,783,000 while average for 1948 was $1,870,000 and $2,300,000 for 1947.

Just for the record.

Tenn. Exhibitors Will Hear Sullivan Today

CHATTANOOGA, June 9.—Gael Sullivan, executive director of Theatre Owners of America, will outline at the annual convention of the Tennessee Theatre Owners Association here tomorrow the various projects being acted upon by the national organization, including theatre television. Sullivan is scheduled also to address the Tennessee exhibitors in behalf of the U. S. Treasury's current bond drive.

Tennessee TOA president Walter L. Morris of Knoxville will preside at the one-day convention in the Patten Hotel. Among other speakers will be Robert Wilby of Atlanta and William Ruffin, Sr., president of the Tri-States Theatre Owners Association. The local admission tax situation is expected to be a main convention topic.

Petrillo Asks Locals To Curb Wage Bids

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—American Federation of Musicians president James C. Petrillo urged yesterday at the organization's national convention here that union locals adjust their wage demands downward to what theatre managers could afford to pay. Such an approach, he said, is in the interests of reviving vaudeville.

Only by such cooperation, Petrillo said, could some ground be regained toward the reemployment of 18,000 of 21,000 one-time theatre musicians who were thrown out of work by sound motion pictures.

$200,000 Cutback in Overseas Activities

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Senate cuts in the appropriations for the Overseas Information Program will force a $200,000 cutback in the program's film activities, the State Department said.

The Senate gave the program only $32,343,900, compared to the $36,000,000 requested and $34,000,000 voted by the House. The State said that $4,404,584 of the total was earmarked for motion picture activities, that the film budget would have stayed at that level despite the House cut, but that the Senate reduction forced a cutback to $4,204,584.

Reviews

"Her Man Gilbey"

(Prestige—Universal-International)

LILLI PALMER, Peggy Cummins and Michael Wilding try their best but the obstacles in the script were difficult to overcome in this Two Cities production, which apparently was made some years ago. It is a comedy that offers the subtle brand of humor often associated with British films.

Producers Sydney Box and William Sassoon, and director Harold French mixed up a hodge-podge of a story about a Lady Christabel Beauclerk, a bird fancier, who demands from other nations certain territorial rights for British birds, and the niece of Her Ladyship, who is in love with the family butler, Gilbey. The birds are forgotten when war breaks out and Gilbey finds himself a major in love with the niece.

There is a lot of scurrying about by other European officers all, apparently, making a play for the niece. Except for isolated instances, the direction is draggy. "Her Man Gilbey" has some odd funny moments, but scarcely enough to carry the picture. Other players include Penelope Ward, Claude Dauphin, Roland Culver, Albert Lieven and Margaret Rutherford.

Running time, 77 minutes. General audience classification. For June release.

"The Weaker Sex"

(Rank—Eagle-Lion)

WITH marked poignancy, British film makers in this production examine the effects of the war years upon the so-called "weaker sex." As such, this J. Arthur Rank presentation is something of a cavalcade of wartime events and emotions. Character delineations are excellent throughout this leisurely-paced Two Cities production. The plot, however, measured by American standards, is rather thin. Heading the cast are Ursula Jeans, Cecil Parker and Joan Hopkins.

The story takes a typical British household at the time of the war's outbreak and shows the changes and pains wrought by the war upon it. As head of the household, Miss Jeans, a widow, lives at home with two daughters who are in the service, as well as two guests, a young soldier and a naval commander. When the war breaks into full fury it brings heartbreak and anxiety to the family. It also brings new friendships, marriage and other blessings. These events are depicted with simple honesty of narration. By the end of the war, the little household is again united and there are some nostalgic memories to recall. By this time also, Miss Jeans has married the commander, played by Parker.

Some newsreel footage has been fitted into the picture, while the London Symphony Orchestra, under Muir Mathieson's direction, provides musical background. Roy Baker directed, from a screenplay by Esther McCracken and Paul Soskin. Soskin also produced.

Local Taxation Issue ate coordinated effort" to end overlapping in the amusement tax field.

The need of the states and municipalities for more revenue and the suitability of the admission tax for local administration is recognized by the Treasury.

"Seeking sources of additional revenue," the study declares, "the states and localities desire to develop the taxation of admissions but find that the imposition of a 20 per cent Federal tax places a definite economic limitation on state and local tax rates. This consideration will need to be included as one of the competing claims for tax relief when the Federal budgetary situation permits excise tax reduction."

The study declares that less than half the states now tax admissions, and about half of those that do tax admissions do so through a very small —usually 2 per cent or less—general sales tax rather than through a special excise. Since so much of the overlapping is with a rather small sales tax, "overlapping in this field has attracted little attention," the study said. It pointed out that the use of admission taxes by local governments is expanding, but stated that this has created no problem.

TOA, SMPE To Meet

TOA has no intentions of applying for a permit to operate an experimental station. Instead it would probably work in cooperation with the SMPE and the group of theatremen which elects to move into the field in a joint effort. Linking of numerous theatres on a video hook-up is presently being given full consideration by Si Fabian and others in the New York area, but so far this has not gone beyond the study stage. Whether the group would operate its own station or be fed material from one of the networks on an exclusive-use basis has yet to be decided.

Results of an operation involving a number of theatres would be of benefit additionally to equipment manufacturers and the telecasters, it is felt, and cooperation of these groups will be asked. A subcommittee of the TOA-SMPE joint committee is now investigating possibilities of the experimental program. Efforts also are being made to determine whether currently-estimated costs of $25,000 for each theatre equipment installation could be reduced to around $7,500, or even lower.

The TOA-SMPE joint committee met here last month for initial discussions of the theatre television subject. D. E. Hyndman of Eastman Kodak is chairman of the SMPE video group.

U. A. Financial Problems Due For New Study

Board to Get Current Fiscal Picture Tuesday

Management's report on United Artists' current fiscal condition and possible means of bringing new money into the company will be discussed by the board of directors at a meeting here tomorrow.

So far this year UA has been falling short of the approximately $350,000 in weekly distribution receipts necessary to sustain it on a paying basis although prospects for the future appear somewhat brighter.

Expected to relieve the situation to some extent is the big revenue anticipated when "Champion" and "Home of the Brave" reach their full bookings possibilities, as well as returns from "Africa Screams," now opening, and "Love Happy," which is due shortly. Additionally the company has others set for summer and early fall distribution and these are being counted on for financial assists.

Ruled out as a means of raising cash is the sale of the company's stock in Odeon Theatres in England for the reason that no way has been found to convert British pounds, which would be paid for the stock, into dollars.

Aim for State Dep't. Aid on New U. K. Pact

Would Put Remittance Talks Up to Government

U. S. State Department will be called upon to act in behalf of the film industry here in the re-negotiation of the Anglo-American films trade agreement which is to expire on June 14, 1950, but which allows for re-negotiation six months before that date, or by mid-December, it has become apparent here.

The active assistance of the State Department is the aim of both the Motion Picture Association of America and the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers and under the agreement reached last week by Eric A. Johnston and Ellis G. Arnall, the two groups are expected to make a joint request for the government representation.

The line of reasoning is that the industry here stands a better chance in its dealings with the British if problems are handled on the government level. MPAA and SIMPP representatives, rather than U.S. officials, negotiated the original pact with the British Government.

what we consider a revolutionary plan." First of the individual drives, he said, will cover 18 weeks from Aug. 28 to Dec. 31. Cash prizes will be awarded winners in the three separate periods of the drive, and also grand overall prizes covering the entire 52-week period, Kalmenson said.

At the closing convention session, Kalmenson paid tribute to Harry Warner for his adoption of an "expanded production policy" and "long-range planning" in the acquisition of the largest number of stars, directors, producers and story properties in the history of the company. Warner, he said, has provided the sales department with the materials to work with, and the sales department will "get the maximum results" from the merchandise made available.

Harry M. Kalmine, president and general manager of Warner Theatres, hailed the company's product announcement, made at the Thursday session by Warner, calling it a promise of new invigoration for everyone's boxoffice.

Publicly reported cash dividends by film firms totaled $2,598,000 in April, compared with $3,772,000 in April, 1948. Commerce officials said that several firms lowered their payments, with a $900,000 drop by Warner Brothers accounting for much of the decrease.

New U. K. Pact

the trade agreement will come to an end tomorrow with the American companies possessing only about $8,000,000 in blocked pounds, following the periodic remittances of the straight $17,000,000 allowed under the pact plus about $3,000,000. The latter figure represents the equivalent of earnings of British films in the U.S. and has yet to be remitted.

Meanwhile, State Department declarations that the British had legal right to fix the playing time quota at 40 per cent has not deterred the industry here. Both MPAA and SIMPP have taken cognizance of the State Department's stand but feel the fact remains that while a quota might be legal, the one imposed is far too excessive. An order that British theatres give about 25 per cent of their playing time to native product would be a good deal more agreeable to the American companies.

Para. Will Buy Out Richards, To Sell Later

Deal Is Set for 1950; Carter to Head Circuit

Paramount has concluded arrangements by which it will acquire the entire 50 per cent interest in the 71-theatre Paramount-Richards circuit from E. V. Richards, Jr., of New Orleans, effective during the first quarter of 1950. Paramount owns the other 50 per cent of Paramount-Richards Theatres.

Under the terms of Paramount's consent decree ending the government anti-trust litigation against the company, Paramount is authorized to retain 36 of the 71 theatres in the Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Texas and Arkansas circuit. Therefore, after acquiring Richard's interest, Paramount will have to dispose of 35 theatres, within six months from the date of acquisition.

20th Adjustments Revived in Jersey

Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, meeting here yesterday, gave its sanction to the national Allied board's "wait and see" stand regarding 20th Century-Fox's recent statement of sales policy. The New Jersey organization justified its taking this position in consequence of 20th-Fox's having "gone back to its former policy of adjustment" in that state, it was reported following yesterday's meeting. New Jersey Allied's president Edward Lachman was chairman of the sessions.

The organization issued the following statement following adjournment: "The decline of business at the box-

Europe Looks Up: Reisman

There is an increasing trend throughout Western Europe toward "liberalizing" the use of blocked U. S. industry funds and, generally, the prospects for American films in England and the Continent are brighter than they have been in some time.

This is the report of RKO Radio foreign operations vice-president Phil Reisman following his return from a seven-week tour of France, Belgium, Germany and Britain. "I am more optimistic after this trip than I was after any other," he declared yesterday at the home office here.

Reisman saw improvements in the economies of the countries which he visited. "An improved economic situation in Europe," he said, "helps the

TESMA Reports a Boom In Theatre Equipment

CHICAGO, June 13.—A record volume of new theatre equipment is reported, some of the reasons given by Roy Boomer, secretary of the Theatre Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association being the availability of raw materials in sufficient quantities to encourage development of new items, adequate labor in most manufacturing centers and the desire of theatre owners to equip their theatres with more comfortable and modern equipment for the presentation of programs to meet any form of competition which may arise.

U. K. Council Resents New 'High' Quota

Annual Report Also Hits U.S. Unit Booking Plan

LONDON, June 13.—Annual report of the Cinematograph Films Council complains about the rejection by Harold Wilson, Board of Trade president, of the Council's advice that the British film industry "would be healthier with a lower and more realistic quota."

In setting the new film quota at 40 per cent, Wilson ignored the Council's recommendation of a 33⅓ per cent quota. The government advisory body's report said its recommendation of a lower quota had been made after studying British producers' plans and concluding that "releases of new British first features during the new quota year would number about 74."

The Council's report criticizes Eric Johnston's unit booking plan here, terming it "a restrictive trading prac-

Will Not Reconsider Momand Decision

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The U. S. Supreme Court today said it would not reconsider its May 2 decision against A. B. Momand.

On that date the court refused to hear an appeal by Momand from a Boston Court of Appeals decision throwing out an 11-year private anti-trust suit against eight major film companies. Momand later asked the Supreme Court to reconsider, claiming the Boston court had decided an important issue—that a plaintiff in an anti-trust case had to prove that the defendants had a specific intent to injure him.

The eight companies said the Boston court had not said this, and that Momand's rehearing petition raised nothing new, nothing that had not been considered in the original petition. The high court today noted its denial of the rehearing petition, but gave no written reasons.

Defendants include Universal, Loew's, 20th-Fox, Vitagraph, RKO, M-G-M, United Artists and Columbia.

File Appeal Brief in Tenn. Censor Case

A brief in support of the industry appeal in the case arising out of the censorship in the city of Memphis of Hal Roach's "Curley," distributed by United Artists, was filed yesterday in Tennessee Supreme Court at Nashville.

The case was dismissed by the lower court at Memphis on the grounds that the plaintiffs were not licensed to do business in Tennessee and therefore had no standing in a case involving local legislation. Memphis censor Lloyd T. Binford banned the picture from exhibition in that city because it showed a Negro boy playing with white children.

The industry plans to make the case a test of film censorship and hopes ultimately to get a ruling from the U. S. Supreme Court.

LeRoy Asks MPAA's Aid for Film Museum

HOLLYWOOD, June 13.—Producer-director Mervyn LeRoy, acting on his own, is seeking the aid of Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America in establishing a motion picture museum in Hollywood.

In a letter to Johnston, LeRoy said, "The motion picture industry, although only 50 years young, has traditions that must be preserved for centuries to come. Noted figures in the industry, with financial assistance from major studios, independent companies and Hollywood guilds and unions, should be brought together to put this plan into effect."

LeRoy's project is separate from the directly parallel enterprise on which the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has been working for several years and as a start for which show cases already have been set up in the lobby of the Academy Awards Theatre. Both plans envision the ultimate erection of a suitable building in which industry exhibits memorializing the historical past and eye-witness views of pictures in production would be available to the public at a nominal fee.

Set Fate of TOA Gross Reports Today

Theatre Owners of America's executive committee will meet at the Hotel Astor here today to determine, among other things, whether the organization should continue plans for a weekly report of film box-office performances, which was to take the form of a bulletin to members. Fulfillment of plans has met with repeated delays, and it appears now that TOA may be forced to abandon them because the organization's regional affiliates find that it would require more time and effort than could be afforded to gather and collate the necessary figures.

Final arrangements for the TOA national convention on the Coast next September are expected to be set at the executive committee meeting.

Arnall to Discuss SIMPP Contract

HOLLYWOOD, June 13.—Ellis G. Arnall, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, is meeting here tonight with the Society's directors, reportedly on a proposal to change his present part-time commitment to a full-time status on a contract basis.

Although he has held the post only a few months, SIMPP members have been impressed with his accomplishments in their behalf and apparently are anxious to tie him down to a written agreement. In turn Arnall has said that he is well pleased with the position and his associates. It is believed in some quarters though that the former governor of Georgia might still be interested in public office, possibly the senatorial race in his home state next year.

His working agreement with SIMPP has been an oral one so far.

SIMPP in Industry Council in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, June 13.—Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers will become a member of the Motion Picture Industry Council at a meeting of the latter group on Wednesday at the Beverly Hills Hotel, it was announced here by Cecil B. DeMille, MPIC chairman. SIMPP president Ellis G. Arnall will deliver the keynote address.

SIMPP delegates to the organization will be Gunther R. Lessing, vice-president and board chairman; Marvin Faris, executive secretary, and Roy Disney, Edward Small and James Nasser.

Other organizations in the MPIC are the Motion Picture Producers Association, Hollywood AFL Film Council, and actors', writers' and directors' guilds, the Independent Office Workers and the Society of Motion Picture Art Directors.

Davee Heads SMPE's Projection Committee

L. W. Davee, sales manager of Century Projector Corp., has been appointed chairman of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers' projection practice committee here by John A. Maurer, SMPE vice-president.

Uppermost on the list of projects to be undertaken by the committee are revisions of the Society's "projection room plans" which are intended to pave the way for good projection results by serving as a guide in planning projection rooms for new theatres.

1st 'U' Profit in a Quarter in a Year

Net income of $252,293 reported by Universal for the quarter ended April 30, is the first profit for a quarter to be listed by the company in a year, since a profit of $98,660 was reported for the corresponding quarter in 1948.

Net loss for the 26 weeks ended April 30 was $465,242, against a profit of $232,866 for the corresponding 26 weeks in 1948.

Washington, June 13.—The Senate Executive Expenditures Committee today approved a bill for a 15-member commission to study relations between Federal, State and local goverments, with special emphasis on eliminating tax competition among the three levels, including admission tax competition.

WB Asks Dismissal Of Shea Complaint

Dismissal of the complaint of Shea Enterprises to halt Warners' plan for the dissolution of their pooled operation of three theatres in Youngstown, O., was asked by Warners in a petition in New York Federal Court yesterday. The case originally was placed in New York Supreme Court and was removed to Federal Court.

Warners stated yesterday that enforcement of the court's decree outlawing pools would be defeated if that company's move to break with Shea is blocked. Shea's objection is that status of the Warner Theatre, which would revert to Warner operation, was greatly enhanced at the expense of Shea's Park Theatre under the pool operation. The third house is the Paramount, ownership of which the two parties share.

'Bovary' Makes 5 for M-G-M at Music Hall

M-G-M's "Madame Bovary" is scheduled to play Radio City Music Hall here, following the theatre's next attraction, which will be Warner Brothers' "Look for the Silver Lining." That will make five M-G-M pictures to play that show case this year.

Four M-G-M pictures to appear at the theatre this year mark three more than from any other company. M-G-M's "Words and Music," which began a run on December 9, continued over until January 19. Next came 20th Century-Fox's "A Letter to Three Wives," followed by Universal-International's "Family Honeymoon" and M-G-M's "Little Women." Next in order were Paramount's "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," M-G-M's "The Stratton Story," and the present tenant at the theatre, M-G-M's "Edward, My Son."

Warner Excursion Today

More than 1,400 members of the New York Warner Club are expected to go on the club's annual boat ride to Bear Mountain today aboard the steamer John A. Meseck, it is announced by Ralph W. Budd, Warner personnel manager.

A similar excursion for the 20th Century-Fox Family Club is slated for tomorrow.

Para. Buys 17,600 Shares

Paramount purchased last month on the open market 17,600 shares of its common stock, bringing to 938,187 shares the total accumulated in its treasury under the stock-purchasing program instituted in November, 1946, by president Barney Balaban.

Squeeze Out U. S. Films in Argentina

Joquin Rickard, Latin-American representative of the Motion Picture Association of America, is meeting stiffening resistance from Argentine government agencies in his attempts to obtain exchange permits which would make shipments of U. S. films to that country possible again, according to press dispatches reaching here from Buenos Aires. Last year Rickard was able to obtain $500,000 worth of exchange permits—a nine months' supply—on the basis of the companies waiving the right to immediate payment in dollars. Since last March 10, however, no Hollywood films have been permitted to enter Argentina, it was said.

The last U. S. pictures on hand in that country, according to dispatches, will reach the screens within a matter of five months. At this point, American film companies' representatives there are said to be wondering whether to pull out now or let business run down gradually to a complete standstill.

Bleak as the outlook is, it was said that the odds are that U. S. companies will stay in Argentina until they are in effect forced out. Meanwhile, the reports state, they are maintaining the payrolls of more than 3,000 persons.

High Argentine government officials reportedly told Rickard the refusal to issue permits for American films stemmed from Argentina's unwillingness to have the dollar debt mount further. Meanwhile, British films are in the same plight as those from Hollywood, since they are brought in and released through U. S. distributors, it was explained.

The Argentine production industry is said to have 32 completed native productions awaiting release.

Industry foreign management sources in New York yesterday confirmed reports from Buenos Aires that the Argentine government has turned a "cold shoulder" to the American film companies' bid for import licenses.

Group Plans Test Of Film Censorship

Film censorship will be challenged by the National Council on Freedom from Censorship, an affiliate of the American Civil Liberties Union, it was announced here yesterday by Elmer Rice, playwright who served as chairman of meeting of the group at the Bedford Hotel.

Cooperation of a theatre operator "willing to risk prosecution and possible financial loss to show an uncensored film" would be needed, Rice said, adding that the council would take the case to the U. S. Supreme Court if necessary. Direct action by the council will be taken if the industry itself does not provide a test case by Sept. 1, Rice said.

Buchanan, Agency Head, Dies at 56

Thomas S. Buchanan, 56, former head of the advertising agency which bears his name, died yesterday after a long illness at his home at Sharon, Conn. He was a director and consultant to the agency, which has offices here, in Chicago and on the Coast, at the time of his death.

The widow and a son, Thomas S. Buchanan, Jr., survive.

Short Subject

"It's in the Groove"

(March of Time-20th-Fox)

Following the fluctuating popularity of their path, this latest March of Time tells the story of phonograph records, their background, their present status and their potential future. It shows the audience how records are made and what elements govern the sales and thus the financial position of the industry.

Americans this year will buy some 250,000,000 records to support the booming industry. Their selections will range from swing and jazz to hillbilly tunes and the ever-popular classical numbers. The subject closes by demonstrating the controversy now underway between manufacturers of the varied-speed phonographs. Release date, June 10. Running time, 19 minutes.

Morris Re-elected By Tennessee Group

NASHVILLE, June 13.—Walter L. Morris, president, and all other officers of the Tennessee Theatre Owners Association were re-elected at the group's third annual convention here. Others reelected were L. J. Pepper, first vice-president; Lawrence Brichetto, Jr., second vice-president; Emil Bernstecker, secretary-treasurer, and directors Charles Colville, Kermit C. Stengel, R. B. Wilby, Cowan Oldham, Jay Solomon, George Odlum, and Alfred Starr.

Addressing the session, Gael Sullivan, executive director of the Theatre Owners of America, expressed the belief that theatre television will encourage theatre-going by persons in the 40-to-65 age groups which represent, he said, 65 to 70 million potential admissions. He pointed up the importance of theatremen in community affairs.

Richards Theatres will continue with the circuit as general manager. Also continuing in association with Carter will be Gaston J. Dureau, Harry K. Oliphint and Maurice F. Barr of the Richards' organization.

Richards will continue to own and operate his Theatres Service Corp., which includes approximately 125 theatres in Louisiana and Mississippi and in which Paramount holds no interest.

Terms of the Paramount-Richards' stock purchase deal were not disclosed but, according to trade reports, Richards received close to $1,000,000 for his interests.

Under Paramount's consent decree the company is authorized to retain 10 of 22 Paramount-Richards' theatres in Louisiana; 16 of 35 in Mississippi; four of six in Alabama; three of four in Florida, and three of four in Arkansas.

The deal is the first to be agreed upon in the break-up of Paramount's numerous and important theatre partnerships around the country, although several others are in well-advanced stages and final agreements could be reached by the company and its partners almost daily.

The Richards' deal was closed last Friday, according to an announcement made in New Orleans by Richards over the past weekend.

In addition to the exhibits and the regular business meetings of TESMA and TEDA there will be an open meeting and a symposium composed of several addresses on the future of the theatre and the effect of home television on the theatre.

Convictions Upheld

American Activities Committee during that group's investigation of so-called Communist infiltration of the film industry. A District Court jury last year found them guilty of contempt for refusing to answer questions on past or present affiliations with the Communist party. The fate of eight other Hollywood workers, also cited for contempt, rests on the outcome of the Lawson-Trumbo cases.

The Circuit Court decision pointed out that Communism and Democracy are engaged in a worldwide struggle, and that the cases of the two screenwriters offer "the best possible application" of the committee's right to investigate and expose Communism.

Industry Plays Vital Role

"The motion picture industry," the decision said, "plays a critically prominent role in the molding of public opinion and motion pictures are, or are capable of being, a potent medium of propaganda dissemination which may influence the minds of millions of American people. This being so, it is absurd to argue, as these appellants do, that questions asked men who, by their authorship of scripts, vitally influence the ultimate production of motion pictures seen by millions, which questions require disclosure of whether or not they are or ever have been Communists, are not pertinent questions. Indeed, it is hard to envisage how there could be any more pertinent question in these circumstances."

Robert W. Kenny, attorney for the two writers, said he would ask the Circuit Court for a rehearing, and if that is denied, as is expected, he would appeal to the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court will adjourn late this month, and there is no possibility of action until it reconvenes in October.

E-L Studio Staffs

"Port of New York" will roll, with Laslo Benedek as director. Both films are to be made in cooperation with the U. S. Treasury Department.

James T. Vaughn, production head at Eagle-Lion, announced that scores of additional employes will be recalled within the next few days to fill out the various departments which have been on a skeleton basis or closed down altogether since production was halted last year.

Eagle-Lion Home Office Staff Lay-offs End Pending Deal

Barring unforeseen developments, there will be no further lay-offs at Eagle-Lion's home office pending the outcome of the negotiations revolving around independent producer Edward Small's offer to purchase the controlling interest in the company from Robert R. Young, principal stockholder of Pathe Industries, E-L parent company.

Since the Small purchase negotiations opened some four weeks ago about a dozen home office publicists and clerks were eliminated from the payroll under a "stagger system" which called for one or two employment terminations a week.

It was reported authoritatively that the status of the negotiations has not changed since Serge Semenenko, Boston banker, and William C. MacMillan, E-L operations vice-president, returned here four weeks ago from Coast parleys with Small to open prolonged conferences on the matter with Young.

Europe Looks Up

American motion picture industry more than any other industry." Examining the U. S. film industry's worldwide prospects for this year, Reisman said he believed that total grosses would be about the same as last year's but that remittances to American companies would be perhaps 40 to 50 per cent below what they were in 1948. Accountable for the poorer remittance prospects are the situations in Argentina and South America in general, along with those in Britain and in some other parts of the globe.

RKO Radio and other American distributors, Reisman said, are making excellent headway toward setting up individual operations in Germany following the recent agreement to abandon Motion Picture Export Association joint operations by January 1 in that country and in Austria. He described as "an incentive" to U. S. companies "the rapidity with which Germany is coming back economically." He said there are many well-trained film men in Germany who will be "screened" and, if they pass examination, will be employed by American companies.

British production, Reisman believes, will "not come anywhere near" meeting the 45 per cent film quota this year. England's theatre business, he said, has declined about 20 per cent in the last two years. Reisman feels, however, that J. Arthur Rank will be able to meet the quota in his own circuits. RKO Radio's foreign chief said his company's bookings in Rank's circuits was "off in the first quarter" this year but are now back to normal. The drop-off in British production may have been responsible for the rebound, Reisman said. All in all, he added, the American film industry "will end up well in England by the time the year is over," quota problems notwithstanding.

Seek State Dep't. Appointment To Deliver Protest on Quota

WASHINGTON, June 13. — Motion Picture Association of America officials are still trying to arrange an appointment with Acting Secretary of State James Webb to deliver the association's new protest against the British quota. They are hopeful one can be set for some time this week. MPAA president Eric Johnston and SIMPP general counsel Robert J. Rubin will carry the protest to Webb.

Theatre Owners of America's executive committee has renewed its determination to produce for the organization's members a regular weekly bulletin reporting box-office performances of first and second-run pictures in five national regions, namely, East, Central, South, Midwest and West. The MPAA board yesterday granted Warner Brothers approval to use "The Bright Dame" as a title for a forthcoming feature although there is a standing association rule which prohibits use of the word "dame" in titles. But, explains the MPAA, "an exception was made in this case as the title refers to the name of a boat."

McCarthy Is Named MPA Vice-president

John G. McCarthy, managing director of the international division of the Motion Picture Association of America, was elected to a vice-presidency at a meeting of the MPAA board of directors here yesterday, it was announced by Eric A. Johnston, president. He will continue as a vice-president of the Motion Picture Export Association.

McCarthy's appointment was in line with the withdrawal of Francis Harmon from foreign affairs to devote more time to direct the organization's new exhibitor and public relations program. Earlier this week Harmon formally relinquished his duties as vice-president of the Motion Picture Export Association.

The board also named Maurice Bergman, public relations executive of Universal International, to the MPAA's exhibitor-community relations committee, which is headed by Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO. Other business enacted was the ap-

"House of Strangers"

[20th Century-Fox]—Drama, First Class

THERE is power, realism and a thorough-going believability in this drama of a father whose tyranny leads to the disintegration of the family for which he held high hopes. "House of Strangers" is serious entertainment, leavened by flashes of humor, but essentially hard-hitting and considerably above the norm in point of story value, script, direction and performance.

Based on a novel by Jerome Weidman, the film is a flashback for practically all of its 101 interesting minutes. Its opening shows Richard Conte returning to the East Side of New York after a seven-year stretch in jail for what later is divulged as an effort to buy a key juror sitting in the trial of his father, Edward G. Robinson. The flashback bridges the opening and the closing sequences.

Robinson is the Italian-American who goes from modest beginnings as barber to a neighborhood banker, extracting exorbitant rates of interest on the one hand and extending generous and unprotected loans on the other. His rules are his own and so is his bookkeeping.

In this atmosphere of rising success and ruthless rule are his four sons. Luther Adler is the oldest. The others are Paul Valentine, Efrem Zimbalist, Jr. and Conte, an assorted group of which Conte, the lawyer, is the strongest

US Gov't. Gets MPAA-SIMPP Joint Protest

Offer Separate Briefs on UK Quota to State Dept.

WASHINGTON, June 14. — The Motion Picture Association of America and the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers today formally presented to the State Department their joint demand for a new government protest on the British film quota.

Representatives of MPAA and SIMPP told Acting Secretary of State James E. Webb in a brief interview that the British government's rejection of a previous State Department protest is "completely unacceptable," and that the U. S. government should call on the British to enter into immediate negotiations for revision or elimination of the quota.

Though officials of the two organizations called on Webb together, each organization submitted its own brief in support of the joint position. Joyce O'Hara, executive assistant to MPAA president Eric Johnston, represented

Vote on Ascap Video Collection Formula

On the basis of trade estimates of television billings for 1949, Ascap would collect about $300,000 to $350,000 from telecasters for use of its music in the first year of operation of a blanket contract now being considered by both sides. The amount would increase from year to year as stations and, of course, billings, increase.

Members of the National Association of Broadcasters are now being polled on their reactions to the pro-

U. K. Loan to U. S. Video Film Maker

LONDON, June 14.—James H. Lawrie, head of the government's Film Finance Corp., today amazed the industry with his disclosure that a loan has been made to Parthian Productions, Ltd., to finance production of four 13-minute shorts for American television shows.

Lawrie said that Parthian if it wished could make a similar contract with British Broadcasting Corp. Reminded that the film industry here is bitterly fighting the use of films on BBC television programs, Lawrie maintained that the financing of film production for television use is a potentially important dollar-making scheme and that is his sole concern.

Lawrie also disclosed that last-minute differences over a completion guaranty had caused Film Finance to withdraw from financing Mayflower Pictures' "Spider and the Fly," now in production at J. Arthur Rank's Pinewood Studio. Rank will accept entire financial responsibility for the picture.

Some N. Y. Grosses Show Improvement

Business is showing improvement at showcases which brought in new features, but the overall income at New York first-runs this week continues short of what it should be. The weekend trade again was considerably dented by competition from the beaches. On the brighter side, the larger situations here are luring many of the estimated 20,000 members of the International Rotary Clubs who are here for their annual convention.

The Paramount is doing its strongest business in many weeks with "Sorrowful Jones" and Louis Prima on stage, the first week ended last Saturday night having closed with an $83,000 gross. On the basis of continuing healthy returns this week ($14,000 on Sunday) the second week's take should be around $75,000.

Healthy, too, is "It Happens Every Spring," with the Andrews Sisters topping a stage bill at the Roxy where $82,000 is apparent for the initial week. "Neptune's Daughter" with Alvino Rey's orchestra and Jerry Lester on stage figures to give the Capitol about $69,000 in a fairly strong opening week.

Criterion Books Reissues

"Illegal Entry" appears to be headed for a moderate week's gross of $18,000 at the Criterion, and will be replaced on Friday by two Rita Hayworth reissues, "You Were Never Lovelier" and "Cover Girl." "Night Unto Night" with Phil Spitalny's orchestra on stage probably will do about $22,000 in a slow opening week at the Strand. "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" is fair at the Mayfair where the reissue is likely to gross $15,000 in an initial week.

A heavy week's take of $24,000 is indicated for the eight new acts of vaudeville and "Song of India" on the screen at the Palace. "Edward, My Son," with a stage presentation at the Music Hall probably will do about $115,000 in a mild second week, and will hold for a third with "Look for the Silver Lining" going in on June 23.

'Brave' Holds Up

Holding up steadily is "Home of the Brave" which could gross $16,000 in a healthy fifth week at the Victoria. "We Were Strangers" is losing ground at the Astor where $7,500 is in view for a poor seventh week. At the State, "Barkleys of Broadway" is moving along well enough with a sixth week's income estimated at $18,000, which is relatively good. "Quartet" continues strong at the Sutton which figures on $9,400 for an 11th week.

"Champion" might give the Globe $11,000 in a 10th week, which is good business, particularly in view of the length of the run. "Johnny Allegro" might not gross beyond $8,500 in a slow second week at the Rivoli. "Hamlet" should bring the Park about $9,500 in a nice 37th week. Its companion long-distance performer, "The Red Shoes," is likely to do about $9,000 in a 34th week at the Bijou; this, too, is impressive business.

Film Classics' "Lost Boundaries" has been booked to follow "We Were Strangers" at the Astor.

and toughest. What Robinson has done, probably without realizing it, is to raise a family that is held together by domination and domineering which engender hate—hate of the father by all of the boys, except Conte, and hate and distrust among the sons.

When the new banking act becomes law, Robinson is in trouble. In this crisis only Conte stands by his side and finally takes the prison rap for jury-tampering on information provided the police by Adler. With Conte removed from the scene, the remaining sons, under Adler's persuasion, throw out Robinson, reorganize and rebuild the bank as Robinson fans Conte into a promise of revenge. Conte emerges from prison committed to such a promise, then begins to understand what his now dead father had sought to do to him and to the other brothers. He recants, leaves the brothers who try to kill him to their ill-gotten bank and sets out anew with Susan Hayward, girl friend whose penetrating insight into the true state of affairs Conte finally is willing to recognize.

This story outline, at best touching the essentials, perhaps conveys the inherent strength of the drama and its pivotal situations. Philip Yordan's screenplay catches these essentials which thereafter build steadily and engrossingly under Joseph L. Mankiewicz's penetrating direction.

In the vanguard of superior performances by an unusually strong cast are Robinson, Adler and Conte. For Robinson and Conte, their roles in "House of Strangers" approximate a high point and may establish a new one in their careers. Adler, long experienced legitimate stage actor, adds lustre to a fine professional reputation; there should be many more parts for him in Hollywood after this one. Miss Hayward deserves particular mention for incisive acting. Sol C. Siegel produced.

Running time, 101 minutes. General audience classification. For July release, 1949.

It was learned from another source, however, that the following questions relating to the industry's public relations program would be discussed: How will it be handled? What kind shall it be? How long should it last?

It was learned also that for the second time no invitations were sent to representatives of other exhibitor organizations, national or local, such as Allied States Association, Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association, New York Independent Theatre Owners Association, New Jersey Allied, and others. This caused some comment in trade circles.

Joint Protest

MPAA, while SIMPP was represented by James A. Mulvey, chairman of the distribution committee, and general counsel Robert J. Rubin.

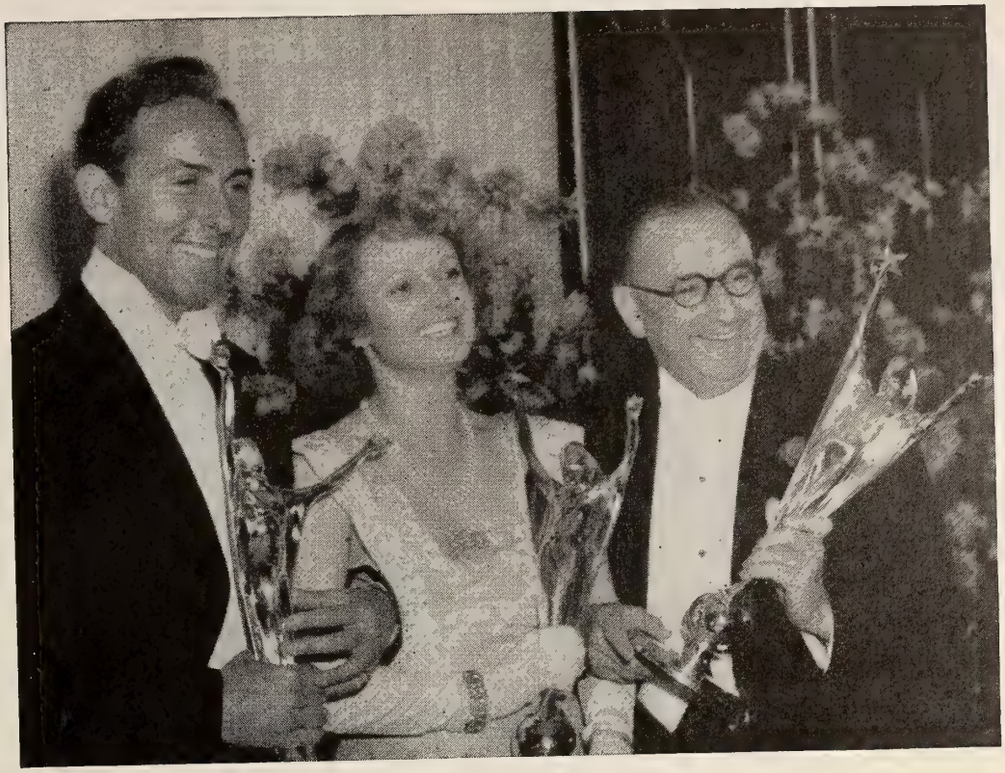
Both MPAA and SIMPP statements made substantially the same observations as to why the British government's reasons for rejecting the previous State Department protest don't hold water. They said that the Anglo-American Film Council was powerless to act because the quota was the root of the Anglo-American difficulties and the quota was a government matter.

They denied that the quota can be filled by British producers; they insisted that the remittance agreement adequately solved the British government's dollar problems; that as a protective device a 40 per cent or 45 per cent quota was excessive; and, finally they argued that the quota does violate the general agreement on trade and tariffs despite British assertions to the contrary.

The SIMPP statement said that any demand by the British that the Americans should make some concession in return for a drop in the quota was "unrealistic." The British have imposed a series of four restrictions on American films, SIMPP argued, but the American government has imposed no such restrictions.

The MPAA statement pointed out that the June meeting of the Anglo-American Film Council has been postponed "at least until August and perhaps even later" at the request of the British representatives. Moreover, it said, "There is nothing the Council can do about the quota. The British government imposed the quota and only the British government can change it."

The statement took strong issue with the British stand that the quota increase does not violate the general agreement on tariffs and trade, saying that the British quota "has skyrocketed even during the early life of the agreement. Such a policy on the part of the British government can, if continued, only make the agreement's provisions empty and meaningless phrases. An excessive and non-attainable screen quota obviously runs counter to the spirit and objectives of the general trade agreement."



MPAA Sees 47 U.K. Features Due; British Exhibitors Want 100

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The Motion Picture Association estimated today that a maximum of 47 new British films of intended first-feature quality will be available during the forthcoming 40 per cent quota year—16 less than the Board of Trade's minimum estimate of requirements, and less than half the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association estimate of the number made necessary by the quota.

The figures were contained in the memo submitted by MPAA to the State Department. It said the Board of Trade estimated that 72 new feature are enough for the 45 per cent quota and 63 for the 40 per cent quota, while the CEA believes either quota requires about 100 British features.

British producers promised at the beginning of the 45 per cent quota year to deliver 90 first features, MPAA said, and "according to our records they actually delivered 66, of which only 15 qualified as first features while 51, although shown as first features, failed to qualify at the boxoffice."

Strikes Face Newsreels In Labor Crisis

Report Companies Ready To Let Walkouts Occur

The five major newsreel companies are gripped by a labor crisis that could force them to cease operations in the very near future and throw out of work over a thousand studio mechanics, cameramen, film editors, cutters, electricians, office workers.

The IATSE locals representing the newsreel workers in those various categories have been without contracts for long periods, in some instances for as long as a year, and now they reportedly are preparing to take strike action. The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service and IATSE international president Richard F.

UA and Odeon Reach Accord on Bookings

Gates to playing time in the J. Arthur Rank-controlled Odeon Theatres in England have been opened to United Artists after many months of disagreement on terms, it was disclosed here yesterday by Arthur W. Kelly, executive vice-president of UA.

However, the circuit sometimes spots a few earlier open dates.

Arnall Sees Industry At 'Crossroads;' Urges Quota Action

HOLLYWOOD, June 15.—"In spite of the optimistic views expressed by some within our industry, the motion picture industry is today at the crossroads, and events during the next few months may well determine whether conditions will grow worse or our industry will surge forward to greater success, prosperity and well being," Ellis Arnall, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, declared in an address to the Motion Picture Industry Council at the Beverly Hills Hotel, tonight as SIMPP was inducted into the Council.

Arnall divided his address into two major sections, with the first devoted to efforts, in which he urged all to join, being made to bring State Department influence to bear on foreign barriers, restrictions and quotas. He said, "Everybody recognizes that private industry has no bargaining pow-

Rep. King Continuing Fight Against Quota

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Rep. Cecil King, California Democrat and head of a committee appointed by California House members to fight the British quota, indicated today he might seek a new interview with Acting Secretary of State Webb to voice the delegation's concern over the British position.

King has protested the quota in letters to Webb, in speeches on the House floor, and in a previous interview with Webb.

Meanwhile, legislative representative Jack Bryson of the Motion Picture Association of America, is distributing among congressmen copies of the MPAA memo on the British situation which was submitted yesterday to the State Department.

Bernhard Will Take Over F.C. Shortly

Finalization of arrangements under which Film Classics president Joseph Bernhard and associates will take over control of the company from Cinecolor is expected in about 10 days, a spokesman for Bernhard indicated here yesterday.

At a meeting in Hollywood on Tuesday Cinecolor stockholders voted approval of their board of directors' proposal to transfer control.

MPAA to Set Meetings with Trade Groups

Program, Organization To Be Drawn Thereafter

Producers, distributors and all exhibitor organizations would share equal importance in the community and intra-industry relations program which has been proposed by the Motion Picture Association of America, Ned E. Depinet, RKO president and chairman of the MPAA committee on exhibitor and community relations, declared here yesterday.

No specific program has been mapped nor will any be considered until Allied States and other groups have been consulted, he said, adding that among those with whom he or his MPAA associates intend to confer are Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, Theatre Owners of America, Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association, Independent Theatre Owners of New York, the industry press and Hollywood guilds and crafts.

For the benefit of any skeptics within earshot of his press conference, Depinet said he had nothing up his sleeve except to investigate what can be done

Renown, which for 10 years had been distributing reissues, started its own production two years ago. The company, Petigor said, now averages about six features a year. He said James G. Minter, Renown executive, will come here in the fall to arrange for a talent exchange.

Adaptability Key to Production: Cooper

Production in Hollywood remains difficult because of costs, but the answer to continuing production is adaptability, according to Merian C. Cooper, co-producer with John Ford in Argosy Pictures, here from the Coast. Cooper is here for RKO Radio home office talks and the premiere of "Mighty Joe Young," which he made with Ford for RKO release. The film is set for a July 14 premiere embracing 350 theatres in New England and Northern New York. It will open at the Criterion here on July 21.

Always wanting to make another "King Kong," Cooper said "Mighty Joe Young" was partly the answer to the wish, combining the drama inherent in his former pictures such as "King Kong," "Chang," and "Grass," with hokum comedy. "It is openly tongue-in-cheek showmanship," he said, "and so far the reception is good."

Cooper is to make two more for RKO, apart from "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon," and he also has a one picture deal with United Artists. In consideration for future production, he and Ford have scripts for the following: "The Rose of Tralee," "Mission Without Record," "Uncle Mike Meets Murder," "Wagon Master" and "The Family."

New Glass Screen From Gluckman Firm

A new screen woven entirely of glass filaments adapted to regular (flat) frames has been announced by Herman Gluckman, president of Nu-Screen Corp., following completion of installations in 80 Loew theatres under the direction of Lester Isaac, director of Loew's visual and sound projection department. The installations began after tests conducted by Isaac's department, and according to Gluckman, these showed greatly improved screen brightness with the same projection lamps, and also more uniform transmission of sound. The screen is woven to produce a fabric that is "porous" to sound.

In line with the company's announced policy advocating "saturation" releases in order to concentrate advertising and exploitation in a given territory, 20th Century-Fox will open "It Happens Every Spring" in 116 Georgia theatres starting today. Atlanta will be the first city to play the picture, with others joining the day-and-date showing on their normal change over at the weekend.

"The Big Steal"

(RKO Radio)

A WILD and tortuous chase is set in motion in "The Big Steal," a standard melodrama whose scene of action is Mexico. The cast is an appealing one, headed by Robert Mitchum and including Jane Greer and William Bendix. No time is wasted in getting down to action and building up suspense, with a romantic angle added. Generally, these ingredients are mixed in routine, but pleasing manner.

Mitchum portrays an Army financial officer, who, implicated in the theft of an Army payroll, sets out to clear himself. In pursuit of Patric Knowles, the real culprit, Mitchum goes off to Mexico where he meets Miss Greer. It evolves that Miss Greer is also after Knowles, since he is also a scoundrel romantically. After some initial disagreements, Mitchum and Miss Greer join forces in tracking down the elusive Knowles. In the meantime, Bendix, an Army captain, is hot on the trail of Mitchum, thus causing a two-way chase.

The screenplay by Geoffrey Homes and Gerald Drayson Adams leads up to its climax by way of an automobile chase down a treacherous mountainside, whereupon the principals converge in a hideout. It develops surprisingly that Bendix too belongs to the guilty circle. It takes considerable gunplay, plus some fisticuffs that are on the brutal side, before Mitchum finally vindicates himself and walks off with Miss Greer. Sid Rogell was executive producer, Jack J. Gross produced and Don Siegel directed, from an original by Richard Wormser.

er when it is arrayed against a foreign government."

He described a visit to President Truman in which Arnall presented the film industry's problem and said the President had requested Secretary of State Acheson to "take such steps as feasible to the end that foreign countries would not discriminate against American-produced pictures."

The second section of Arnall's address was concentrated on the "monopolistic" control of theatre circuits, both distributor-owned and independent, which he said "has now reached such proportions that the whole economic structure of our industry here in Hollywood is threatened. "I am sure you are all aware of the shocking fact that motion picture exhibitors, as a whole, in 1948 made net profits, after taxes, of $200,000,000, while motion picture producers, as a whole, lost money on their operations."

"It is of vital importance to the health of our industry that these exhibition monopolies and buying combines be broken up," Arnall said.

"Moreover, new techniques developed at Ansco permit batch uniformity in quantities of 3,000,000 feet, whereas previously it was possible to coat only 75,000 feet per emulsion blend. Heretofore, the problem in film manufacture has been to obtain the same uniformity with color that is comparatively simple with black and white. Our newly-developed methods insure the desired uniformity.

Newsreel Crisis

Walsh have failed to break the deadlocked negotiations, it was said.

It is reported that the managements of the reels are unconcerned over strike threats, their stand being that the companies have been operating in the "red" and hence they would not be reluctant to shut down in the face of labor walkouts. Meanwhile, Movietone News is said to have laid off about a dozen cameramen as part of an economy move.

IATSE headquarters here is understood to be drafting plans for bringing the managements and the locals together shortly in a final attempt to avoid a strike. Sal Scoppa, former head of studio mechanics Local No. 52 here, who has been working on special assignments out of "IA" headquarters, may be appointed by Walsh to initiate such a parley.

The locals are said to be determined not to retreat in their demands for wage increases. The companies have refused flatly to agree on raises. Scoppa's task would be to persuade one or the other, or both, to give ground.

MPAA to Set Meets

about problems in general, intra-industry affairs and public relations. When the question was asked whether the MPAA had in mind the soothing of exhibitors as one means of averting more court actions, he said that any subject of conflict between exhibition and distribution would be avoided.

Would there be any MPAA domination? None, said Depinet.

That last question was directed to Si Fabian, chairman of the TOA executive committee, which met with an MPAA group earlier in the day. Fabian said that it was his understanding that the MPAA had no such aim, and with that Depinet agreed.

Sitting in for the MPAA at the meeting with the TOA yesterday were Depinet, Eric A. Johnston, William F. Rodgers, Austin Keough, Maurice Bergman, Francis S. Harmon, Sidney Schreiber, Robert W. Chambers and Kenneth Clark. For the TOA with Fabian were Ted R. Gamble, Robert W. Coyne, Harry Lowenstein, Walter Reade, Jr., Gael Sullivan, Herman M. Levy and Stanley W. Prenosil. The two groups made no decision other than to take the subject up with others in the industry and invite their participation.

Depinet undertook to put at rest rumors that MPAA created some discord in the trade by meeting with the TOA for the second time without inviting Allied or other groups to participate. He said that Allied was consulted before the first meeting with the TOA, which was held in Washington two weeks ago, and general counsel Abram Myers and other Allied officials were pre-occupied with a Dallas meeting. At that time, Depinet said, MPAA was referred to William Ainsworth, Allied president.

Harmon figures in the program as a contact with the MPAA and will "help with paper work," Depinet said.

Additionally, the MPAA video committee apparently is having some difficulty finding a suitable person with an appropriate background to serve as its full-time assistant. On Wednesday it visited the Paramount Theatre where a special demonstration of the Paramount intermediate method of large-screen television was staged in cooperation with Station WPIX.

RED MENACE' DEALS STRONG BLOW TO COMMUNISTIC IDEA

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

"The Red Menace" will do more to arouse the public to the dangers of Communism than any other picture ever made.

It is more pertinent, for instance, than "The Iron Curtain," which 20th Century-Fox exhibited a year and a half ago. It deals with an American situation.

Its personnel is unknown and consequently not associated with previous acting performances. It catches that spirit of fear which infects those who fall under the Stalin orbit. It shows the insidi... forces at work, and demon... w they may be defeated. ... is currently show... ... theaters in rected at everything. Her sick mind may be regarded as typical of disturbing forces at work in this country. She shines as a thorough misfit, who camouflages her deep personal animosities under her fierce devotion to a political creed.

The other people who appear are mostly the pawns of this woman and of the party leader Partridge who has turned to Communism as a good racket. He is ruthless in his dealings. Lester Luther effectively plays this brutish role.

In and out of the sinister web move such characters as Nina Petrovka (Hanne Axman), a foreigner misled; Bill Jones (Robert Rockwell), who might be designated as ...verage American; Mollie ... Fuller), used ... Solo-picture, that will make audiences think, even while it generates melodramatic excitement. It sinks into brief stretches of corny action and dialogue, but its unique realism and the documentary quality in important scenes should create a stir. It also reflects courage in its direct attack on a deeply menacing situation.

A novelty is the appearance of Lloyd G. Davies, member of the City Council, who narrates the picture, besides playing the role of an immigration inspector.

Casual Trickery

Plotwise the picture shows the casual manner in which members are inveigled into the party. Wiles of women and persuasions of men are used to make converts. Documentary Type Film Is Indictment

By HARRISON CARROLL

Compared to "The Red Menace," other anti-Communistic pictures have been slaps on the wrist.

The Republic film, which opened yesterday at the Paramount Hollywood and Downtown theaters, hauls off and slugs the Reds with both fists.

Told in documentary style and played by a cast of screen unknowns, it lowers the boom on the Commies who bore from within.

The scene is an American city and the special target is a local branch of the party which is conducting a membership drive with emphasis upon returned G. I.'s who feel they have had a bad post-war deal from the government and the country...

'Red Menace' Cinema A-Bomb To Communism

By FRED BROOMFIELD

Herbert J. Yates, president of Republic Pictures, has fired a double-barreled blast right into the heart of America with his production of "The Red Menace," now showing at the Paramount Theaters. When its intent is fully realized by citizens all over the country and the rumblings of dissention are clarified, Yates will be long remembered, maybe fully rewarded, for his forthright demonstration of fearlessness.

He fired one barrel to effectively prove that America constitutes a good old fashioned plot with a multitude of sound ideals not developed from sensations, but built by the honest sweat and clear thinking of capital and labor into an imposing edifice. The picture doesn't preach this, but after seeing it you will have the satisfaction of knowing that ours is a solid nation, the envy of the rest of the world.

He learns that a young poet's work is given a peculiar interpretation by party bosses that it is simple for the poet to be charged with falsification of party ideals. The poet leaves the party, is fired from several jobs because of his former affiliation, and he finally ends his complexity by jumping out of a window.

U. S. Will Not Seek Taxes on Frozen Funds

Treasury May Issue a Formal Ruling in Month

WASHINGTON, June 16. — The U. S. Bureau of Internal Revenue is not pressing tax deficiencies against firms that announce they are deferring tax payments on funds frozen overseas, it is understood.

A top Bureau official indicated that if a company reports all of its earnings in a foreign country and says that it is not paying a tax on a certain portion which is frozen but will pay it at a later date when the exchange picture is clarified, the Bureau is not making any effort to collect the tax on the frozen balance.

Meanwhile, Treasury officials will decide within the next month whether to make a formal ruling deferring tax liability on frozen funds. Chances are the Treasury will approve such a ruling. The Bureau of Internal Revenue, acting on the prodding of several industries, including the film industry, has recommended the change, and it would be in keeping with President Truman's "point four" to encourage development of overseas areas. Under the ruling, taxes would be due only when funds are unfrozen and converted into dollars.

Schine Decree May Be Delayed Briefly

Washington, June 16.—Hearing in the government suit against Schine Theatres, which is scheduled for Monday in U. S. District Court, Buffalo, is expected to be postponed for a few days, probably until Friday, to work out final details of a consent decree, Justice Department officials said today.

Schine and the government are understood to be agreed in principle on the decree but need additional time to work out phraseology.

Schine Gets Milford Suit Venue Change

Motion for a change of venue, from the Washington, D. C., District Court to the Albany, N. Y., District Court, has been granted in the anti-trust suit filed by Shore Theatre, Milford, Del., against nine distributors and Schine Theatres. However, in granting the motion the Washington court gave the plaintiff an option to transfer the case to Wilmington, but in this event Schine's motion for dismissal from the action would be continued. If Milford elects to go to Albany, the Schine dismissal bid will be withdrawn.

IATSE to Seek Raises For 1,100 'Collarites'

Two Years to Make a 3-Minute Display

A stage display of Fourth of July fireworks involving an electrical effect costing more than $50,000, will be produced at Radio City Music Hall by Leon Leonidoff to welcome the holiday on the theatre's stage beginning June 23.

Designed by Eugene Braun, lighting director, he asserts that no stage effect has called for such an amount of detail and comparable outlay of time. The display, to climax the holiday stage show, will last but three minutes. It took the lighting director and the staff of the theatre's electrical department two years to complete.

With several film company home offices and CIO's Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild deadlocked for several months over new contract terms, the "white collarite" labor scene here is due for additional activity shortly when AFL's IATSE Motion Picture Home Office Employes Local No. H-63 places demands for salary increases before Warners, Universal, United World, Ace Laboratories, Castle Films and Loew's Robbins Music Co. The "IA" bid will involve some 1,100 office workers.

H-63 executive vice-president Russell Moss reported yesterday that he has asked the companies to begin new contract talks. The local's present pacts expire on August 31. Moss said raises will be sought for all.

The executive board of the local, Moss reported, has appointed a coordination and policy committee. It will meet Monday to prepare new demands, which will be alike for each of the six companies involved.

Order B. & K.'s Books Opened In Ridge Suit

Motion to Inspect Rental Records to '42 Granted

CHICAGO, June 16.—The Ridge Theatre won a major preliminary round in its anti-trust suit against major distributors today when Judge John Barnes of U. S. District Court issued an order granting the plaintiff's motion to completely audit the books of 25 Balaban and Katz theatres from Feb. 1, 1942, to the present.

Judge Barnes also granted the plaintiff the right to inspect books showing admission receipts and film rentals paid to distributors on B and K houses also from Feb. 1, 1942. The 1,400-seat Ridge, operated by Bartelstein Brothers, could possibly turn out to be the guinea pig" in establishing for Northside theatres what the Jackson Park decree did for the Southside. Inability to compete for first-run product with opposition houses, B and K's Granada and Uptown, is charged. Since the suit was instituted, however, the Ridge has been bidding for and playing product from 20th-Fox, United Artists, M-G-M and, most recently, Universal.

Says Latin American Business Is Good

Business in Latin America is excellent, with people flocking to theatres, Arthur Pincus, Loew's International assistant director of advertising-publicity, discloses here on his return from a three-and-a-half month visit to M-G-M offices and theatres.

Pincus commented on "the futility" of the quota system in some Latin countries as a means of building up native industry. He said that once a producer knows beforehand that his country's exhibitors must give playing time to his product, it "becomes an invitation to mediocrity." Pincus said that "free competition on a free screen would immediately mean pictures from every part of the world competing on a basis of artistic merit and audience satisfaction and not on a basis of self-defeating protectionism."

"Alimony"

(Orbit-Equity—Eagle-Lion)

A LIGHTWEIGHT entertainment entry, Orbit Productions' "Alimony" tells the story of a struggling song-writer's climb up the ladder of success, and indicts divorce racketeering in somewhat melodramatic terms. Starring Martha Vickers, John Beal and Hillary Brooke, and directed by Alfred Zeisler, from a screenplay by Lawrence Lipton, George Bricker and Sherman L. Lowe, the picture employs the flashback technique in formula fashion as Beal's account of the heartaches and financial stress he suffered at the hands of avaricious Miss Vickers is presented to her father. The script, from an original by Royal K. Cole and Lowe, opens with Miss Vickers being hospitalized following an automobile accident. The scene shifts at once to Beal's apartment where the girl's father, played by James Guilfoyle, has called to determine her whereabouts. Beal tells him how, before he became a famous song-writer, Miss Vickers' charm captured his fancy and caused him to break his engagement to Miss Brooke. However, when the greedy young lady sees Beal run into a bit of misfortune she jilts him, and meanwhile becomes associated with a shady lawyer who operates a "badger game" divorce racket. The racket backfires ultimately and all connected with it, including Miss Vickers, go to jail, Hardly had she been released from prison after serving her term when she is struck by an auto. Beal, meanwhile, has been happily married to Miss Brooke.

A few unimpressive tunes are woven into the proceedings. Except for Miss Vickers', who handled her assignment with a measure of zeal, the acting ranges from poor to mediocre. Rounding out the cast are Laurie Lind, Leonid Kinskey, Ralph Graves, Douglass Dumbrille, and Marie Blake. Constantin J. David produced this Equity Pictures presentation.

Aleman Asked to Cut Mexican Film Taxes

MEXICO CITY, June 16. — Asserting that Mexican pictures are doing well and have good prospects at home and abroad, but admitting that the domestic trade is presently depressed, the National Cinematographic Industry Commission has asked President Miguel Aleman to order more Government aid for the film business, particularly in the form of reduced taxes.

The President was told that foreign trade for Mexican pictures is good, except in England where home production affords keen competition.

Reporting peace in the industry, the commission assured the chief executive that a strike is not expected to result from employes' demands for another pay hike when the two-year agreements made in 1947 expire this month. The commission reported the consensus of opinion in the trade is that this case will be settled amicably.

Anti-Trust 'Stigma' Cited by the FCC

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Federal Communications Commission does not think much of Paramount's argument that it has purged itself of any anti-trust stigma by entering a consent decree with the Government in the New York trust case.

This was indicated today by acting FCC chairman Rosel H. Hyde, in testimony before a Senate Interstate Commerce Committee considering changes in the FCC act.

The FCC has been considering whether to let into radio and television firms that have violated the anti-trust laws in other fields, and has indicated this in connection with various applications of Paramount and Paramount subsidiaries for TV licenses. After it signed the consent decree, Paramount filed a brief with the Commission that the Supreme Court's Paramount decision no longer should be held against it.

Reviews

"Leave It to Henry"

(Monogram-Mayfair)

MONOGRAM follows up "Henry the Rain Maker" with another in the family-comedy vein with Raymond Walburn and Walter Catlett again appearing as the principals. The small-town story is done strictly for laughs and with marked success. "Leave It to Henry" looks even better than its predecessor.

In the script, by D. D. Beauchamp, directed with due allowance for laughs by Jean Yarbrough, Walburn induces Mayor Catlett to join him in building a boat to be sailed, afire, down the local river past a park where a local club group, headed by Walburn's wife, is celebrating the town's 100th anniversary. Background circumstances include a quarrel between Walburn and the owner of a toll-bridge which is set afire by the boat and destroyed, landing Walburn in jail and leading to a court hearing which is utilized as a framework for the narrative. A great variety of humorous detail and dialogue surrounds this central story thread. Peter Scully produced and edited this Mayfair poduction. Others in the cast are Gary Gray, Mary Stuart, Barbara Bown, Houseley Stevenson, Ida Moore, Olin Howlin and Pat Phelan.

Running time, 57 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, not set.

"Fighting Fools"

(Monogram)

Hollywood, June 16

ANOTHER in the series designed to expose the prizefight game, this moderately budgeted Leo Gorcey-Bowery Boys film emerges as an acceptable picture, at least from the viewpoint of those whose capacity for "Dead End Kids," "Bowery Boys" and several such variations is endless. Gorcey has a field day in this one as the irrepressible "Slip" Mahoney, Bowery prizefight manager. He gets off such nifties as "carbonated copies" (in lieu of carbon) and "conjecture" (in place of gesture). Other pleasantries are of similar nature and come in bunches, along with such standby antics as Gorcey batting the ears and pouring cream soda in the face of Huntz Hall, his No. 1 foil, on the slightest and frequent provocation of asininity by Hall.

Frankie Darro offers a good, straight performance as the washed-up fighter who comes back to the championship by way of avenging his younger brother's death in the ring. Crooked managers play their villainous role in the picture, and the "expose" angle is so developed, or over-developed, as to employ an iron bar in the glove of a dirty fighter. Gorcey's father, Bernard Gorcey, contributes a few excellent scenes as Louie, the boys' benefactor and sweet shop proprietor although some of the dialogue given him borders uncomfortably on the dialect stereotype. Teddy Infuhr shows promise in a "kid brother" role to Darro.

Jan Grippo produced and Reginald Le Borg directed, from the screenplay by Edmond Seward, Gerald Schnitzel and Bert Lawrence.

"Guaglio"

(Lux Film)

IN the tradition of such importations as "Open City," "Shoe Shine" and "Paison" this Italian-made film is one of impressive calibre. Basically, it is the story of an Italian priest and his struggles to set up a "Boys' Town" in an effort to rehabilitate the ragged, war-orphaned and homeless children who live by scratching out a miserable existence through devious criminal means. But more importantly it is a film of the highest order for it uses only two professional actors while the rest of the cast is composed chiefly of 20 "street orphans" ranging in age from six to 15. It is these children who turn in acting performances seldom equalled by similar groups. Adolfo Celi heads the cast as the priest and renders a performance which is top-flight. Simplicity, naturalness and warmth have emerged from the expert direction of Luigi Comencini. It was produced by Carlo Ponti and Gigi Martello.

Running time, 88 minutes. General audience classification. May release.

Would Limit Drive-Ins

HARTFORD, June 16.—The Connecticut Legislature's Roads, Rivers and Bridges Committee has given a favorable report on House bill No. 1163, which would block construction of new drive-in theatres on state aid and trunk line highways within Connecticut. The bill was sent to the House and Senate for further action. It was offered by Rep. Cressy as a "safety measure" designed to help prevent accidents and traffic congestion along heavily traveled highways.

Film Video Unit Sets June 30 Meeting

National Television Film Council's first quarterly open forum will be held June 30 at the Roosevelt Hotel here. Purpose of the forum, according to NTFC president, Melvin L. Gold, is to outline problems confronting film producers, distributors and TV stations, and to find immediate solutions, or place the problems on committee agenda for research.

B. & K.'s Books

tiff attorney Seymour Simon claimed that the reasons for wanting to inspect the books were: to show that theatres and distributors make more money in Chicago when it plays on an early run; when B and K buys a picture, it buys for all theatres at one time; to check the accuracy of certain answers to interrogatories submitted on film rentals paid; when B and K makes a deal with the distributor and allocates film rental to various theatres, it may allocate a higher film rental than is ordinary to the theatres which are in the vicinity of the Ridge, and "we want to find out whether B and K is compensated for that by a lower film rental in another theatre somewhere else where it has no competition—a lower film rental than would ordinarily be expected there."

The motion had been bitterly contested by Paramount attorney Ed Johnston, of which the court took note in its statement. Judge Barnes' statement read in part: "The real question before the court under the rule is, has the moving party made a showing that the facts requested are relevant? The court thinks it has. Many facts are relevant because of the magnitude of the defendants, Balaban and Katz Corp."

will concentrate on the advisability of repealing or tightening several laws containing exemptions from the anti-trust laws, including the Webb-Pomerene Act, which concerns export associations.

It will also study such changes as increased penalties, giving the government authority to sue for treble damages, and closing several loop-holes in present trust laws. References to the Paramount case are expected to recur frequently.

Harvey Speaks

Evans also arrived here to appear in a parade and bond rally which are part of the Roundup.

Commenting on the appointment of Francis Harmon as head of the Motion Picture Association of America's new exhibitor relations department, Harvey said he had made his stand clear in a letter to the Association. He said he doesn't believe Harmon has the qualifications for the job.

Saying he could not understand why David Palfreyman left the post, Harvey added, "I know it will be a long time before Harmon will have the confidence of exhibitors to the extent Palfreyman did."

Justice Wants FCC TV Ban On Producers

Warns Against Limiting Powers of Commission

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The Justice Department has warned Congress not to place any restrictions on the Federal Communications Commission's power to keep film producers and exhibitors out of television.

Justice attorney David Hume testified for the Department before a Senate Interstate Commerce Sub-committee in opposition to various sections of a pending bill to overhaul the FCC Act. He especially objected to sections that he claimed would keep the FCC from barring film producers or exhibitors as such from the video field and would scrap the present law's provision that the Commission can deny a license because of the company's anti-trust violations.

Harvey Wants More Power for Branches

SALT LAKE CITY, June 19.—The "good old days" when branch managers were more than "just errand boys" and could sign contracts because they knew special local conditions, were recalled by Rotus Harvey in an address to an exhibitor-distributor luncheon held here Friday.

Harvey, board chairman of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, was here from San Francisco to attend the Motion Picture Roundup, held by exhibitors from the intermountain area. Assailing the practice of having contracts made on a local basis over-ruled by the home office, Harvey said he was glad to note that one company was going back to

TBA Asks End of Video 'Freeze' in Eleven Areas

Immediate action on a partial lifting of the "freeze" on new television station applications now pending has been asked at the weekend in a letter by J. R. Poppele, president of the Television Broadcasters Association, to the Federal Communications Commission.

Poppele said that the "freeze" could be ended in 11 market areas, comprising 22 channels, where questions of interference and station spacing, said to be the prime reasons for the freeze, would not be factors to be considered.

He listed these areas as follows:

Amarillo, Denver, El Paso, Sacramento, Salt Lake City, Corpus Christi, San Diego, San Francisco, Seattle, Tacoma and Stockton, Cal.

Tradewise . . .

By SHERWIN KANE

THE predisposition of newspapers to single out Hollywood for special headline attention when the news can be made to appear sensational or damaging is an established symptom of deficient industry public relations.

A recent example was the newspaper handling of the mention of professional names in the Judith Coplon espionage trial in Washington. Stage, radio and concert personalities were mentioned at the same time that Hollywood names were read into the record. But to the headline writers the other names were unimportant. The Page Ones of the nation screamed "Hollywood" and "Film Stars." In many New York newspapers, those who read no farther than page one never learned that stage, radio and concert names were involved, too. Those names were in the "also mentioned" group on the inside pages.

If and when the Motion Picture Association of America's new public relations activities are organized it is to be hoped that this unfair and damaging attitude in metropolitan news rooms will be made a matter of study and determined attention. The industry's viewpoint needs to be presented to every influential copy desk in the country. The job is not to be done by contacting a few amusement page writers and columnists.

Another common manifestation of journalistic ill-will toward Hollywood is frequently to be encountered in published interviews with those who come East in search of stage employment when their value or usefulness to Hollywood has ended, usually because of their own behavior or deficiencies.

Otherwise good reporters will record faithfully for their papers whatever one of these outcast actors or actresses may have to say about the stupidity of Hollywood and its stultifying effect on their art, together with their determination never to return to that poppy-seed land. In any other field of reporting, it would be mere routine for the same newspapermen to ask the obvious question: "Have you had an offer?"

The answer, if it were an honest one, would spoil the story, solely because so many reporters' minds are conditioned to the belief that criticism of Hollywood and belittling it are not only smart but popular.

It is only the exceptional reporter who would get the facts and make of them a different and better story.

The first year of the Anglo-American remittance agreement has expired and, in another six months, the agreement can be reopened for renegotiation, with resultant changes to take effect after June 14, 1950.

The British government has repeatedly voiced its hopes for better relations between the American and home film industries, although it has but recently expressed its determination to maintain its unrealistic film quota, a major source of the ill-feeling existing on this side of the Atlantic.

If the British government is sincere in its wish to help improve relations between the two industries, there is much that it can do within the realm of the remittance agreement when the negotiations get under way next winter. Elimination of the remittance restrictions or their liberalization by the British government could soften the outcries against the quota and would go far toward placating those in a position to extend efforts to assist British product in this market.

If, six months to a year hence, Britain's dollar position does not warrant removal of remittance restrictions, there is still much that the British government could do in the way of liberalizing the permitted uses of industry funds blocked in London. A friendly gesture, after the succession of unfriendly ones, would be the much-needed proof of the British government's good intentions.

Rank Studio Upheld In Labor Dispute

LONDON, June 19.—Tom O'Brien, secretary of the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employes, serving as an independent arbitrator, has decided that "Bert Batchelor's employment in the maintenance department of Denham Studios, as now performed, cannot be continued without impairing the department's reasonable efficiency."

Efforts of the J. Arthur Rank studio to transfer Batchelor, a union shop steward, to Shepherd's Bush studio during April resulted in a walk-out of Rank's studio employes and a brief shutdown of production. Because O'Brien is a union officer, his decision in Rank's favor is regarded as a severe rebuke to the Electrical Trades Union, which supported Batchelor.

"Hellfire"

(Republic)

WITH William Elliott starring in the role of a reformed gambler, this Trucolor production combines outdoor action in the typical Western manner with a story of a man's fight to build a church. Marie Windsor plays a notorious lady bandit, and the supporting players include Forrest Tucker as a marshal and H. B. Warner as the minister who saves Elliott's life but loses his own. Elliott promises the dying minister to build a church according to the precepts of the Bible, not by violent, unlawful means.

Elliott plans to capture the lady bandit and use the reward to build the church. He attempts to convince her that she should give herself up. When Elliott realizes that the girl plans to continue her life of banditry, he becomes a deputy sheriff and arrests her. In the final scene three brothers who are hunting for Miss Windsor because she murdered their brother, break into the jail and shoot her. When Elliott arrives on the scene the wounded lady bandit, now convinced of her misdeeds, repents and dies in his arms.

William J. O'Sullivan produced and R. G. Springsteen directed. Dorrell and Stuart McGowan wrote the screenplay. Miss Windsor, while posing as a saloon entertainer, sings "Bringing in the Sheaves" and "Shoo Fly."

Running time, 90 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, June 26.

"Kazan"

(Columbia)

AS AN action dog story, "Kazan" is in the old tradition of Rin-Tin-Tin, filled with human interest and outdoor drama. The picture again demonstrates the fine companionship that can be achieved by man and his four-footed friend.

While principal credit goes to Zoro, a handsome white shepherd, in the title role of a dog driven to savagery by men and regenerated by a gentler person, Columbia studio and producer Robert Cohn saw to it that the human members in the cast did their work well. Writer Arthur Ross also deserves praise for supplying a credible story, emphasizing the natural effects of the elements, and the people and surroundings of the Canadian North Woods rather than resorting to the stereotype of a "wonder dog."

"Kazan" will appeal particularly to those regular lovers of animal pictures, although photographer Henry Freulich's skilled camera technique utilizes the ruggedly beautiful outdoor scenery, snow-filled trails, timber and majestic mountains, to the point of rendering this little film a delight also to outdoor fans and all admirers of nature's wonders. For action devotees, there is an abundance of exciting battles between Kazan and fierce wolves, wild cats and, for good measure, between the human hero and several villains. There is also the subtler drama of a father, the trading post proprietor, whose selfish love for his daughter and his own self-pity prevent him from allowing her friendship with any other person, dog or man.

Stephen Dunne offers a pleasing performance as the government game conservation agent who undertakes to prove that Kazan is a highly trained pack dog and not a "killer dog" or a wolf. Lois Maxwell is the troubled heroine while the late Roman Bohnen reveals rare dramatic worth as her sadistic father. Joe Sawyer is seen as the rascally promoter of dog fights. Two excellent character roles are contributed by George Cleveland as a bibulous old codger and John Dehner as a French-Canadian trapper. Will Jason directed.

Running time, 65 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, June 11.

Vaudeville Revived by Reade at Asbury

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 19.—Seven acts of vaudeville, plus a first-run picture—a policy similar to the New York Palace Theatre programs—will be initiated at the St. James, a Walter Reade Theatre in Asbury Park on July 1. The vaudeville, to be sold like the Palace at popular prices, will play one-week stands, changing on Wednesdays.

This will mark the first return of vaudeville to Asbury Park since the late 1920's when the New Jersey resort area functioned as a leading try-out spot for Broadway-bound shows and variety acts. The screen feature for the opening bill will be "Slightly French."

Exhibitors Enthuse Over B & K TV Show

CHICAGO, June 19.—Exhibitors who attended the first Chicago showing of theatre television at the Balaban and Katz Chicago Theatre Thursday night were generally enthusiastic over the system itself, but were luke-warm over the initial presentation which included interviews with celebrities and entertainment by stage, screen and radio personalities. Employing the Paramount tele-transcription system, which records an event within 66 seconds after it emerges from the television tube, and then projects it on the screen through standard 35mm. machines, the event was accepted by the audience with varying degrees of enthusiasm, and, at times, placidity.

One competing circuit exhibitor expressed favor with B. and K. and Paramount for expending both time and money to develop the system which, he believes, will help theatres combat the competition of home television. An audience poll taken after the show drew superlatives over the tele-transcription system.

Station WBKB, which televised the entire program, reported at the weekend that negotiations for televising the June 22 world heavyweight bout from Chicago Stadium have been underway for the next Chicago Theatre event. However, it was said that it may take an 11th hour decision to clear the rights.

Denver Complaint Answered by Smith

Answering a complaint made at the recent meeting of Allied Rocky Mountain Theatres in Denver that a locally-approved 20th Century-Fox deal subsequently was rejected, A. W. Smith, Jr., sales vice-president in charge of sales, on Friday reaffirmed the company's policy of approving all deals in the field. He said that the misunderstanding was the result of "someone getting his signals crossed," adding that a contract for "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College" which had been rejected after it left the exchange, subsequently was approved. Smith said that the deal never went above Herman Wobber's division headquarters where the final action for the Denver area could be taken under the company policy; it did not reach the home office, he said.

Mexicans Get Preference

MEXICO CITY, June 19. — Foreign players, including bit people and extras, must not be excluded from Mexican pictures, Andres Serra Rojas, director general of the film trade's own bank, the Banco Nacional Cinematografico, stressed in clarifying his recent order to producers to give preference to Mexican players. He pointed out that the order does not mean exclusion of foreigners, but merely that Mexicans get first choice.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

THE MOTION PICTURE, ILLEGAL ENTRY

STATEMENT BY SENATOR WILEY

I have commented on this matter in a statement placed on Monday, June 6, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, on pages 7367–7368. At that time, I was glad to invite attention to an excellent motion picture, the Universal International semidocumentary film, Illegal Entry, whose world premiere will be held tonight in Washington. From all reports which I have received, this picture should be seen by every American not only as:

(a) An exciting film in its own right, but

(b) As a patriotic inspiration on the work of border patrol officers; and

(c) As an education in this vital problem, illegal entries.

New Theatres Flood Bavaria, AMG Says

Cancellation of a Bavarian law requiring new enterprises, including theatres, to get a business license from the local government has started a rush into film exhibition, and the trend will probably be reversed only after motion picture theatres begin to go into bankruptcy, the U. S. Military Government for Bavaria declares in a report reaching here.

"Since the Military Government can only check into the political and professional background of the registrant, but cannot decide the question of necessity for a motion picture theatre in any locality, more theatres than are economically justifiable have been and are being opened throughout Bavaria," the report states.

TV Films Converted For Theatre Use

HOLLYWOOD, June 19.—Four television films produced by the Grant-Realm Company in 27-minute lengths and sponsored for video by American Tobacco have been combined into feature picture form and sent to an unnamed group of Canadian exhibitors reportedly interested in acquiring the subject for theatre exhibition purposes, according to Grant-Realm. Under the deal with American Tobacco, the films could be made available to theatres after six months.

The four are selected from 26 subjects and the remainder could be similarly converted. Grant-Realm indicated that American theatres will be approached on a similar basis if the Canadian deal works out favorably.

HOLLYWOOD, June 19. — Margalo Gillmore, stage actress, will make her screen debut in Warner Brothers' "Perfect Strangers," with Ginger Rogers and Dennis Morgan, it is understood. Robert Ross, her actor-husband, also has been recruited from Broadway for the film, which Jerry Wald will produce and Bretaigne Windust will direct.

Edward J. and Harry Lee Danziger of Eastern Sound Studios, whose initial production, "Jigsaw," was released recently, have purchased "St. Benny the Dip," an original story and screen play by George Auerbach, for $100,000, it is understood.

Reviews

"Stagecoach Kid"

(RKO Radio)

AS a standard outdoor Western, featuring Tim Holt, the situations run true to the acceptable form, and the whole emerges just a shade better than expected. Directed by Lew Landers and produced by Herman Schlom, the film has touches that set it above the average film of this type. To be sure, the situations and characterizations run true.

Holt is teamed up again with Richard Martin, who plays Holt's buddy, as a Latin American cowpuncher. The boys work for a stagecoach line and when an attempt is made to hold up the coach for the purpose of kidnapping the owner of a ranch, Thurston Hall, the boys foil the holdup and get themselves involved in the usual gunfights, fist fights, hard riding and straight shooting. The crooked foreman of the ranch is killed and the daughter of the owner attempts to impersonate a boy and is soundly spanked for her efforts by Holt.

There are nice little touches of comedy here and there, nothing sensational, but enough to give the picture a certain lift. The photography, too, deserves a special nod with an odd and interesting angle being used to make nice variety. Holt is his usual able self in the lead, with Jeff Donnell registering nicely as the girl. Joe Sawyer is the bad one, working all the way through in a properly menacing fashion.

Running time, 60 minutes. General audience classification. For June release.

"Stallion Canyon"

(Kanab—Astor)

"STALLION CANYON" is the first picture from Kanab Pictures Corp. It has the benefit of Trucolor but there are glaring production weaknesses, such as poor photography and bad sound.

The story is a routine outdoor action melodrama. Ken Curtis fills the lead role of a cowpuncher, and cast opposite him romantically is Carolina Cotton. Plot concerns an attempt by a villainous fellow to deprive Curtis of his ranch through a mortgage foreclosure. The ranch is put up by Curtis as the stake in a horserace, and, although Curtis himself is deprived of victory in the race in consequence of an accident, an Indian friend wins it in Curtis' behalf, the result being that the ranch does not have to be relinquished. Hy Heath wrote the screenplay. Denver Brandon produced and Harry Fraser directed.

Running time, 72 minutes. General audience classification. For June release.

"The Bandit"

(Lux-Times)

AN ITALIAN-made production starring Anna Magnani and Amadeo Nazzari, this Lux film has a compelling and well-acted story and should register well with foreign film patrons here.

As in many other films from overseas, this picture over-emphasizes the love scenes to an unnecessary point, but the over-all theme sublimates and certainly takes attention away from the more sensuous sequences. Laid in chaotic Italy at the end of the war, the story opens with two friends coming back from the front—one going back to his family and the other, Nazzari, hunting fruitlessly for employment but determined not to join a criminal gang led by Anna Magnani. He discovers his sister, whom he had thought dead in a bombing, in the clutches of a white slaver, and in his attempt to free her, the sister is killed by the leader, who is murdered by Nazzari. Now a fugitive, he joins the game, becomes its leader, and is finally tracked down on a mountainside where he allows himself to be shot down. The whole tone of the film is grim with superb acting by the principals adding a great deal of pathos. Director Alberto Lattuada has done a fine job in building the dramatic sequences to the tragic and inexorable climax.

Running time, 77 minutes. Adult audience classification. For June release.

the old practice, evidently referring to 20th Century-Fox.

Harvey also hit percentage deals, claiming that under that setup some exhibitors lose money when grosses go above a certain point. He said that much of the industry's best product is being dissipated through lack of exploitation, and called upon both distributors and exhibitors to correct the situation.

Harvey was optimistic about the production problems in Hollywood, and said that teamwork with exhibitors would give the industry "new life." He sees no threat from television to the industry.

publishers of the Daily Peoples World, San Francisco.

The two papers, according to the complaint, "wrongfully copied, used, appropriated and published a material and substantial part of the screenplay of 'The Red Menace,' a copy of which was surreptitiously and wrongfully obtained from Republic Studios."

The film company describes "Menace" as "currently creating a furore in the entertainment world because of its outspoken and documented blast against methods used by Communists to infiltrate and to lure unsuspecting Americans into its party, where they become tools of those who have sworn to destroy our American way of life," it was said.

The actions were started in New York Supreme Court and in the U. S. District Court, Southern District of California.

SAG, SIMPP

Eric A. Johnston, with a view to advancing the SAG's campaign.

Thompson and Dales, who returned to the Coast at the weekend following the annual meeting here of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, originally were scheduled to go to Washington to act there in behalf of the Guild's position on the British question. In postponing the trip to Washington, they made plans to return here in about two weeks preliminary to going to the Capital at that time.

Thompson said the SAG views negotiations with the British in this light: discussions concerning the quota or film tax heretofore involved in the British industry and British government on one side and the American industry on the other; hence, by the time the film quota comes up for reconsideration in 1950 it is imperative that the U. S. industry have the State Department firmly committed to support actively and cooperatively the interests of the American industry, and thus make it an even fight.

Justice, FCC Bars

the FCC cannot discriminate in its licensing policies against "any kind of lawful occupation," Hume said this might result in newspapers or film companies having local monopolies of news media.

Hume said the Government has been fighting for 10 years to divorce producers from their theatres. "The theatre formerly represented the only means of exhibition," he said. "The television art now represents a second such means. It would be paradoxical if the Government should succeed in this 10-year struggle to prevent producer monopolization of theatre exhibition, only to hand the producers the means of monopolizing the new form of exhibition."

The FCC has indicated it would not disqualify film companies only because they are film companies, but how much of a barrier film connections are to getting a television license has never been stated.

Turning to the provision on granting licenses to anti-trust violators, Hume pointed out that it came at a time when the FCC was considering what to do about the licenses or applications of Paramount trust case defendants. He maintained the bill scrapped the FCC's power to bar such firms from radio and TV, but FCC acting-chairman Rosel Hyde told the Senate group only that the pending bill raised questions about the exact scope of the FCC's power in this field.

The hearings finished Friday, and the sub-committee will spend some time working over the bill.

Wilson Defies MPAA-SIMPP QuotaTeam-up

Says It Is Needed to Safeguard Dollar Status

LONDON, June 20.—Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, quickly accepted the challenge of a joint onslaught by the Motion Picture Association of America and the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers against Britain's film quota.

In delivering an address at the summer school of the National Film Association at a Surrey village yesterday, Wilson characterized his new 40 per cent quota as both necessary and proper. The NFA is an organization sponsored by the Trades Union Congress and other Socialist groups.

Despite MPAA President Eric Johnston's protest that the monetary agreement governing American film earnings here effectively protects Britain's dollar position, Wilson claimed it is essential that Britain have a high enough quota "to safeguard the country's overseas payments position."

Ball Takes Decree Intervention Case To Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, June 20. — Harry Norman Ball, owner of the Penn Theatre in Ambridge, Pa., today asked the U. S. Supreme Court to order the New York District Court to permit him to intervene in the Paramount case and to work out provisions in the consent decree with Paramount to give him adequate relief.

Ball, along with the Partmar Corp. of Los Angeles, tried to intervene in the Paramount case the day the Paramount decree was signed, but were denied the right by the three-judge court. Partmar has also filed notice of its appeal, but the full record in the case, has not yet reached the high court.

Ball claims that the State Theatre, in Ambridge, is owned and operated 50 per cent by Paramount and is the fruit of "an illegal conspiracy" and had been used in restraint of trade, and should be divested." Adequate protection in licensing and other trade

M-G-M's U.K. Studio Cost $18,000 Weekly

LONDON, June 20.—Recent closing of M-G-M's British Studios, Ltd., at Boreham Wood, Herts, is costing the company some 4,500 pounds, ($18,000) a week in honoring of contractual agreements as they expire, it is understood here. At present there is no indication of the studio reopening. The company's plans for the production here of the Greer Garson sequel to "Mrs. Minniver" and "Young Bess" are definitely off.

One of the reasons for closing the studio is said to be a desire to test the reactions of American audiences to such British-made pictures as "Edward, My Son" and "The Conspirator." Another reason, less freely admitted, is said to be the reluctance of American talent and technicians to come here because of relatively trying conditions.

Among the personnel recently released from the studio was Hugh Findley, in charge of studio publicity.

Meanwhile, E. J. Mannix, M-G-M Hollywood studio executive, is expected to arrive here shortly to confer with Ben Goetz, in charge of the M-G-M studio here. At present, Mannix is in Rome conferring with Henry Henigson, in charge of production of "Quo Vadis," which was recently postponed because of an eye ailment of its star, Gregory Peck. It is further believed that labor and technical conditions also necessitated the postponement.

Tone and Allen Back TOA on TV Trailers

Franchot Tone and his production partner, Irving Allen, "agree entirely" with the views of Theatre Owners of America executive director Gael Sullivan on the utilization of television for the promotion of new pictures, Allen has informed the latter. Sullivan in behalf of TOA, has been urging distributors and producers to use such video trailers. Several distributors have submitted favorable reports to the TOA.

Allen reported to Sullivan that the Tone-Allen production, "The Man on the Eiffel Tower," has been backed up with a 90-foot, one-minute, 16mm. television trailer made by National Screen, together with shorter ones. "The motion picture industry, as you have indicated," Allen told Sullivan, "must certainly recognize television as a medium of sales and exploitation.

Promotion Overseas Excellent: Emerling

Ernest Emerling, advertising-publicity director of Loew's Theatres, yesterday cited the excellent job being done in Italy and Switzerland on the promotion and merchandising of pictures. Emerling returned at the weekend from a three-and-a-half week vacation in Europe.

Emerling said that the Italians with whom he talked generally showed a preference for American films to all others. He also praised the skill with which dubbing is done to American product. Production in Italy is slow, he said.

While in Rome, Emerling had an audience with the Pope. Actor Clifton Webb also had a Papal audience on the same day, Emerling said.

Louisville Drive-in Opens, Set 2 More

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 20.—The Kenwood Drive-In, Louisville's sixth, is expected to open within the week. It claims to have the largest screen wall of any drive-in theatre in the South. The estimated cost, including its 36 acres of ground at Third Street Road and National Turnpike, is more than $100,000. It has space for 800 automobiles, with provisions for expanding to a 1,400 car capacity. The screen wall is reported to be 71 feet high and 72 feet wide and able to withstand 100-mile-an-hour winds.

Construction will begin shortly on a new drive-in theatre to be located between Jeffersonville and New Albany, Indiana. When completed it will bring the total to seven such enterprises in operation in the Falls Cities area. Also, an incorporation charter was granted to the B. & W. Wilson Defies quota protection beyond that necessary to maintain our film industry at a rate at which it can reasonably be expected to produce," Wilson said. "Equally we have a right to expect free access and a fair showing for British films on the world's screens."

Wilson, perhaps belatedly, revealed himself as now convinced of the folly of making pictures for the home market only.

He said the "export or die" maxim applies as much to Britain's film industry as to the nation generally.

He agreed that the anxiety of producers to cut costs in the recent crisis was a good sign "but the policy contains an element of danger because it might lead to stereotyped, mass-produced films which denied them any chance of earning dollars." He said austerity cannot be allowed to lead to a deterioration in film quality which would be liable to drive people away from theatres or cramp the style of creative artists.

Wilson declared it to be essential that the industry be so organized and financed that its first aim would be the production of top-quality films, many of which would be unable to recoup their costs in the home market, but as a basis therefor there should be maintained a sufficient flow of general production providing a group of technicians and artists necessary to make the prestige films.

Inferring that his Film Finance Corp. played an influential part, Wilson said that three months ago only 10 features were in production, whereas there are now 15, with 17 more ready to start in the next month or two.

gross is estimated at $75,000; the show concluded its first week with a take of $90,000, which is above earlier estimates. "Sorrowful Jones," with Louis Prima among others on stage, gave the Paramount about $75,000 in a good second week, and on the basis of business on Sunday and yesterday, might wind up a third week with close to $68,000. "Neptune's Daughter," with Alvino Rey's orchestra, and Jerry Lester on stage, probably will draw about $58,000, which is fair enough, in a second week at the Capitol.

"You Were Never Lovelier" and "Cover Girl," Rita Hayworth-starring reissues, probably will give the Criterion about $23,000 in a healthy first week. "Night Unto Night," with Phil Spitalny's orchestra on stage, is down to about $18,000 in an unusually slow second week at the Strand; it will be followed by "Colorado Territory" on Friday. "Barkleys of Broadway" should give the State a modest seventh week's $15,000. "Johnny Allegro" is faltering at the Rivoli, where only $7,000 is apparent for the third and final week; it will be replaced by "Take One False Step" tomorrow.

"Edward, My Son," with the stage show at the Music Hall, is likely to wind up a third and final week tomorrow night with about $106,000, which is very mild busines. The Hall's new show, on Thursday, will comprise "Look for the Silver Lining" and a stage production featuring a spectacular electrical fireworks display.

"Home of the Brave" is holding up fairly well at the Victoria, where the sixth week's take might reach $13,000. "Champion" might hit the $8,000 mark in a so-so 11th week at the Globe. "Red Menace" will bow in at the Mayfair on Saturday, following "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which might gross about $10,000 in a slow second and final week.

The single week of "The Judge Steps Out" and eight new acts on stage should give about $24,000, which is sturdy business, to the Palace. The Astor will take in about $7,000 with "We Were Strangers" in a minor eighth week.

Still going good are the three Brititsh-made attractions at first runs here with grosses estimated as follows: "Hamlet," Park, 38th week, $8,300; "The Red Shoes," Bijou, 35th week, $8,000; "Quartet," Sutton, 12th week, $8,000.

Argentina Raises Tax

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Argentina's theatre tax, previously based on total seating capacity, has been changed to 8.45 per cent of the proceeds from tickets sold for each show; and an additional tax of 10 per cent (instead of a former five per cent) is included in the price of the tickets.

some $4,500,000 of already frozen funds.

The Army's stand was taken at a conference of top industry leaders and California Senators and Congressmen. The conference was called by Republican Senator William F. Knowland to study the industry's Japanese problems. Attending were MPAA president Eric Johnston, legislative representative Jack Bryson and Joyce O'Hara. From Congress, in addition to Knowland, there were Senator Sheridan Downey and representatives Cecil King, John Phillips and Gordon McDonough.

Government's Views

Tracy Voorhees, Assistant Secretary of the Army for Occupied Areas, gave the Government's views. He said he planned to go to Japan next month and would discuss with General MacArthur and other top SCAP officials the possibility of the industry getting out more of its current earnings, either through a larger convertibility guarantee by the Government or some other method.

The California-MPAA group will attempt to take up the problem with defense secretary Louis Johnson later this week, possibly Wednesday.

Officers will be elected at a business meeting Wednesday. Milas Hurley of Tucumcari is president of the association and Russell Hardwick of Clovis is secretary-treasurer.

Ball Decree Case

practices should also be given the Penn, Ball argues.

"The consent decree is wholly inadequate in failing to take into consideration situations in which the Paramount defendants own interests in theatres which they created and maintained and which represent illegal fruits of their monopoly and conspiracy," Ball said. "The decree fails to comply with the mandate of this court, that to the extent acquisitions were the fruit of monopolistic practices or restraints of trade, they should be divested. And no permission to buy out the other owner should be given a defendant," Ball said.

Briefs Are Filed

Both Paramount and the Government have filed briefs asking the high court not to permit Ball's intervention. The Government claims that Ball and Partmar have no standing in the Paramount proceeding, that the consent judgment was designed to help exhibitors as a whole and the industry generally and not to correct every single situation, and that if this intervention is granted, every other independent exhibitor will be coming in with similar claims and the decree will be rendered useless.

The company, of course, will abide by the court order which requires a 20 per cent cancellation privilege in all cases where groups of films are sold before tradeshown. Additionally, the licensing of one film will not be conditioned on the licensing of others.

The accounts likely to be serviced under the plan are those which generally pay a maximum of $75 for a top film from the company. Having licensed for a group of new films to January 1, the theatremen could play the product at whatever playing time they desired.

'Stable' Opens July 27

World premiere of 20th Century-Fox's "Come to the Stable" will take place on Wednesday night, July 27, at the Rivoli Theatre here, it was announced yesterday by A. W. closed, but, according to trade reports, very little cash changed hands, the exchange of stock for theatres having been balanced fairly evenly on the basis of agreed upon valuations for the properties changing hands.

Under its consent decree entered into with the government ending the anti-trust suit against the company, Paramount is authorized to retain a maximum of 14 of the 69 Comerford partnership theatres. The decree specifies that Paramount may keep one theatre in each of the following towns in Pennsylvania: Bloomsburg, Carlisle, Hazelton, Lebanon, Pittston, Pottsville, Shenandoah, Sunbury, Wilkes-Barre and Williamsport. Paramount also may keep two theatres in Scranton and two outside Pennsylvania.

14 Unidentified

The 14 theatres it will retain were not identified by the company.

Paramount's first partnership dissolution agreement was rechead with E. V. Richards, Jr., in New Orleans on June 10. In that instance Paramount agreed to acquire during the first quarter of 1950 Richards' entire 50 per cent interest in Paramount-Richards Theatres. Under its consent decree, Paramount will have to dispose of approximately 35 of those theatres within six months after the deal becomes effective.

Paramount is pressing negotiations with other theatre partners currently to meet the requirement of dissolution of one-third of its partnerships by next March 30. Consequently additional agreements with partners are expected in the near future.

"More conversation about how pictures can be put over and less conversation about terms. The original success of this business was created by an enthusiasm to get people into

"Come to the Stable"

[20th Century-Fox] — For the Whole Family

THOROUGHLY enjoyable entertainment has been made of this Clare Booth Luce story of two nuns who come from France to a New England town to establish a children's hospital, their total capital on arrival being $14.60.

Loretta Young and Celeste Holm, as the nuns, give to their characters a beguiling innocence that makes credible their victories over the obstacles in their path. What they accomplish would not even be attempted by the worldly-wise. Their success in their endeavor is not achieved by a script resort to miracles but rather by their implicit and child-like faith in the inherent goodness of everyone. Rather than destroy that faith or, perhaps, because some would like to believe themselves as good as the nuns believe them to be, amazing gifts and help come from the most unlikely sources.

The script, and Henry Koster's knowing direction, as well as the Misses Young's and Holm's performances, keep the story on a warm, human level. There is a good measure of humorous incident, as when the nuns demonstrate how they learned to drive a jeep in France during

The principle of an all-industry endeavor to improve intra-trade and public relations was endorsed by the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York at a meeting here yesetrday with an executive group representing the Motion Picture Association of America.

Support on an individual basis was given by Leo Brecher, president of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association, who told the conferees that he could not commit his organization for the reason that it has not met since the MPAA invitation to participate in the exploratory conference on public relations was extended. According to an MPAA statement subsequently issued, Brecher added: "Nevertheless, we are concerned regarding public relations activity. If a proper program can be developed, I am sure the good sense of our members will lead us to participate."

it has developed and demonstrated on numerous occasions, while the Fox will have direct projection.

Tonight's showings, it is anticipated, will be more of a box-office barometer than any in the past for the reason that permission to advertise in advance has been cleared for the first time. Admission prices will not be increased at either of the two theatres, Paramount holding to $1.20, and the Fox charging 85 cents. The actual distance covered, about 1,000 miles, means another "first."

It will be the longest distance telecast to a theatre screen to date.

It is understood that Paramount and Fabian each paid about $4,000 for the rights to pick-up the video images, which, in addition to promotion expenses, will exceed the amounts either house could take in for the evening performance.

In cooperation with RCA, which apparently is anxious to demonstrate its newly-developed theatre video apparatus, the Fox will have the equipment on a loan basis. The fight pictures will be transmitted from Chicago through coaxial cable to downtown Manhattan and will be relayed to Brooklyn over a special electronic hook-up. The projection equipment, said to represent a considerable reduction in size and weight as compared to earlier units, will be mounted on a platform extending from the front of the balcony and operated from a remote position.

U. K. Showmen Hit Loan to Video Firm

LONDON, June 21.—Action of the government's Film Finance Corp. in making a loan to a production concern for the making of short films for use on American television stations has been made the top item on the agenda of the Cinematograph Exhibitor Association's summer convention, opening this weekend at Gleneagles in the Scottish Highlands.

Showmen here say they are anxious to learn American reactions to the circumstance that Britain's government is now taking a hand in the provision of shows on United States television networks.

Protests from British exhibitors are growing in force. They point out that Film Finance Corp. was intended to support the country's film industry. They claim that James H. Lawrie, managing director of the FCC, in making the advance, is countering that objective. British exhibitors have banned the showing in their theatres of any film used on BBC television programs.

"Come to the Stable"

the war, and numerous other items of sound audience appeal which give the picture a kinship with such distinguished predecessors in the field of characterizations of persons in religious life as "Going My Way" and "The Bells of St. Mary's."

The matter-of-factness with which they settle in the small abode of artist Elsa Lanchester, and later move in with them a dozen more French nuns and an abbey to help with the work of raising money for the hosptial, will strike a reminiscent note with everyone who has ever had unexpected guests, or those who stretched an invitation to dinner into semi-permanent residence.

AND any home-owner who moved to the country for peace and seclusion will understand song-writer Hugh Marlowe's antagonism to the money-raising activities on his doorstep and the prospect of a hospital on the site across the road, where now spreads a verdant hillside. They will understand the misgivings, too, of the bishop, Basil Ruysdael, when he discovers the penniless nuns have obtained an option on a temporary building innocent of the knowledge that its cost is $30,000, not, as they believed, merely the option money.

Their faith and labor pay off eventually, with an assist from the music of their Gregorian chant, which Marlowe unconsciously borrows for the refrain of his hit song, "Through a Long and Sleepless Night," for which Alfred Newman wrote the music and Mack Gordon the lyrics.

It is fine, family entertainment, the kind that leaves the customers with a pleasant afterglow. It has a high box-office potential.

Samuel G. Engel produced. The screen play is by Oscar Millard and Sally Benson. The cast is a large and happy one, offering pleasant performances from top to bottom.

Running time, 94 minutes. General audience classification. For September release.

the theatres rather than by emphasizing how much the exhibitor has to pay for the picture.

"A keen analysis of all companies' product in relation to community entertainment pattern which would bring back the good old-time idea of discovering naturals for particular communities.

"Rejuvenation of the traditional point of view that there is something more to our business than cold economics and that a picture can only be made attractive to the public if opinions about its box-office are reserved until after the picture has a chance to play.

"A realization that the continued good health of this business depends on all branches again uniting in the common cause of talking the business up rather than talking it down," U-I's statement concluded.

specific amount. He said that Rank pictures have a "full share of the screen time on a level with the best American product."

Weait observed that business in general has dropped as much as 30 per cent from the wartime peak, with the exception of Venezuela. He believes Venezuela has maintained its peak because that country has no "dollar problem." In Mexico City, Weait observed, there has been an "over-building" of large theatres.

"New houses with 3,500 seating capacities have been erected without regard to audience potential, and this may create a serious situation there," he said. Weait cited one instance in which there are three second-run houses on one block with a total seating capacity of 10,000.

Two More Drive-ins

CINCINNATI, June 21.—Mrs. Bessie Dean and B. A. Sherlock, of Bellaire, O., and G. P. Smith of Steubenville, are the incorporators of a new company which will build and operate a drive-in at Glen Dale, W. Va.

At Keyser, W. Va., the new Lewis drive-in has been opened by Robert E. Lewis and William A. Carrier, and will cater exclusively to colored patronage.

KATO Committee Named

MPAA Goodwill Plan

MPAA met at the Hotel Astor for a luncheon-conference, which was presided over by Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO and chairman of the MPAA exhibitor-community relations committee.

The complete cooperation of ITOA was pledged by Harry Brandt, president. Max A. Cohen, chairman of a special ITOA committee, joined in the indorsement. An official stand by the MMPTA will be taken at the next meeting of that organization.

Depinet spoke for the MPAA, stating that the gathering was another in a series of meetings with various groups in the industry for the purpose of ultimately devising a specific program. He asked each organization to appoint a small committee to represent it at future discussions and presumably will do the same when he or others of the MPAA take up the subject with Allied States officials in Indianapolis on Saturday and subsequently with the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners and other Hollywood groups.

Asks Special Committees

Depinet's suggestion that each group name special committees for further talks was taken to indicate that formation of an industry council representing all segments of the business might be one of the more definitive steps taken toward setting a program.

No dissenting voices were heard at the session yesterday. Sam Rinzler and Sam Rosen, for the MMPTA; William Namenson, of the ITOA, and all those previously mentioned were in agreement on the idea of unity within the industry.

Others present were William F. Rogers, Austin Keough and Maurice Bergman, all as members of the Depinet committee; Francis Harmon, MPAA vice-president; Norman Elson, ITOA, and Oscar Doob and D. John Phillips of the MMPTA.

News of the Day and Paramount News each have dispensed with a number of camermen during the past year. Warner Pathe News is said to be the only newsreel not to have instituted layoffs in the current economy moves.

Meanwhile, studio mechanics, cameramen, and other Eastern IATSE locals whose members have been discussing a strike against the reels because of a prolonged deadlock in new contract negotiations have yet to be called by "IA" special negotiator Sal Scoppa to a "showdown" meeting with the companies, as was planned.

Final details of the settlement were discussed and later Lightman said he would leave for New York shortly to meet with Paramount officials there.

There are 74 theatres owned by Malco and its affiliated organizations but there are only 52 of them in which Paramount has an interest.

Following the U. S. Supreme Court's divorce decree, theatres jointly owned by Paramount and Malco in the Memphis territory were inspected and surveyed by representatives of the two companies.

Review

"The Girl from Jones Beach"

(Warner Brothers)

A MIRTHFUL succession of events and complications flows through Warner Brothers' "The Girl from Jones Beach." The story is featherweight in theme but is as refreshing as a midsummer ice cream soda. The cast is headed by Ronald Reagan, Virginia Mayo, Eddie Bracken and Dona Drake. They comprise a fresh fun-rousing quartet even though much of the material is of standard nature.

Reagan plays a glamour-girl illustrator who, instead of using one model for his magazine cover creations, combines the best features of a dozen. When promoter Bracken tries to sign up the cover girl for a television show he learns to his remorse that it can't be done since the model is actually 12 girls. Between comic all-is-lost threats to commit suicide, he spots a gorgeous bathing beauty on Jones Beach who combines all the separate charms of the dozen models. This wonderful one turns out to be Miss Mayo, who happens to be a school teacher and the intellectual type. It takes a long time for Reagan, with Bracken's aid, to pursue and win Miss Mayo. It even necessitates his going back to school, but all ends happily, even for Bracken and his energetic sweetheart, Miss Drake.

There are some extremely imaginative touches and crisp dialogue studded throughout I. A. L. Diamond's screenplay. The climax finds Miss Mayo defending her right as a school teacher to wear pretty bathing suits without encroachment upon her civil liberties by old-fashioned school authorities. Bracken is as funny to watch as Miss Mayo is pleasing to behold. The performances of Reagan and Miss Drake do much to lend buoyancy to the picture. Alex Gottlieb produced and Peter Godfrey directed. The screenplay was based on a story by Allen Boretz.

Running time, 78 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, July 16.

"If independent producers are forced out of business, the business will fall into the hands of a few monopolistic companies which most certainly will lead to an unhealthy condition for all exhibitors," he said.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 22.—"In spite of the promises which general sales managers made to national Allied's committee on forced percentages early this year, the obnoxious compulsory percentage policy is still with us," declared North Central Allied general counsel Stanley D. "In this matter of compulsory percentages, promises are broken on the local as well as the national level," Kane charged. He urged "all exhibitors to stay away from percentage pictures, particularly in view of the expressed willingness of almost all top sales managers to sell flat any time, anywhere. Above all, don't be hooked on the promise of a salesman that you will not be checked. Life's Film Round Table Gets 100,000 Words in Two Days

The current issue of Life magazine presents its second and concluding article on motion pictures, entitled "A Round Table on the Movies," consisting mainly of a two-day exchange of views by its guests at Arrowhead Springs, Cal., in mid-May.

"Look for the Silver Lining"

[Warner Brothers]—Handsome and Tuneful

THE life of Marilyn Miller, musical comedy star of the Ziegfeld era, provides the story fabric for this beautifully mounted Technicolor production which brings back many of the outstanding tunes of the period under circumstances certain to revive their popularity.

Dance enthusiasts, too, are generously provided for in this William Jacobs production, directed by David Butler, and starring June Haver, Ray Bolger and Gordon MacRae. The story is light on the comedy side and the tragic ending of Miss Miller's first marriage and her untimely death, vital to the telling, accentuate that lack. The emphasis is on song and dance, presented most attractively, and theatre patrons enjoying those quotients, will be eminently pleased with the proceedings.

The story opens with Miss Haver as Marilyn Miller in rehearsal for a revival of "Sally" in the mid-1930's. Failing health has begun to take its toll and during an enforced rest she reviews her stage career, brought to mind by an old poster advertising the family vaudeville act with which she started.

When other members of her family, played by Charles Ruggles and

Reverse Rule Which Held Such Charges Tax-Free

The full admission price at drive-in theatres is subject to the Federal 20 per cent tax, regardless of whether part of the admission price segregated as a "parking charge," it was disclosed by George J. Schoeneman, U. S. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in a letter to Gael Sullivan, executive director of the Theatre Owners of America.

This, in effect, reverses an earlier ruling which held that the tax did not apply to the charge made for parking if there were an additional bona fide charge for a single admission which must be paid by anyone admitted to the drive-in.

Drive-ins, Schoeneman stated, "are designed to serve patrons who will arrive in a car and witness a movie while remaining in a car. The term 'parking charge' ordinarily implies a charge made for parking a car while the passengers are elsewhere than where the car is parked."

WARNER BROS. ARE GEARED TO GO AS NEVER BEFORE!

Life Roundtable

Siepmann, "film scholar"; Hal Wallis, John Huston, Agnes Moorehead, Martha Scott and Paul MacNamara. MacNamara, David O. Selznick publicity chief, helped make Hodgins' "Blandings" known.

The article answers no questions of import to the industry and says little that has not been said before. A perhaps unintentional commentary on the whole thing is contained in a statement made by Schary:

"If anyone in these meetings has a pattern he could devise for guaranteed successful motion pictures, this whole group would earn millions of dollars."

It seemed the meeting adjourned without discovery of that pattern.

Hollywood members of the group perhaps succeeded in enlightening the company on some subjects. They made able explanations of the why of the "star system," pointing out that it did not originate in Hollywood, that the public makes its own stars and will continue to make them.

They made it clear that they do not consider the Production Code either as a handicap to production or a burdensome, censorious document. The Code, they explained, is self-regulation, voluntarily adopted and compiled with, and not only has kept them out of trouble but also has averted an increase in official censorship bodies elsewhere.

Cooke, British by birth, stuck a pin in the hide of the foreign art film worshippers. Said he: "A mass-produced English film is terrible. As for the French, there is nothing lower in movie-making than ordinary French films."

He pointed out that the "unfair comparison" is made between routine American films and superior foreign ones.

The suggestion was made that those interested in better films might band together to support them, instead of permitting them to die on the vine when they are made.

Exhibitors came in for a rap from Mankiewicz, who felt that the "real estate operators" exercise too much control over what audiences see, and get more of the proceeds than they deserve.

Essence of Life's conclusions was not unfriendly so much as lacking in understanding and insight into the industry. A good deal of sense as well as nonsense was expounded and nothing very pratcical emerged except an article on the "movies" for readers of Life.

Blumberg

matter of public relations, "we at Universal are now preparing special information for all of our employes, which will enable them to become conveyers of good cheer about our business.

"A cynicism has developed in this business which makes very bad public relations. Many who have prospered and done very well in the business find occasion many times to berate it.

"Unless we can have peace and goodwill in our own family, what can we expect.

"We will indoctrinate our people with accurate information about this business. If every employee in the industry had a keener consciousness of what our business really accomplishes year in and year out we would have a few hundred thousand good publicity agents, which we don't have now.

"These points are particularly true in relation to everyone who sells motion pictures. We expect our sales force to think as much about public relations as they do about the selling of motion pictures," Blumberg concluded.

These comments were made essentially by Blumberg in advocating "full-hearted support" to the Motion Picture Association of America's current efforts to mobilize all branches of the industry in an over-all public relations program.

He stated that the recent promotion of Maurice Bergman to a new executive post in charge of public relations will enable the company to move ahead and augment many of its present plans.

"In the Good Old Summertime"

(M-G-M)

UNLESS crystal-gazing has been shorn of all effectiveness, Metro has another successful musical to add to its impressive list. Nostalgic in title and nostalgic as well as pleasing in treatment and values, "In the Good Old Summertime" has what is required for wide appeal and wholesale popularity.

The story structure may be on the frail side and may take constant priming to keep it afloat, but this is no more to the attraction's detriment than to untold numbers of its ilk. The scene—and the scenery—is Chicago in an indeterminate year, but approximately when the 20th century was very new. The romantic principals are Van Johnson, head salesman in S. Z. Sakall's music store, and Judy Garland who reveals sales techniques which press hard on Johnson's record.

Out of business hours, he is developing and maintaining a friendship with an unknown girl via correspondence. It is never a surprise to learn soon enough that the girl is Judy. The romantic idealism dripping in the correspondence is entirely absent from their day-by-day encounters. But in due time and after considerable ribbing, Johnson divulges the truth for the happy ending.

Scattered here and there, as might be expected, are opportunities for Judy to get over several song numbers. She has six, four of them solos, which include old timers like "Meet Me Tonight," "Put Your Arms Around Me, Baby," "Last Night When We Were Young" and "I Don't Care." Long memories will recall this was the number that made Eva Tanguay famous. Judy does an imitation of the renowned vaudevillian in what is one of the best numbers she has ever done and is a highlight of the film. In fact, Miss Garland has not been seen to such overall advantages in quite a spell. She is tops here and outrides all others, including Johnson, whose box-office value should not be minimized, and Sakall, who has a major role in which he does extremely well. Spring Byington, Clinton Sundberg, Marcia Van Dyke, Lillian Bronson and Buster Keaton provide competent support although Keaton is largely wasted.

Production values are superb—and in Technicolor. Art direction by Cedric Gibbons and Randall Duell are not to be divorced from accolades which are proper on this score, nor is Harry Stradling for his photography.

Story origins stem to a play by Miklos Laszlo for which Samson Raphaelson wrote a screenplay, from which Albert Hackett, Frances Goodrich and Ivon Tors wrote the script from which the film was made. Robert Z. (Pop) Leonard, one of Hollywood's veteran directors, deserves bows in his department and so, too, does Joe Pasternak, as producer.

Running time, 102 minutes. General audience classification. For July release.

RED KANN

"The Fountainhead"

(Warner Brothers)

THE story of a modernistic architect's struggle to maintain his artistic integrity in a society of tradition-bound and commercialized values, has been turned into an ambitious and polished production by Warner Brothers. Adapted to the screen from Ayn Rand's best-selling novel of the same name, the picture has Gary Cooper in the lead, with fine support coming from Patricia Neal and Raymond Massey. These are box-office assets that speak for themselves; they are further enhanced by lavish settings. The story is one which reaches moments of high-pitch excitement and tension while at other moments it rambles and remains more promising than fulfilling.

Cooper, as the bright young architect, would have gone far easily and quickly, were he willing to lower his standards to conform to time-honored patterns. However, after a long and difficult struggle he finally climbs to a place of recognition. Along the way he meets Miss Neal and they both fall in love. But somehow Miss Neal, angry and frustrated because Cooper would not conventionalize his standards, marries Massey, her newspaper publisher boss. Thus against the larger focus of the artist's struggle for recognition, the story develops into an adult theme involving a romantic triangle.

The picture reaches its climax when Cooper, after some long smoldering anger, dynamites a housing development because his blueprints for the project were deliberately changed and cheapened. A court case comes up and Cooper is finally acquitted after delivering an eloquent speech on man's right to his own ideals. In the meantime, publisher Massey, once a foe of Cooper, boldly defends him editorially, and brings his paper to the brink of ruin in so doing. Massey's subsequent suicide paves the way for the happy finale in which Cooper and Miss Neal marry.

Other roles in the picture are played by Henry Hull, a broken-down architect, and Jerome Cowan, an old-time newspaper editor. King Vidor directed, with a fine pictorial sense. The screenplay by Miss Rand does not vary much from the basic story of her novel. Henry Blanke produced.

Running time, 114 minutes. Adult audience classification. Release date, July 2.

Auten previewed the picture here today for Boston critics and, at a luncheon at the Statler Hotel later, told them that Boston had been selected for the opening engagement of "As You Like It" because the warm reception the city accorded "Henry V" influenced the success of the picture elsewhere and encouraged Olivier to make other Shakespearian films, including "Hamlet."

The video images on the screen were well-defined and the sound clear—both comparing favorably with regular home television reception.

The event represented the first general public demonstration of RCA's new theatre video equipment. The audience's reaction to the televised fight was pronounced vigorously with frequent applause and cheering just as though those witnessing the exchange of blows were at the actual fight scene.

Rosemary DeCamp, as the parents, and Lee and Lynn Wilde as her sisters, are stricken with mumps and quarantined, Miss Haver is befriended by Bolger, in the role of Jack Donahue, dancer, and wins her spurs in an impromptu performance. After an engagement in London she is offered a part in her first Broadway musical, wherein she meets and falls in love with MacRae. On his return from service in the first World War they are married but in the meantime she has achieved success and he has been forgotten by Broadway.

MacRAE is obliged to go on the road in lesser roles and hurrying back to be with her on one of her opening nights he is killed in an automobile accident. Her star continues in its ascendancy. She marries again but failing health makes it necessary for her to choose between the stage and a prolonged life. Her appearance in the revival of "Sally" provides the answer.

Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby wrote the story. The screenplay is by Phoebe and Henry Ephron and Marian Spitzer. Featured songs include "Look for the Silver Lining," 'Time on My Hands," "Who," "Sunny" and "A Kiss in the Dark." Miss Haver's and Bolger's dance specialties and theirs and MacRae's song numbers are outstanding items in a rich and rewarding production. LeRoy Prinz staged and directed the musical numbers. Fine color photography realizes the solid values of attractive sets and eye-catching costumes.

"Look for the Silver Lining" is a treat for the eyes and ears of the huge audiences that like their musicals as richly dressed as they are endowed with songs and dances.

Running time, 106 minutes. General classification. For July release.

SHERWIN KANE

"Not Wanted"

(Emerald Productions—Film Classics)

A FRANK and forthright appraisal of unwed motherhood and the price in shame, anxiety and insecurity it exacts from young women who permit themselves to be betrayed by infatuation, "Not Wanted" is actress Ida Lupino's first presentation in her new capacity as producer. Miss Lupino does not appear in "Not Wanted," but in addition to having produced, in association with Anson Bond, she shares the screenplay credit with Paul Jarrico who co-authored the original story with Malvin Wald.

As a film that can teach a lesson, this is indeed effective fare, for it is written and acted with deep sincerity. Evaluating the subject matter as entertainment, however, is something else. To be sure, the picture moves along under the able direction of Elmer Clifton at a pace forceful enough to insure unflagging audience attention and with the sort of dramatic intensity that plays upon the heartstrings. But were "Not Wanted" to be represented to potential customers as "entertainment" in the sense that that word has come to be identified with the American motion picture, such selling could be called into question. For example, pregnancy and childbirth are presented in blunt—although by no means lurid or wholly offensive—terms. Not a few people might deem uncalled for the camera's preoccupation with the physical manifestations of the late stages of pregnancy, as is evidenced in a few scenes. But good taste is never really violated, and the producers are to be commended for keeping their picture free of the kind of unwholsome and offensive material that all too frequently is slipped into films of this sort under the guise of serving "realism."

There are no well-known names in the cast of this Emerald Production. The assignments are carried out with verve, and although there is evidence at times of over-acting it would be captious criticism to dwell on that point. Attractive young Sally Forrest acquits herself nicely in the main role of the 'teen-ager who, in consequence of a discordant home life, seeks nighttime excitement, only to get herself "in trouble" following an affair with a young cabaret piano player. Deserted by her lover, she is forced to abandon her home and a clean-cut veteran who loves her, for a distant city where she has her child at a home for unwed mothers. Then, regretful of having put her baby out for adoption, Miss Forrest takes to fondling other women's babies and on one such occasion is mistaken for a kidnapper and arrested. A melodramatic and exciting climax presently gives way to a happy ending wherein the girl and her ex-soldier boyfriend are reunited. Players include Keefe Brasselle, Leo Penn, Dorothy Adams, Wheaton Chambers, Rita Lupino and many others. Collier Young was production supervisor.

Yearly Popcorn Sale Put at $240,000,000

Americans are devouring about $240,000,000 worth of popcorn yearly and giving owners of poppers, largely theatre operators, a 75 per cent profit, it was reported in a recent issue of The Saturday Evening Post, in an article titled "Popcorn Crazy," by Arthur Bartlett.

"The man mainly responsible for increased sale of this snack item was the late Charles T. Manley, founder of the Kansas City firm, Manley, Inc., which is the nation's biggest manufacturer of popcorn machines," it was said.

Its "greatest triumph in giving popcorn a more respectable status, and thereby multiplying sales," Bartlett adds, "was in getting popcorn machines into film theatres all over the country. Today, most of our film houses sell popcorn in their lobbies, but theatre men were almost universally anti-popcorn before the 1930's."

Change in Status

The change in the status of the popcorn popper in the theatre lobby, the author adds, came about after theatre owners began to realize that the machines were a big profit maker.

Late News Flashes

MEMPHIS, June 22.—M. A. Lightman, Sr., left here this evening for New York where he will confer with Paramount officials on the dissolvement of the Paramount-Malco Theatres partnership, whereby Paramount would come into full ownership of nine of the jointly operated houses in this area, and Malco would take over 43. Conferences will determine also exact disposition of the two jointly-owned Memphis houses. "Paramount wishes to retain its interest in Malco as long as possible," Lightman said today, "and we wish to terminate it as soon as possible." The split-up was made mandatory by the Supreme Court decision in the industry anti-trust suit.

Chicago, June 22.—Depositions of exchange managers and B. & K. officials in both the Ridge and South Bend drive-in anti-trust actions pending here in the district courts will start on July 18, and continue for 26 days. This system was granted today by Fededal Judge John Barnes on a motion by plaintiffs' attorney Seymour Simon. During the period, defendants will take depositions of key witnesses.

Hollywood, June 22.—The membership of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will honor past president Jean Hersholt Sunday night at ceremonies in the Academy Awards Theatre here. A special screening of "Country Doctor" in which Hersholt starred in 1936, will be followed by the presentation of a gift from the governors and officers who served during Hersholt's regime.

Missouri Houses Get New Building Code

ST. LOUIS, June 22. — Governor Forrest Smith has signed the new state theatre building code which will become law 30 days after adjournment of the legislature. The new law revises regulations with regard to seating arrangements, aisles, exits, lighting and general safety provisions and represents generally a compromise between the legislation sought by theatre owners in 1947 and the so-called "unrealistic" provisions spread on the statute books since the "hoss-opry" days of 50 years ago.

The law also repeals the old informer clause which permitted a private individual to sue a theatre for safety infractions and receive half of the penalties.

TORONTO, June 23.—Thirty productions are promised for release in 1949-50 by 20th Century-Fox, A. W. Smith, Jr., sales vice-president, told distribution personnel assembled here today for the company's annual Canadian sales meeting, at the Royal York Hotel.

Elsewhere it was learned that the company has 41 new features and 11 reissues set for 1948-49, the sharp drop to 30 for 1949-50 resulting from the company's elimination of "B" and limited budget pictures. There will be only two outside productions next year and these are described as "top" product. There will be no reissues, it was said.

Thinks 'Finneran Plan' Should Be Included

FRENCH LICK, Ind., June 23.—Stating that industry public relations has been a concern of Allied States for many years, Abram F. Myers, chairman of the board and general counsel, said that naturally any program to improve those relations needed and would have the support of "the largest organization of independent theatre owners in America."

Review

"Scene of the Crime"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

AN engrossing story, told in a polished melodramatic style, sets M-G-M's "Scene of the Crime" notches above the usual run of melodramas. With a cast headed by Van Johnson, Arlene Dahl, Gloria De Haven and Tom Drake, it bids for attractive business.

Johnston has the pivotal role, that of a detective who sets out to solve the murder of a fellow detective. There are but few clues to go on, except that the murderer has a twisted arm. Working with companion detectives Drake and John McIntire, Johnson goes about in a plodding, persistent manner picking up fragments of clues and piecing them together. Along with the murder mystery angle, the story details the romantic complications of Johnson's home life. He is married to pretty Miss Dahl, but it seems every time the two are about to go out for an evening of fun together, the phone calls Johnson to duty. In time the predicament rises to a point where it almost necessitates a decision between job and wife.

Atmospheric touches as well as modern police methods of stalking criminals provide some of the film's best moments. These occasionally stand in contrast with some minor improbabilities of the story. The screenplay, by Charles Schnee has Johnson going out socially with Miss De Haven, a nightclub entertainer, as part of his detective work. It is through Miss De Haven's efforts, at first helpful, but then treacherous, that the real killer is finally unmasked. Along the way there is considerable gunplay, fisticuffs, brutality, and murder. En route to the happy ending, director Roy Rowland has kept these events moving unfalteringly. The late Harry Rapf produced.

houses from the Comerford circuit of 70 theatres. One of the 14 must be disposed of by Paramount subsequently.

The deal with Richards involves 80 theatres, located principally in Louisiana and Mississippi, 47 of them wholly-owned by the two partnership companies and the remaining 33 partially-owned. Paramount, Balaban said, may retain 100 per cent interest in 36 of the 80 houses. The proceeds from the disposition of its holdings in the remaining 44 "will partially offset our purchase price," he added.

Balaban's letter accompanied the regular dividend payment of 50 cents per share of common stock for the second quarter of this year.

He reported that the company is making good progress in negotiating other dissolutions of partnerships as called for in the consent judgment which freed the company from the government's anti-trust action.

Balaban told the stockholders that the company is striving to retain "an earning power for the New Theatre Company which will approximate Paramount's present share of the earnings in the joint interests. We believe, business conditions being equal, that we will have accomplished this purpose in the two transactions described above."

Balaban said it is his belief that the exchange of Paramount common stock for the securities of the two new companies will take place in January, 1950.

To Guarantee Some Profits For ECA Films

Will Be in Addition To Distribution Costs

WASHINGTON, June 26.—ECA officials are working on a formula to guarantee film companies convertibility of some of their profits—as well as their costs—in distributing films in Marshall Plan countries.

Difficulty is being experienced in working out the details, and final agreement on some specific formula is probably still weeks away.

Until now the ECA has guaranteed only convertibility of actual out-of-pocket expenses for distributing films in ECA areas, and no profits have been "thawed out" under the program. But when Congress extended the ECA act this year, it provided that convertibility on some profits should be

DECREE RESTRICTS SCHINE FILM BUYS

Highlights of Schine Decree

FOLLOWING are highlights of the consent decree entered into by Schine Theatres with the Department of Justice and signed by the Federal Court at Buffalo on Friday:

Schine must divest itself of about 40 out of approximately 150 theatres. Those to be disposed of are located in 39 communities in New York, Ohio, Maryland and Kentucky.

The theatre divestiture is to be accomplished within a three-year period at the rate of one-third of the theatres annually.

A limitation is imposed on the number of first-run features which Schine theatres in all but five towns may license during the next three years. Licensing is limited to 60 per cent of the eight major company's product, or to 48 of 80 major company first-run releases in any fiscal year, except where Schine has more than one theatre and first-run competition in a locality. The restriction then is 66 2/3 per cent and 53 first-run features.

Fair clearance is to be maintained and clearance complaints brought by competitors are to be arbitrated expeditiously.

Divestiture of 40 of 150 Theatres Required; Ends 10-Year-Old Suit

BUFFALO, June 26.—The government's 10-year-old anti-trust suit against Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., was ended here Friday via the consent decree route.

Judge John Knight in U. S. District court approved a judgment requiring Schine to get rid of about 40 out of approximately 150 theatres and limiting the number of first-run feature films Schine theatres can get for the next three years. Schine is also required to license all features on a theatre-by-theatre basis, "solely on the merits."

The judgment was widely taken as a substantial victory for the theatre circuit in view of the Supreme Court's May, 1948, decision, strongly upholding the government's charges of a Schine exhibition monopoly, and in view of the extreme decree proposed earlier by the government. That proposal would have left Schine with only a handful of theatres and would have slapped on much more severe trade practice restrictions.

The decree was negotiated for Schine by attorneys Irving Kaufman and Willard McKay. The government was represented in the talks by Assistant Attorney General Herbert Bergson, consent decree chief Sigmund Timberg, and trial lawyer Philip Marcus.

U. S. Says Decree Opens Competition

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Assistant Attorney General Herbert A. Bergson, in charge of the anti-trust division, said Friday that the Schine consent decree will "restore competition in film exhibition in towns where it has not existed for many years."

Bergson said that the way in which the judgment limits the number of feature films the defendants may license "should enable independent theatres to obtain product in quantity and quality sufficient to enable them to compete effectively. Competition will also be fostered by the divestiture of theatres to independent motion picture operators."

MPAA-Allied

Association president; Ned E. Depinet, chairman of the MPAA exhibitor and community relations committees, and Francis Harmon, MPAA vice-president.

The meeting on the projected endeavor to achieve better public relations and intra-industry harmony was the fourth in a series being sponsored by the MPAA. Subsequent meetings are scheduled to be set with the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, Hollywood unions and guilds and the trade press. Thereafter, an all-industry meeting will be held to form a working organization which will draft a program.

A possible source of difficulty was indicated with expression of the Allied representatives of their belief that the so-called Finneran Plan for disciplining stars and other industry personalities who bring unfavorable publicity to the industry should be included in any comprehensive plan of industry public relations. The Finneran Plan was promulgated at Allied's national convention in New Orleans last year and subsequently was urged upon the MPAA for adoption. After a study of the plan Johnston reportedly rejected it on the grounds that he did not have the authority to administer it and that the legality of some phases of it is questionable. The plan provides for dismissal and boycott of stars involved in unsavoury escapades which become public.

guaranteed as well. ECA officials at first said that this was intended to apply only to industrial investments, and not to informational media. Now, apparently, they have changed their minds.

Formulas for guaranteeing profits for book publishers and magazines and newspapers have already been worked out. Films are proving the most difficult nut for ECA officials to crack.

It is understood that when a formula is finally arrived at it will be retroactive. So far ECA has underwritten only two film contracts—one large one with the MPEA for operations in Germany, and another $70,000 one with Bookfilm International Corp., also for operations in Germany.

"Lost Boundaries"

(RD-DR Productions—Film Classics)

THE problem of "passing," in which light-skinned Negroes attempt to pass successfully as whites, is the basis for a fine motion picture endowed with intelligence and honesty. Courage as well is by no means lacking in "Lost Boundaries."

Louis de Rochemont, long producer of The March of Time and subsequently with 20th Century-Fox, where he pointed up documentary technique with "The House on 92nd Street," "Boomerang" and "13 Rue Madeleine," made this one along identical lines. This time, however, he drew from a story on W. L. White's documented account of a Negro family which "passed" as white for over two decades at Keenham, N. H. Reader's Digest ran the story and projected it into nationwide attention.

The principals are Scott Carter, played by Mel Ferrer, and Marcia Carter, his wife, played by Beatrice Pearson. In essence, the account narrates how this young Negro doctor encounters bigotry and prejudice in pursuit of his career and how, after reluctantly deciding to "pass," he seizes opportunity and settles in Keenham where he raises his two children, Richard Hylton and Susan Douglas. As a practicing physician, he becomes a success. But it is not easily won. The New Englanders are slow to accept him although finally he earns his respected position, professionally and socially, in the fabric of the community.

The situation reaches its climax with the advent of World War II when Ferrer's commission as a lieutenant commander in the Navy is rejected on straight color lines and the son's application for midshipman school heads the same way. It is at this juncture that Ferrer decides to meet the obligation he had warded off for years—the obligation of telling his son the truth while separately Miss Pearson takes similar action with the daughter.

Hylton, shocked, leaves home, and gets involved innocently in a murder scrape in Harlem where he had gone to live as a Negro; is cleared through the kindly understanding of a Negro police lieutenant, played by Canada Lee, and returns home. Through the intercession of Keenham's minister, played by Rev. Robert H. Dunn, the town is given a lesson in the brotherhood of man and leans toward acceptance of the situation. On such a note, the film ends.

This kind of material is considerably removed from the routine. There will be sections of the United States, obviously, where it will not prove acceptable. Similarly, audiences which seek entertainment in the normally accepted definition will not find it here. For this is a serious and dramatic motion picture concerning itself with a disputed phase of a many-sided economic and social problem demanding understanding and sympathy from those who are progressive in their thinking. Exhibitors are compelled to bear this in mind.

In terms of dramatic construction and development, there are no uncertainties. "Lost Boundaries" imparts the conviction of the real thing. Its principal performances by a cast of unknown box-office value are quiet, authentic and constantly believable. Its direction by Alfred L. Werker is firm and sympathetic to the subject without turning maudlin. The town in the film actually is Keenham where the incidents took place and many of the townspeople shown actually live there.

Borden Mace and Lothar Wolff served as associate producers. Charles A. Palmer and Eugene Ling wrote the adaptation and Virginia Shaler and Furlaud de Kay did the screenplay. William J. Miller was responsible for the penetrating black-and-white photography and Jack Shaindlin for the effective musical direction of Louis Applebaum's competent score.

Running time, 100 minutes. General audience classification. Release date, August 5.

New Missouri Code Fixes Aisle Widths

ST. LOUIS, June 26.—The new state building code regulating theatres and other places of public assembly, which was signed last week by Governor Forrest Smith—and which is much more liberal than the previous outdated statute—provides that the main aisle need not be more than three feet six inches in width, and in theatres with a seating capacity of not more than 450 it need be no more than two feet eight inches in width; if there are auxiliary or side aisles they need not be more than two feet four inches in width. The old law required a four-foot center aisle, three-foot side aisles and three-foot rear aisles.

No side aisles are now required if the number of seats in a row do not exceed 25 and if there is a horizontal space of 18 inches between chairs with self-raising seats, or if the number of seats of any type in a row do not exceed 18. This permits more seats and fewer and narrower aisles than under the old legislation.

The law also sets particulars in regard to the location and marking of exits. It requires compliance by existing theatres.

The law also repeals the old informer clause which permitted a private individual to sue a theatre for safety infractions and receive half of the penalties.

Fine Copyright Violation

Rocco F. Messina was fined $200 in Federal Court, Brooklyn, by U. S. Judge Leo Rayfiel, on a plea of guilty to charges of infringement of copyright for profit, of the 20th-Fox feature, "Do You Love Me," by renting the picture in 16mm. wtihout the authority of the copyright owner.

'No Violations of Law': Schine Counsel

Buffalo, June 26.—Schine attorney Irving Kaufman said the consent agreement was entered into in order to avoid prolonged litigation over the disposal of theatres now operated by Schine.

"By our agreement," he said, "we are not admitting the allegations in the government's complaint and, in fact, deny that we did in the past or are now violating any laws, particularly with respect to any of the theatres mentioned in the consent decree."

List of Schine Theatres Which Must Be Divested

BUFFALO, June 26.—Following is the list of the theatres and theatre properties which Schine must dispose of over the next three years after Friday's consent judgment:

New York: Auburn, Jefferson; Canandaigua, Lake; Carthage, bank property and former State Theatre property; Corning, State; Cortland, Temple; Geneva, Temple (if not in regular operation during the major part of each year) and Regent; Herkimer, Richmond; Little Falls, Hippodrome; Lockport, Palace or Rialto; Malone, Plaza; Newark, Crescent; Ogdensburg, Pontiac; Oneonta, Palace or Oneonta; Oswego, Capitol (if not in regular operation during the major part of each year) and Strand; Perry, vacant lot; Rochester, Madison or Monroe and Riviera or Liberty; Salamanca, Andrews; Seneca Falls, Seneca; Watertown, Palace.

Ohio: Ashland, Palace; Bellefontaine, Strand; Bucyrus, Southern; Delaware, Star; Kents, Opera House; Ravenna, Ohio (Schine can dispose of both its theatres in either Kent or Ravenna rather than one in each); Piqua, Miami or Piqua, and the Bijou if not reopened by Schine within three months and kept in operation during the major part of each year; Van Wert, Strand; Wooster, Opera House or Wayne or Wooster, at buyer's option; Tiffin, Ritz or Tiffin, unless Schine no longer has any interest in or control over any theatre in Fostoria; Mt. Vernon, Vine, unless either the Vernon or Memorial is permanently disposed of to an exhibitor who is not affiliated with Schine, will use it for a theatre, and does not now operate in Mt. Vernon; Norwalk, Moose.

Kentucky: Corbin, Kentucky; Lexington, Strand or Kentucky and one other, not the Ada Meade; Maysville, Hollywood; Paris, Bourbon.

Maryland: Cambridge, Arcade or State; Easton, Avalon or New Easton (instead of disposing or any theatre in Cambridge, Schine can dispose of both theatres in Easton); Cumberland, Liberty; Salisbury, site of burned down Arcade Theatre if Schine desires to proceed with a new theatre on a new site (this is in keeping with an October 15, 1948 court order).

All these must go to persons for use as theatres with six exceptions where Schine certifies the properties were never used or not used for a long period of time for theatres. These six, which can be sold for any use, are the bank property and former State Theatre property in Carthage, the Crescent in Newark, the vacant lot in Perry, the Seneca in Seneca Falls, the Bijou in Piqua, and the Moose in Norwalk.

Says Decree Gives Newcomers Product

Buffalo, June 26.—The film buying limitation imposed on Schine theatres by the consent decree insures the reserving of films for exhibitors who are to compete with Schine, said Sigmund Timberg, head of the Justice Department consent decree division.

"We have felt that it would be insufficient to have other theatres competing with Schine unless there was provision for them to obtain films with which to get started," he told the court.

Schine Decree

restricting the number of first-run features Schine can get—is a new wrinkle and the heart of the decree from the government's point of view.

This key section is for a three-year period from July 1, 1949, or in the case of a locality where Schine must give up a theatre, for a period of three years from the date possession of the theatre is taken. Five towns are specifically exempted—Amsterdam, Buffalo, Syracuse, and Glens Falls, N. Y., and Salisbury, Md.

In all other towns, two top limits are put on the number of first-run features Schine theatres can license. They cannot license more than 60 per cent (66⅔ per cent in towns where they have two or more theatres and there is first-run competition) of the feature films released by the major distributors for first-run exhibition in any fiscal year, "except as to pictures for which competitors who have had an opportunity to request licenses have not made an offer or have made an insubstantial offer." Nor can Schine theatres take more than 48 feature films (53 in towns where Schine has two or more theatres and there is first-run competition) from among the 80 pictures constituting the aggregate of the 10 pictures relesaed by each of the major distributors for first-run exhibition in any fiscal year, "which are allocated by the respective distributor to its highest selling bracket or brackets."

Again there is the exception "as to pictures for which competitors who have had an opportunity to request licenses have not made an offer or have made an insubstantial offer."

Both restrictions apply as well to second-run features in Rochester. In towns where Schine has competitors who desire first-run features and in which there is a theatre to be divested, the three-year product limitation must take effect before July 1, 1952—"just in case something goes wrong and they still haven't gotten rid of the theatre by then," one Justice official said.

Another key trade practice section provides for prompt review or arbitration of all complaints by Schine competitors on unreasonable clearance. Schine promises not to demand or receive any clearance over theatres not in substantial competition or any unreasonable clearance over competing theatres. "Upon request or complaint made by an exhibitor to the Schine defendants," the decree provides, "or on notice received by the Schine defendants of a request or complaint made to a distributor that the clearance held by a Schine theare over his theatre is unreasonable, the defendants agree to procure from each of the major distributors from whom they license film a review of the reasonableness of such clearance."

The exhibitor must be given notice of the review and a chance to present his views orally or in writing. If the exhibitor wants the matter to be arbitrated, Schine agrees to submit the matter to arbitration and the arbitrator's decision will be binding.

Thirty-nine cities in New York, Ohio, Kentucky and Maryland are covered by theatres disposition sections in the decree. Schine must dispose of 36 theatres in 31 communities. It may have to dispose—depending on certain other conditions—of another five theatres in five other towns. It must dispose of theatre sites in three towns. With six exceptions, the properties must go to persons who will use them for motion picture theatres. Disposition must be completed within three years from last Friday, at the rate of one-third of the total each year. No property can go to any Schine affiliate, and all disposals are subject to Justice Department approval.

Disposal of these theatres, the decree states, is "for the purpose of creating substantial motion picture theatre operating competition in localities where the government claims that no competition or no substantial or adequate competition now exists or did exist during the years covered by the evidence and findings of fact in this cause."

If Schine cannot sell any property on "reasonable terms," it may—with court approval—lease or sublease it to a non-defendant. However, no lease or sublease can contain any rental provision giving Schine a share of the theatres profits and Schine must continue to try to sell the theatre on "reasonable terms."

"Approval of the court to lease such theatres shall not be obtained without a prior showing of due diligence on the part of the defendants to sell theatres," the decree states.

No new theatres can be acquired by Schine without court approval and a showing that "such acquisition will not unreasonably restrain competition." The decree provides that nothing in the judgment shall be "deemed to prevent" Schine fom acquiring interests in theatres—other than those it must give up—as a replacement for theatres destroyed or converted to non-theatrical use, in renewing leases or acquiring an additional interest in any theatre under lease, or as replacement for any theatre lost through inability to renew a lease on reasonable terms."

Other trade practice restrictions on Schine, in addition to the product limitation and clearance review provisions, enjoin these things: combining open and closed towns for buying films; attempts to control prices charged other exhibitors by agreements with distributors or any other methods; asking or knowingly receiving discriminatory terms or conditions not available to competitors in licensing films; franchise agreements, formula deals and master agreements; and conditioning the licensing of films in any one competitive situation on the licensing of films in any other situation.

Also making or continuing to perform pooling agreements; enforcing any existing agreements not to compete or to restrict the use of any real estate to non-theatrical purposes; using threats or deception to induce a competitor to sell or to keep a potential competitor from buying a theatre; buying or booking films for any theatre other than those in which the Schine defendants own a financial interest; cutting admission prices to eliminate or prevent competition of independent exhibitors; or "continuing any contract, conspiracy or combination with each other or with any person which has the purpose or effect of maintaining the exhibition or theatre monopolies of the defendants or preventing any other theatre or exhibitor from competing with the defendants, and from entering into any similar contract, conspiracy or combination."

The decree provides that the existing pooling arrangements at Fostoria and Medina, Ohio, and Syracuse, N. Y., shall be dissolved. In the Ohio towns, the dissolution may be either by dissolution of the corporations through which the interests are pooled or by sale of Schine's stock in these corporations. If the corporations are not dissolved by August 15, 1949, Schine's stock is to be sold to the other parties in the pool or to a third party.

The decree makes the usual provisions for Justice Department access to Schine records and employes.

The government's suit was filed originally in August, 1939. The eight major distributors also were named but they were dropped in November, 1940, after the first consent decree in the Paramount case. All the charges were based on acts prior to May 19, 1942. The Supreme Court upheld the government's charges last year and sent the case back to Buffalo for determining the exact relief. Some further proceedings were held, and then consent decree negotiations commenced.

In addition to Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., the governmnet's suit and Friday's consent decree affected these other companies and Schine officials—Schine Circuit, Inc., Schine Theatrical Co., Inc., Schine Enterprises Corp., Schine Lexington Corp., Chesapeake Theatres Corp., J. Myer Schine, Louis W. Schine and John A. May.

Nation-Wide Exhibitor Group to Finance Films

Fabian Is President of New Company Which Is Capitalized at $10,000,000; Aim to Bolster Product Supply; No Direct Theatre Tie-ins

Formation of National Exhibitors Film Co. with a capitalization of $10,000,000 for the purpose of financing motion picture production, and with a long list of prominent circuit operators throughout the country already pledged to participate, was announced here yesterday following a two-day organization meeting at the Waldorf Astoria.

Film Financing Plan Highlights

FOLLOWING are highlights of the plan sponsored by 23 prominent theatre circuits in all parts of the country to form National Exhibitors Film Co., capitalized at $10,000,000, to finance new production:

Will be wholly owned by theatremen whose investments will be limited to $100,000 each. There will be no public stock offering.

Loans to be made to recognized producers for top quality films; the new company to have the right to approve stories, casts and budgets.

Distribution will be through established companies already releasing pictures of independent or "outside" producers.

Si Fabian will be president, assisted by an executive committee of prominent theatre operators. Robert Wright, former government prosecutor of the anti-trust suit against the industry, is adviser on legal aspects.

Aim is to increase the supply of quality product of all theatres and to give exhibitors a voice in its making. There will be no franchises or preferred terms to sponsors for the resultant pictures.

Incorporating papers are now in the hands of attorneys and it might be a matter of only a month before the actual organization is an accomplished fact.

S. H. Fabian, president of Fabian Theatres, New York, already has been appointed president of the company and will undertake the organizational tasks with the aid of an executive committee. Members of the committee are:

Sam Pinanski, president of American Theatres, Boston, who will serve

Deal as outlined would place Small in complete charge of all Eagle-Lion operations, including distribution and production, for an extended period, with Small holding an option to acquire ownership under specified terms and stipulated conditions.

Principals in the negotiations declined to reveal the duration of the preliminary operational period or

The public relations plan is part of a program of action proposed for the 1949-50 season by Sam B. NLRB Spikes AFL 'Raid' on SPG Unit Screen Publicists Guild (CIO) reports that an attempt by the Sign, Pictorial and Display Union, Local No. 230, AFL, to raid SPG's jurisdiction, was defeated when the National Labor Relations Board unanimously rejected a petition of the AFL union for an election in the advertising-publicity department of RKO Radio.

Local 230 first petitioned among the artists at RKO, and when the NLRB rejected this unit, then filed for artists and publicists. However, according to SPG, the decision of the board in this matter ends all possibility of a jurisdictional dispute in the advertising-publicity departments of the motion picture industry.

SPG at the same time announced it had filed a petition with the NLRB for a union shop election on an industry-wide basis, covering employes of Columbia, RKO, Paramount, Warners, Loew's, M-G-M, United Artists, Republic, 20th Century-Fox and Universal. It is expected that an election will be held within two weeks, the Guild said.

Legion of Decency Issues Report Book

The National Legion of Decency has reviewed and classified 6,488 features of domestic and foreign origin from the beginning of its operations in February, 1936, through November, 1948. Titles of the pictures, their distributors, the Legion's rating for each, and the year in which each was reviewed have been compiled in a book just issued by it.

The Legion describes the book as "A moral estimate of entertainment feature motion pictures prepared under the direction of the National Office of the Legion of Decency with the cooperaiton of the Motion Picture Department of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae."

The booklet discloses that 3,320 features, or 51.17 per cent of the total, received the Legion's Class A-I rating; 2,413 or 37.19 per cent were rated Class A-II, morally unobjectionable for adults; 689, or 10.62 per cent, received the Class B rating, morally unobjectionable in part for all, and 66, or 1.02 per cent, were condemned. Of the condemned films, 35, or 53.03 per cent, were of foreign origin, and 31, or 46.97 per cent were domestic.

The book contains a foreword by Bishop William Scully of Albany, chairman of the Bishop's Committee on Motion Pictures, and a preface by Rev. Patrick J. Masterson, executive secretary of the Legion; Rev. Thomas F. Little, assistant executive secretary, and Mrs. James F. Looram, chairman of the Motion Picture Department of the IFCA.

Hartford Arbitration Hearing on July 11

HARTFORD, June 27.—Oliver Bishop, executive secretary of the AAA's Connecticut board, has set the hearing of Crown Management Corp. arbitration complaint against B-G-M, Warner, RKO and 20th-Fox for July 11. Paramount, originally named in the complaint, has been dropped as a defendant. It is charged that the Crown Theatre, Hartford, is suffering hardship because pictures become available to it five and six months after first-run, and, at times, when pictures are not bought, as long as eight months.

Amalgamated Booking and Buying Service asks a reduction to 30 days after first-runs in Hartford in behalf of the theatre.

Late News Flashes

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 27.—The final testimony was put into the record today in the Griffith anti-trust case, and the defense began presenting depositions that are expected to close the hearing before U. S. District Judge Edgar S. Vaught.

Last witness for the defense was Tom Davidson, manager of Griffith Consolidated Houses at Borger, Tex. Government then recalled co-operators of the independent drive-in at Borger, John Fagin and Charles Weisenberg. Depositions were those of A. V. Philbin, M-G-M manager at Dallas, and Howard Nicholson, Dallas. Four others will be offered, and hearing may wind up tomorrow.

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.—Brookside Theatres Corporation, a Kansas City company, has filed a Federal Court action here demanding $2,700,000 damages from the eight major distributors on grounds that defendants, beginning in 1932, have engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to restrain and monopolize interstate trade and commerce in films throughout the U. S. Complaint says the Brookside Theatre since 1937 has lost $750,000 in profits and $150,000 in fair market value as result of the monopolistic practices charged.

MPAA-Allied Meet

the weekend, accompanied by Eric Johnston, MPAA president, and Francis Harmon, vice-president.

Back in Washington from the meeting, Abram F. Myers, Allied chairman and general counsel, had no comment on the session but said he thinks another meeting will be held in August at a still undesignated place.

"There was nothing tangible as we have no commission from our board at this time," Myers said of Saturday's meeting.

Ainsworth on Hand

Besides Myers, Allied was represented by William Ainsworth, Allied president; Trueman Rembusch, treasurer; Charles Niles, secretary, and Martin Smith, past president. The meeting was held in Indianapolis because the Allied officials were in Indiana last week to attend the convention of Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana at French Lick.

"There was no program and no agenda," Depinet said. "I asked my friends in Allied how they think we can best proceed. We'll take the matter under consideration and hope to have another meeting before the end of the summer."

Johnston had nothing to add.

Myers announced in advance of the meeting that Allied would consider the Finneran Plan, which provides fines, suspensions and other punishments for actors and others who transgress the moral code, as "a fair basis for conversation" instead "of spreading formaldehyde around." He also promised to throw into the hopper findings of a survey on what the public thinks about pictures, made recently by Rembusch.

Joseph P. Finneran, Columbus, Ind., exhibitor, authored the disciplinary plan for stars. It was approved by the national Allied convention last year but reportedly was viewed by MPAA as impractical or of doubtful legality.

Warner, Others Ask New Telefilm Trial

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Harry M. Warner, Nathan Levinson, Thorobred Photo Service and six other individuals today told the U. S. Supreme Court that the California Supreme Court had been right in granting them a new trial in connection with a damage suit against them by Telefilm, Inc.

Telefilm won a $300,000 verdict in its unfair compensation suit against Warner and the others. The judge who heard the trial died, but his successor granted a new trial. Telefilm has appealed on up to the U. S. Supreme Court. The Warner group in a brief filed today pointed out that the new trial was ordered in accord with established legal principles and that the issue must still be tried on its merits.

Award at Waterbury Is 60-Day Clearance

Maximum clearance to which the Alhambra Theatre, Waterbury, Conn., shall be subjected by Paramount, Loew's and Warners shall not be greater than 60 days after territorial release, thus giving that theatre an absolute availability of 60 days after territorial release, according to an American Arbitration Association arbitrator's award, reported here yesterday by the AAA.

The Alhambra had complained that due to the peculiarities of the operation of the intervenor Carroll Theatre, located nearby, pictures had become available "extremely late to the Alhambra and cause the Alhambra to suffer a hardship in booking." Complainant requested a 50-day ceiling after first-runs in Waterbury to alleviate the claimed hardship.

U. K. Worries

Treasury officials are already prepared to list the commodities which will be subjected to reduced importation from America in the event that devaluation of sterling cannot be avoided, but the listing is a precautionary measure only. Devaluation still remains unlikely in view of Sir Stafford Cripps' continued resistance to all pressure in that regard.

The Treasury undoubtedly is satisfied that the country's film dollar position is effectively safeguarded currently by the remittance agreement with the American industry. However, the agreement provides for remittances in dollars and it would be unaffected by devaluation of sterling.

E-L's 'Red Shoes' at Summer Playhouses

With the summer barely under way, "The Red Shoes," J. Arthur Rank's Academy Award winner, has already been booked into 37 summer playhouses, with more such engagements coming, it was announced by William J. Heineman, sales vice-president of Eagle-Lion, which is releasing the film. Standard price range of $1.20 to $1.80 for reserved seat matinees and $1.20 to $2.40 for evening performances will be maintained in all summer theatre showings, Heineman revealed.

Ascap Pact With US Possibly This Week

Settlement between the Department of Justice and Ascap on new terms of a consent decree which would allow the Society to collect music royalties from film producers might be reached at a meeting of representatives of both sides this week, probably in New York. A meeting which had been scheduled for the past weekend was postponed when it was learned that one of the key figures could not attend.

New Move Seen for 2 Contempt Writers

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Some hope for John Howard Lawson and Dalton Trumbo, whose contempt of Congress conviction was recently upheld in the Court of Appeals here, was seen in the Supreme Court's decision today to hear an appeal by Communist leader Eugene Dennis. Dennis has also been convicted for being in contempt of the House Un-American Activities Committee and the Court said it would consider Dennis' contention that government employes should not have been allowed on the jury that convicted him. Lawson and Trumbo have raised the same point.

The High Court left little doubt that otherwise Dennis' contempt conviction was okay.

The May, 1949, collections were $30,440,911, compared with $28,309,390 in May, 1948, and $26,301,280 in April, 1949.

Challenge Companies On Discrimination

Protesting the reputed refusal of motion picture companies to include in current contract negotiations a clause pledging no discrimination against race, color or creed in hiring, the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local No. 109, has requested a conference between the union, Loew's, RKO, Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, Columbia and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People the Urban League, Young Women's Christian Association, Harlem Trade Union Council, American Jewish Congress and the Committee to Support of the Ives-Quinn Law, for the purpose of taking immediate steps to achieve equal hiring rights for all.

The letter, addressed to company presidents, pointed out that most film home offices have fewer than one-half of one per cent Negro office employes and some have no Negro white collar workers.

Jury Disagrees Over Sunday Violations

HAGERSTOWN, Md., June 27.—Trial of seven Warner theatre employes here on charges of violating the blue laws by showing films on Sunday, ended in a hung jury. As a result, George N. At the same time, State Attorney Ingram declares there will not be any further trials during the current term of Circuit Court; the next term will open in November.

Arthur, Fanchon and Marco and St. Louis Amusement, St. Louis; Fred Schwartz, Century Theatres, New York; Sherrill Corwin, Metropolitan Theatres, Los Angeles, and Fabian.

National Exhibitors Film will be wholly-owned and operated by theatre men with the proposed by-laws limiting stock acquisitions to $100,000 per investor and with the corporate structure so constituted that control will be widespread. No public offering of stock is contemplated.

Fabian and Pinanski outlined the aims and scope of operation at a press meeting at Fabian's office here.

The new corporation is designed to stimulate independent production and give exhibitors a voice in production activity. Distribution, according to the present plan, would be through the regular trade channels—United Artists, Eagle Lion, RKO, Film Classics, or whatever company releases outside production for the independent producer.

The company will provide the financing—and "has $10,000,000 immediately available," according to Fabian—for the producer and will insist on right to approve story, cast and budget.

A press statement declared that the company "will not subscribe to hidebound approaches on production financing. It proposes maintaining sufficient fluidity to make deals with existing producers, who now proceed under existing distribution contracts, but it also will keep the door open to the formation of new production units."

To that Pinanski added: "We want to help anybody in the business to make good pictures.

Added Fabian: "Only 'A' pictures will be considered; no 'B's,' no 'C's."

Each investment is intended to be sound business; the new organization will be neither altruistic nor philanthropic, said Pinanski.

While details have yet to be worked out, a rotating committee of exhibitor shareholders probably will represent Exhibitors Film in dealings with the producers.

Robert Wright, former justice department attorney in charge of prosecution of the Paramount anti-trust suit, is serving as consultant on the legal aspects of the organization.

There will be no fancy offices or fancy salaries, Pinanski commented when asked about personnel and headquarters, plans for which have not been mapped as yet.

For the exhibitor shareholders, Exhibitors Film means only participation in an investment and an endeavor to increase the supply of product for all in exhibition on an equal basis. All films in which the company will have an investor's participation will be sold on the open market, will not be tied to any theatre. "There is no thought that the investors will get any bargain; they will get the films at the going rate," Fabian explained. The immediate advantage is that the investor will have his share in the bolstered product line-ups from the independents just as he has a share in the present production output.

"No Guarantees"

There are no guarantees of playing time but, as Fabian put it, "Naturally I'll encourage the company since I have my money in it."

While the emphasis will be on independent production, Exhibitors Film could develop to the point of "helping majors," Fabian said.

Fabian, Pinanski and Ted Gamble have been the key figures in laying the groundwork for the new organization, Fabian's happy experiences with the long defunct First National presumably being one of the influencing factors.

Fabian's invitations were sent out about three weeks ago and all on the list agreed to forego an easy weekend at home to join in the Saturday and Sunday conference in New York's blistering heat.

There is no limit to be placed on the number of investors and the indication is that the present total of participants will increase beyond the original group.

Attending the organizing meetings and pledged to the objectives and financial support of National Exhibitors Film Co. were these exhibitors: Robert J. O'Donnell, Edward H. Rowley, John H. Rowley, Harold Robb, Jr., Dallas, Texas: Willard McKay, George Lynch, Schine Circuit, Gloversville, N. Y.; Gamble, Robert W. Coyne, Lou Gamble, Gamble Enterprises; Schwartz, Century Circuit; Silverman, Essaness; Pinanski, Edward Canter, American Theatres Corp.

Also: Arthur Lockwood, Lockwood and Gordon Enterprises, Boston; Pat McGee, Cooper Foundation, Denver; Harry C. Arthur, Jr., Milton B. Arthur, James H. Arthur, Edward B. Arthur, Harry C. Arthur, 3rd, Fanchon & Marco, St. Louis Amusement; Fabian, Samuel Rosen, Edward L. Fabian, Philip F. Harling, Fabian Theatres; James Sharkey, Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, Inc.

Lightman, Malco; Samuel Rinzler, Emanuel Frisch, Harold Rinzler, Randforce Amusement Co., Brooklyn; Walker, Comerford; Max A. Cohen, Cinema Circuit, New York; Ed D. Martin, Martin Thetares of Florida, Inc., Columbus, Ga.; Corwin, Metropolitan; George Skouras, William White, Skouras Theatres Corp., New York; Kermit C. Stengel, Crescent Amusement Co., Nashville, Tenn.; Deniel J. Lewis, Wisper-Wetsman Theatres, Detroit; E. C. Grainger and Ray Smith, Jamestown Amusement Co., Ohio; Walter Reade, Jr., Walter Reade Theatres, New Jersey.

New Company May Be Boon to U. A.

Possibility that the new National Exhibitors Film Co. being formed to finance new production could be the answer to at least some of United Artists' current operating difficulties was a source of conjecture in trade circles here yesterday.

Gradwell L. Sears, U.A. president, returned to New York from the Coast at the weekend and presumably has been or will be in touch with sponsors of the new company. It plans to distribute through existing companies which normally handle independent and "outside" producers' pictures. U.A. is foremost in that category. At the same time, its principal difficulty arises from insufficient product and current obstacles to providing adequate financing for independent producers.

Observers point out a substantial alliance between the two would be logical.

Si Fabian, president-elect of the new company, and Ted R. Gamble, one of its sponsors, on two occasions sought to acquire UA control. Their plan included provision of financing for established producers who would release through the company.

Purpose of Sears' trip to the Coast last week was to discuss urgency of new product sources or provision of financing for producers with UA officials.

munity and the industry. They will be asked to seek the cooperation of local newspapers, radio stations, civic clubs, schools and Parent-Teacher groups. A speakers' bureau will be set up and will schedule appearances of exhibitors before civic groups to tell the industry's story.

The program will lead up to a "Motion Picture Appreciation Week," to be staged on a staggered basis from mid-September through early October. Distributor help will be sought in supplying speakers for the larger key cities in the state. The industry short subjects, special trailers, newspaper stories, ad mats and other accessories will be used. The committee in charge of the public relations program includes D. P. Callahan, W. B. Sockwell, W. C. Sumpter, Jack Bomar, Herod Jimerson, L. G. Renfro, Jr., O. G. Abernathy and Kirby.

In addition, a charity program will be inaugurated with a series of special shows throughout the state, all receipts from which will be donated to ITO's charity fund. Half the proceeds from each show will be retained by the local exhibitor and the balance will be sent to the state fund which will be administered and disbursed by a committee of Arkansas' leading citizens and exhibitors.

The committee in charge of the charity program will include Henry Haven, Sidney Wharton, E. W. Savage, Callahan, and others.

Coast Jurisdictional Tension Is Growing

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.—Tension between the Screen Publicists Guild and the IATSE for jurisdiction over studio publicity workers has tightened as the contenders prepared for an NLRB hearing Thursday on a petition for an election. Newly-elected SPG president Dan Thomas in a meeting here last night urged those among the membership who had signed an IATSE-sponsored petition to withdraw their names.

An IATSE-minded contingent over the weekend was promised an IATSE charter, plus membership in the Hollywood AFL Film Council and Motion Picture Industry Council, but was told that the long-encumbent SPG business agent Milton Gottlieb is not acceptable to the IATSE. Point at issue before the NLRB is whether publicists employed by independents shall be eligible to vote in the election, as contended by the SPG, or shall eligibility be limited to those employed by majors, as contended by the "IA."

way Wednesday.

At the sessions the three will work out plans for a consistent supply of at least three releases a month and, if possible, more.

In addition to discussions on forthcoming releases, Rodgers will spend considerable time at the studio looking at new product, among which will be "Border Incident," "That Midnight Kiss," "The Forsyte Saga," "Malaya," "Conspirator," "Battleground," which will most likely be ready for release on Armistice Day; "Intruder in the Dust," "The Red Danube" and "On the Town."

Rodgers plans to stay here three to four weeks, before returning East, during which time he will also meet with George A. Hickey, Western sales manager, and Tom Aspell, Los Angeles manager, on progress of the company's "Silver Anniversary."

Para. Product Set for 1949: Schwalberg

Expects 3,500 Accounts For New Selling Plan

Paramount has set release dates for the remainder of the 1949 product line-up with 11 films scheduled, including a re-release of "Holiday Inn" for December 2, A. W. Schwalberg, distribution vice-president, disclosed here yesterday. Additionally, while no general release date for "The Heiress" has been specified, the film will play some engagements before the end of the year, and subsequently will go out as a "special."

Separation of theatres from Paramount's production-distribution notwithstanding, the quality of new films and how they best can be handled will determine the future releasing schedule, Schwalberg said, in answer to a query on whether the divorcement will mean more releases.

He said he now believes Para-

McConville, president of Columbia Pictures International, and Raymond Stross, managing director of Stross Theatres in England.

Seidelman said he anticipated no difficulty in getting quarters and personnel. Although the site has not yet been definitely chosen, he said the company expects to move into the new quarters by October 1.

N. Y. C. Censorship Measure Is Shelved

The Cunningham censorship bill, designed to invest New York City's license commissioner with broader powers over film and theatrical exhibitions, performers and advertising, has been shelved again by the City Council.

Although the fight against the bill this time was spearheaded by legitimate stage interests, the film industry here lent support. The industry succeeded in defeating the measure when it was first introduced a year ago.

Hays Arbitration Hearing Nears End

Arbitration hearings on the division of remittable distribution earnings in France being conducted by Will H. Hays are nearing an end after having been in progress for the past nine months. Testimony of foreign managers, accountants and other specialists is expected to be completed by the end of this week or early next week. Briefs will be submitted thereafter and Hay's decision may be made some time next fall.

Thousands of pages of testimony and exhibits have been entered in the hearings, which have been conducted in formal court fashion with counsel present at all sessions.

In dispute is the division among eight major companies of $1,600,000 of French distribution earnings released under the Blum-Byrnes agreement, the allocation of which is disputed by three so-called "underage" companies which claim they are entitled to more than they received and that the five so-called "overage" companies received more than their share.

Upward Trend Seen In N. Y.; $142,000 For 'Silver Lining'

Indications are that the lowpoint of the slump at New York's first-runs has been reached and the climb to more healthy levels is underway. The majority of situations still are off but a few new shows are doing well and with more big product coming in prospects appear brighter. The intense heat has been hurting business seriously all this month.

The Music Hall is doing its biggest business since Easter with "Look for the Silver Lining" and the stage presentation which features an electrical fireworks display. The show did $88,000 on Thursday through Sunday and is expected to complete a first week with $142,000, which is a very good income.

Ainsworth Asks for Full House-cleaning

MEMPHIS, June 28.—A general cleaning up and improvement of motion pictures, starting with the stars who appear in them and the producers who produce them, extending all the way down the line to the exhibitor, was recommended today by William L. Ainsworth, of Fond du Lac, Wis., president of Allied States. Ainsworth spoke at the summer meeting of the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of the Mid-South at the Hotel Chisca.

"The public has a real stake in this, too," said Ainsworth, "and through the patronage of the better stars and pictures, can lift the level of our entertainment."

One of Ainsworth's suggestions was

MacMillen, Jr., vice-president in charge of operations, announced here yesterday, also asserting that during the same period the company has persistently averaged its largest net distribution profit since its inception three years ago.

As a result of the showing, MacMillen declared, the temporary salary cuts recently taken voluntarily by top distribution executives William J. Heineman, sales vice-president; L. Jack Schlaifer, general sales manager, and Milton E. Cohen, Eastern sales manager, have been eliminated and all three executives have been restored to their full salary.

No Answers Yet on Theatre Television

Committees of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, the Theatre Owners of America and the Motion Picture Association of America went further in their study of television for theatres at a meeting here yesterday but are said to have yet to reach the point where any especially significant conclusions could be drawn.

The SMPE group, which had been asked to check on costs of video equipment installations, reportedly told the participants at yesterday's session that any substantial reduction of costs could come only as the result of mass production and that the manufacturers probably would want some assurances that the equipment would be absorbed.

No further action was taken on the MPAA idea of employing a surveying organization to determine the competitive effects of video, it was said.

A good part of yesterday's meeting was devoted to discussion of the recent large-screen video pick-ups of the Walcott-Charles bout at the Paramount here and the Fox in Brooklyn. The meeting was held in the office of Donald Hyndman, chairman of the SMPE television committee. Oscar Doob and Taylor Mills sat in for the MPAA, and TOA was represented by Robert W. Coyne, Mitchell Wolfson and Stanley Prenosil.

Late News Flashes

Hollywood, June 28.—Theatre attendance for May was down 12 per cent from the same month a year ago, Audience Research, Inc., informed its clients in a weekly service release dated yesterday. ARI figures show weekly attendance as 59,000,000 this May, comparing with 67,000,000 a year ago. On the contrary, ARI finds the average admission this year is up to 47½c from last year's 47.1c.

Memphis, June 28.—It is understood in film circles here that one of the prime aims of the new $10,000,000 National Exhibitors Film Co., announced Monday in New York, will be to prevent film rental cost from skyrocketing after divorcement of theatres has been completed in conformance with the decision in the industry anti-trust suit.

of the plan, authored by Sears, have not been disclosed.

A United Artists' spokesman said yesterday that the conferences probably will reach a decisive stage within the next few weeks. He added that developments will be reported by Sears to company owners Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin from time to time, with Sears going to the Coast for that purpose.

It has been reported that a plan for the sale of 12,000 shares of UA treasury stock for $4,000,000 was advanced at the last meeting of the company's board of directors here. However, a member of the board has denied that report.

After the Coast meetings, plans will be made for an all-industry meeting in August of representatives of all of the organizations with which the preliminary plans have been discussed. No date for the national meeting has been set yet but present intentions are to schedule it during August in Colorado Springs, Colo.

A meeting with trade press representatives may be held prior to the national meeting, otherwise trade press representatives will be invited to the latter gathering. A formal organization is expected to be developed at the August meeting and a definite program proposed, following discussion.

well enough with a first week's take being estimated at $30,000. "The Red Menace" got off to a slow start at the Mayfair at the weekend but some improvement in business came Monday and yesterday and consequently the film will hold for a second week; the first week's gross is estimated at $13,000. "You Were Never Lovelier" and "Cover Girl," Rita Hayworth reissues, will gross a very healthy $22,000 in a week at the Criterion.

"Take One False Step" will probably provide the Rivoli with $14,000 in a first week, which is fair. The new vaudeville show at the Palace, along with "The Green Promise" on stage, is likely to do a nice $23,000 in its one-week run.

"Sorrowful Jones" is holding up splendidly at the Paramount where, with Louis Prima on stage, a third week's gross will reach $65,000. "It Happens Every Spring," with the Andrews Sisters among others on stage at the Roxy, should do about $63,000, which is satisfactory, in a third and final week; it will be followed by "House of Strangers" on Friday.

"Any Number Can Play" will open at the Capitol tomorrow, replacing "Neptune's Daughter" which, with Alvino Rey's orchestra and Jerry Lester on stage, apparently will wind up its third and final week with a mild $41,000. "Home of the Brave" continues at a fairly good pace at the Victoria, where $11,500 is seen for a seventh week. "Hamlet" should do about $7,600 in a relatively mild 39th week at the Park Avenue.

Film Classics' "Lost Boundaries" will make its debut at the Astor tomorrow, succeeding "We Were Strangers," which is likely to conclude its ninth and final week with only $5,000. "Movie Crazy" will open at the Globe on Saturday, the re-issue to replace "Champion," which will gross about $6,500 for a 12th and final week of a highly successful run. Today's newcomer is "The Great Sinner" at the State, replacing "Barkleys of Broadway," which was figured to gross $11,500 in its eighth and final week, marking the end of an important run.

mount's "Exhibitor Security Service Contract" will be made available to 3,500-4,000 accounts under the plan to sell all or any part of the balance of the year's product to outlying accounts at one time, subject to legal considerations.

Schwalberg repeated that the new selling program will give the small-town exhibitor an opportunity to obtain a backlog of product and at the same time eliminate economic problems involved in sending a representative of the company to a distant area for the purpose of selling perhaps only two films at minimum rental. He said the majority of deals will be on a flat rental basis and in no case is the policy to be confused with block booking, as it is known in the trade, where only blocks of five films were sold.

Schwalberg said he would object to any exhibitor's request to disclose the terms offered by a competitor in competitive bidding after a deal has been closed. Such opening of the books would give one theatreman an "index to the inside" of his competitor's business, he reasoned, and additionally would serve as a tip-off on what the next bid likely would be.

Speaking of business conditions, Schwalberg said he has noted a better trend at the box-office within the last 10 days since the week following Easter Sunday, this based on Paramount receipts.

Max E. Youngstein, advertising-publicity director, joined in the discussion of "The Heiress," a William Wyler production which, with advertising expenditures figured in, will cost $4,000,000. The film will play a few long runs prior to general release, according to present plans, which call for a selling policy similar to that for "The Best Years of Our Lives," but wtihout advanced admissions.

Youngstein also disclosed a plan to service Paramount accounts with selling aids subsequent to the release of press books, probably in the form of brochures which will depict how earlier runs and situations in other cities are promoting product.

Ainsworth said there would be a meeting in Colorado Springs in August with representatives of Allied, producers, distributors, actors and unions to discuss an overall public relations program for the entire motion picture industry.

Col. H. A. Cole, Texas, pleaded for organization of all theatre owners in Allied as insurance against legislation, taxation, etc., "just like you carry fire insurance."

Decision Hits Partnership Dissolutions

Court Says Warner, K-B Pact 'Outside the Pale'

WASHINGTON, June 29.—In a decision that may have far-reaching effects on many partnerships being broken up as a result of the Paramount case, District Court Judge Matthew McGuire ruled today that a contract between the K-B Amusement Co. and Stanley Corp. of America for joint ownership and operation of the MacArthur Theatre was part and parcel of an attempt to restrain trade and could not be enforced in the courts.

In this particular case, the decision represented at least a partial victory for the Warner subsidiary. In other cases, however, the precedent might work for or against the big five companies. The decision will be appealed by K-B.

Specifically, McGuire dismissed a motion by K-B to force Stanley out of the MacArthur enterprise on selling

"The Great Sinner"

[Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer]—Packs Punch for All

Hollywood, June 29

GAMBLING, a rich theme given inconclusive treatment in recent pictures, is subjected to thorough-going, uncompromising handling in this powerful story enacted by a fine cast composed of name players whose performances more than measure up to their reputations. With Gregory Peck, Ava Gardner, Melvyn Douglas, Walter Huston, Ethel Barrymore, Frank Morgan and Agnes Moorehead for marquee strength, the film promises to open big, and to build as word gets around that the picture is a four-square production packing punch for all types of entertainment seekers. It is big, costly, intelligently conceived and lavishly executed, an attraction of commanding stature.

"Roseanna McCoy," Samuel Goldwyn's new film, will have its world premiere in Louisville and Charleston on Wednesday, August 17. Engagements in Cincinnati, Columbus, Dayton, Indianapolis, Nashville, Knoxville and other cities in the area will follow within the next few days.

A $50,000 newspaper and radio campaign in the premiere area sponsored by RKO Radio and Goldwyn Productions will support the regional opening. Extending the scale of the premiere nationally will entail a newspaper expenditure of about $300,000, according to James Mulvey, president of Goldwyn Productions.

Vaught served as referee in a number of arguments over admission of portions of testimony. The hearing, which commenced last Autumn after the Supreme Court had reversed Vaught's acquittal of the Griffith circuits, may be the last courtroom episode of the lawsuit filed in 1939. Government attorneys submitted a petition in February seeking to make Theatre Enterprises, Inc., of Dallas, a defendant on grounds that the firm has replaced Griffith, Consolidated, Wes-Tex, and other original defendant concerns.

about $3,000,000. Though numerous others are interested and still more have indicated a desire to join up at a later date when their present affiliations with major companies have been legally severed, sponsors estimate that the sums already pledged are sufficient to start $10,000,000 worth of production. Major part of the indicated difference would be made up by either first or second money provided by banks or other financing organizations and by deferments of studio charges available to qualified producers.

While the new company will exercise approval of stories, casts and budgets, it does not propose to control distribution arrangements or terms. The producers to be financed by NEFC will come to it with their own distribution assured exactly as they would to a bank or other financing organization. The pictures will be sold and distributed under such arrangements exactly as other pictures are handled by national distributors.

NEFC likewise does not propose to exercise its influence to swing distribution deals to any one or several companies to the exclusion of others. Distribution will go to those offering producers the most favorable terms. While this presumably would increase the chances of much of the product being handled by Eagle-Lion, Monogram, Film Classics, United Artists and others, special considerations could result in sending some of the pictures through other channels.

Plans are not far enough advanced yet for the appointment of a managerial staff. Si Fabian, already elected president of the not yet existing company, and Sam Pinanski, chairman of the executive committee, are serving for the time being without compensation. Need was felt to indicate management calibre and responsibility at the outset, thus the charter members' meeting last weekend saw fit to proceed with the election. Executive additions will be made as the company takes shape.

Decision Hits

terms provided in a 1945 contract setting up the partnership. At that time, K-B had planned a new theatre, Stanley planned a competing one near the new K-B site, and the two companies finally agreed on a jointly-owned and operated new theatre. Under terms of a consent decree entered in New York last December, Warner agreed to get out of the MacArthur, but said it should do so in whatever manner and fashion it deemed best. K-B asked the court to force Warner to sell out its interest to K-B on the comparatively favorable terms set out in the 1945 contract.

McGuire denied the K-B suit on his own motion, introducing the conspiracy element into the case as a new matter. He had asked all lawyers on the case to submit briefs on this point if they wanted, but they decided the point was not substantial enough to require briefs. Nonetheless, McGuire used it as the basis for his decision.

"What the plaintiffs seek here," he said, "is to enforce the terms of an agreement which is part and parcel of what has been held by the Supreme Court to be an unlawful combination in restraint of trade and illegal per se. In such a case the aid of the court is denied. All the parties in the case are hoist with their own petard."

The brief one-and-a-half page opinion did not specify in what case the Supreme Court has made its ruling, but the implication was that it was the Paramount case. Lawyers here admitted the decision only confused them.

McGuire said his decision left Warner to comply with the consent judgment—but did not say how. Apparently Warner can go ahead and get out of the MacArthur as it determines best—sell out to the K-B, sell to a third party, dissolve the jointly-owned corporation.

The precedent in the McGuire decision would be that in any case where there was a suspicion that a major and an independent were restraining competition by their joint operation of a theatre, no contract providing terms for dissolving the joint venture could be enforced in any Federal court.

Robert Sher, attorney for K-B, admitted he was astounded by McGuire's ruling, and intended to appeal.

McGuire applied the same yardstick to another issue in the case. The 1945 contract said the two partners would contract with the Kass Realty Corp. for another theatre. Warner refused to accept the K-B site, and K-B refused to accept the Warner site for the new theatre, and Kass asked the court to rule which of the two should go through with the contract. If the court said neither, Kass argued, it should get $100,000.

McGuire dismissed the Kass motion, again saying the entire contract was illegal and could not be enforced in Federal courts but adding that K-B could not designate a site without Warner and that by terms of the Paramount consent decree, Warner could not go ahead with a new theatre either alone or with K-B.

patronizing a casino at Wiesbaden, Germany, in 1860. Peck plays the part of a famous writer who is attracted to the place by Miss Gardner, beautiful, corrupt daughter of a decadent Russian nobleman who has pledged her to Douglas, the casino owner, to cover forged checks. Morgan, as an intellectual whose devotion to roulette leads to suicide, Miss Barrymore as the girl's grandmother who dies at a table, and Miss Moorehead, as a pawnshop proprietress, contribute individually and collectively strong portrayals in a series of fascinating, excitingly suspenseful events which bring complete moral and economic destruction to Peck.

Producing on a grand scale by Gottfried Reinhardt, and directed with great skill and keen sense of values by Robert Siodmak, the picture is the first modern treatment of this theme to score its points coldly and to reach a logical conclusion with head-on impact, providing vital entertainment and begging no issues while doing so. Performances are so evenly matched that the over-all effect is complete realism. The attraction warrants all-out exploitation and promises impressive returns in all situations.

CEA Video Ban

In taking that action the CEA delegates went counter to recommendations made to them by W. R. Fuller, general secretary of the organization. Fuller, foreseeing a break in the British industry's united stand thus far on withholding films from BBC television programs, proposed an interim policy whereby pictures of a specified age, 10 years, for example, could be made available to BBC for a one year experimental period.

Fuller warned that if the BBC is unable to do business with the industry as a whole eventually it will deal with one or two interests, regardless. It is assumed he had in mind J. Arthur Rank and Associated British Pictures Corp., whose large screen television plans are well advanced.

CEA's negative resolution, however, was tempered by a later agreement to appoint a 10-man committee to evolve a long term television policy for the organization. The committee presumably would be in a position to ultimately adopt at least the principles of Fuller's proposals.

The general council also approved formation of the proposed joint CEA-British Film Producers Association standing committee.

Speaking before the theatre owners while ballots were being counted, Benjamin Berger, president of North Central Allied, warned that theatre earnings could be expected to drop another 10 or 15 per cent before the curve turned upwards again.

Sam Shain, 20th Century-Fox, New York, assured owners that a more liberal policy would be in effect in releasing films in the future. In particular, Shain said each film would be rated and evaluated in the territory in which it was to be shown rather than in the home office.

tive director Gael Sullivan told the opening session of the meeting yesterday that the industry needs "film vision" to meet the challenge of television. He called upon all branches of the industry to display the same "ingenuity and confidence" that was shown when sound films, radio, records and other innovations came on the scene.

"Our industry," Sullivan said, "has barely scratched the surface of its potential to bring entertainment to millions throughout the world." He declared that better production, better showmanship and better theatres mean better box-office. "The facts are simple, but the job ahead will require all the vigilance and stamina we can muster," the TOA executive told the gathering.

Fifty-four delegates had registered by the opening of the two-day convention, and New Mexico Governor Thomas J. Mabry was among the first session's guests.

NMTA president Miles Hurley yesterday called on New Mexico's exhibitors to present a united front to all legislative and business problems. Secretary Russell Hardwick reported that NMTA now represents 33,551 theatre seats, or 89.3 per cent of the seats in the state, or all but five full-time situations.

Sullivan will leave tomorrow for Los Angeles to make plans for the national meeting opening September 12.
